Interlocutory Order-Jurisdiction.]-A suit having been brought against a clerk in the Court of Arches, under the Church Discipline Act, a sentence of suspension for six months was pronounced against him on the 9th of March, 1878, but was made conditional on an affidavit being filed. Afterwards the affidavit was filed, and an unconditional sentence was pronounced on the 23rd of March, and served on the defendant. A fresh suit was instituted in 1880 for fresh offences, and also for contumacious disobedience to the sentence of the 23rd of March, 1878. These offences being proved, the defendant was sentenced to be deprived of his bene-This sentence was pronounced by the Dean of Arches in committee room E. of the House of Lords, A motion for a prohibition having been brought to restrain the Court of Arches from enforcing the sentence :- Hold, first, that the sentence of the 9th of March was an interlocutory order which did not end the suit, and therefore the court was not functus officio when it pronounced the unconditional sentence of suspension. — Operation of ]—A decree of suspension pronounced in the Arches Court, and regularly enforced, against a clergyman, operates for the time of its endurance in the same manner as if he was dead or absolutely removed from his benefice. Bunter or Fisher v. Cresswell, 14 Q. B. 28.5; 19 L. J., Q. B. 35.7; 14 Jun 53.7.

When a clergyman has been suspended a officio et a beneficio, he is not entitleit to any of the profits of the benefice, and cannot recover them by action during the continuance of the suspension, although no sequestration may have issued. — What Sentence must Show.]—When a seutence of suspension is pronounced under 3 k 4 Vict. c. 88, the sentence need not show on its face that seven days' notice of the execution of the commission was given, as required by s. 4, or that the inquiry was in public, or that the other provisions of the statute as to the preliminary proceedings, with which the bishop pronouncing the sentence has not been personally concerned, have been strictly observed. Ib.

Certificate of Conduct of Clergyman during.] — Where a beneficial clergyman, charged with an offence by the report of commissioners under 3 & 4 Vict. a. 88, s. 5 consists to abide the judgment of the bishop without further proceedings, and is thereingon sentenced to suspension from the functions and emoluments of his office for a term of years, the bishop may lawfully make it a part of such sentence that, when the term expires, the sispended party shall produce a certificate of his good behaviour during such term, under the haulsof three beneficed clergymen in his vicinity, such certificate to be approved of by the bishop before the suspension be taken off, and that the suspension shall continue, notwithstanding the expiration of the term, until such approval. A judge has no discretion while finding a defendant guilty of ecclesiastical offences, to absolve him from all ecclesiastical censure or punishment for those offences, but should pronounce that which he considers to be an appropriate sentence. #### 11. RESIGNATION.

Pension of Retired Clergyman-Under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 44.]—The pension allowed to a retiring clergyman is, under the Incumbents' Resignation Act, 1871 (reversing judgment of Lord Coleridge, C.J.) inalienable, and therefore a judgment debt due from a retired elergyman to his successor cannot, in an action for arrears of pension, be set off against the arrears, and the plaintiff is entitled to a separate and independent judgment for the arrears due. Gathercole v. Smith (No. 2), 50 L. J., Q. B. 681; 7 Q. B. D. 626; 45 L. T. 106; 29 W. R. 577; 45 J. P. 812— C. A.

"Net Annual Value" of Benefice. Under ss. S and 11 of the Incumbents' Resignation Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 44), the amount of the retiring incumbent's pension is to be fixed with reference to the net annual value of the benefice at the date of the incumbent's resignation; and, having been once fixed, it is not liable to subsequent alteration in consequence of a diminution in the net annual value of the benefice through agricultural depression, or through the formation of a part of the parish into a district chapelry. Deed of Validity.]—It is not essential to the validity of a deed of resignation of an ecclesiastical benefice that it should be made by the clerk before a notary public; the bishop can dispense with that formality and accept a resignation made by a deed duly executed, and sent to him by the clerk. The resignation of a tial offences, and the former disobedience be benefice is not void, because it is made at the request of the bishop in order to avoid scandal and legal proceedings. Reichel v. Ozford. (Bishop), 56 L. J., Ch. 1023; 35 Ch. D. 48; 56 L. T. 539; 36 W. R. 307—C. A. Affirmed, 59 L. J., Ch. 66; 14 App. Cas. 250; 61 L. T. 131; 54 J. P. 101—H. L. (E.)

> Acceptance of Condition. ]-It is not necessary that the bishop's acceptance of a resignation should be in writing, and no particular form is necessary; and if the resignation is sent in at the bishop's request, no further acceptance is required. Though the resignation of a benefice must (except in the case of an exchange) beabsolute, not conditional, it is perfectly legal for the bishop to fix a future time at which the resignation, when accepted by him, shall come into actual operation by his declaring the bene-fice vacant. If the bishop, in accepting the resignation of a benefice, agrees to postpone the declaration of the vacancy in order to enable the clerk to receive the next accruing payment of tithe vent-charge, this does not render the resignation invalid as having been made for a pecuniary consideration. Ib.

> Revocation of, before Acceptance.]-A clerk. who has tendered his resignation to the bishop cannot withdraw it, even before acceptance, it in consequence of the tender, the position of any party has been altered; e.g. if the bishop has been thereby induced to abstain from commencing proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court for the deprivation of the clerk.—Per North, J. Ib.

> Privity between Incumbent and Patron—Estoppel.]—An incumbent who comes into a beuefice is a privy in law to the patron who appointed him, so as to be entitled to the benefit, and subject to the burden, of the same estoppel as the patron. Where, therefore, the question of the effectuality of a resignation has been raised and disposed of in a former action brought by a clerk, to which the patrons were parties, as he would be estopped from raising that question again in any proceedings between himself and the patrons, he is also estopped from raising the same question as a defence against an incumbent appointed in his place, who, as being a privy in law to the patrons, is entitled to take advantage of the same estoppel, and such a defence may be struck out as frivolous and vexatious. Magrath v. Reichel, 57 L. T. 850.

> Right to Emblements. ]—A parson who resigns his living is not entitled to emblements. Bulwer v. Bulwer, 2 B. & Ald. 470; 21 R. R. 358.

He subsequently abandoned the intention of relinquishing his office:—Held, that the involment might be vacated. Clergyman, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 260; L. R. 15 Eq. 154; 21 W. R. 241.

III. CONVOCATION AND CANONS.

Authority.]-The canons of 1603, not being confirmed by parliament, do not proprio vigore bind the laity, and there is no canon since 1603 which can bind a layman, though made in full convocation. The clergy, however, are bound by canons confirmed by the king only, though the confirmation of parliament is necessary to bind a layman. Yet canons that have been allowed by general consent within the realm, and are not repugnant to the laws, shall still be in force as the king's ecclesiastical laws. parliamentary confirmation to bind the laity has existed ever since the Reformation. Maddictory. Crafts, 2 Atk. 650 (Append.); Ca. t. Hardw. 67; 2 Stra. 1056; 2 Barn. K. B. 361; 2 Kel. 148. No new laws can be made to bind the whole people but by the king, with the advice and con-sent of both houses of parliament, and by their united authority. Ib.

Every man may be said to be party to, and the consent of every subject is included in, an act of parliament; but in canons made in convocation, and confirmed by the Crown, all these are wanting except the royal assent. Ib.

In the convocation the whole clergy of the province are either present in person or by repre-

The binding force of aucient canons over laymen was derived from the supreme legislative power being vested in the person of the emperors. In England it is otherwise, where the king has but part of the legislative power. Ib.

Ever since the Reformation the rule has been, that where any ordinances have been made to bind the laity as well as the clergy in matters merely ecclesiastical, they have been either enacted or confirmed by parliament. Ib.

The power of the convocation to ordain eanons co-extensive with the judicial authority of their courts is full of mischief, and cannot be contended for with a shadow of reason or law.

Ib.

The Acts of Uniformity, &c., since the Reformation show that parliament, from that period, has been of opinion that the power of making constitutions in ecclesiastical matters to bind the whole nation, was in them; and it is clear from 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, that both the king and the clergy thought it necessary to have the authority of parliament for abrogating part of authority of parliament for derogating part of the ancient canons, and establishing such part as was to remain in force. Ib.

In the Prior of Leed's Case (20 Hen. 6, c. 12),

Under Clerical Disabilities Act, 1870-Revoca- | be bound, but they cannot do anything which that which is spiritual, as to ordain fasting days and holidays, and they are only spiritual judges.

That Newton, in the opinion he gave on the That Newton, in the opinion he gave on such power of the convocation, means temporal persons as well as things, is plain by the opposition of it to ceux de Sainte Eglise, which works signify the persons, not the matter or right, of holy church. Ib.

When the case of the Abbot of Waltham came before all the judges in the exchequer chamber, Vavasor said, the power of convocation does not extend over the temporal rights of the clergy themselves, and the abbot's claim of exemption from collecting tenths being a temporal right, he thought a clerk was not bound. Ib.

At an assembly of Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, the lords of the council and all judges of England, in the Star Chamber, it was held that privations of Puritan ministers by the High Commission Conrt were lawful. Ib. In Davis's Cuse (5 Geo. 1, C. B.), Lord Chief Justice King said, it was the prevailing opinion the canons did not bind the laity without an act of parliament, there being none to represent them in convocation. Ib.

Said at the end of the case Bird v. Smith (Moore, 781), to have been resolved, that the canons of the church made by the convocation and the king, without the parliament, bind in all matters ceclesiastical as well as an act of parliament. But this case is no authority. Ib

No colour of law to say that every bishop in his dioeese, archbishop in his province, and the honse of convocation in the nation, may make canons to bind within their limits. Ib.

Whatever may be the power of convocation to bind the whole realm in matters ecclesiastical, it is nowhere said in this case they can bind the laity. Ib.

Lord Chief Justice Vaughan of opinion, a lawful canon is a law of the kingdom as much as an act of parliament. In the case of Grove v. Elliot (Vent. 41), Mr. Justice Tyrrell held, the king and convocation, without the parliament, cannot make canons to bind the laity. Lord Chief Justice Vaughan said, in this case, that the convocation, with the assent of the king under the Great Seal, may make canons for the regulation of the church, as well concerning laicks as ecclesiastics. This difference of opinion, and the other two judges declaring no opinion on the question, greatly weakens the authority. The opinions of Newton, Coke, Tyrrell, Holt, and King, and the answer of the judges in the Star-Chamber, must prepondente against the singleopinion of Vaughan. Ib.

The canons of 1603 have not been allowed and received so as to form part of the law of England, and bind the laity as well as clergy. (Bishop) v. Marshall, 37 L. J., C. P. 331; L. R. 3 H. L. 17; 18 L. T. 376. Affirming, 10 W. R. 390.—Ex. Ch.

But even if binding on the clergy, then the 39th canon of 1603 applies only to the institution of a presentee to a benefice. Ib.

The 48th canon of 1603 does not apply to a it was laid down that the ordinary, bis con-rocation, had power to make constitutions per person seeking to be admitted as a curate to an vincial, by which ceux de Sainte Egilse shall citating benefice. 10. Canons—Binding Effect.]—The canons which colony which has an established legislature, and have not the authority of an act of parliament are | where no church is established by law. Is that as not binding on laymen. More v. More, 2 Atk. 158.

The canons must be pursued with the utmost exactness by ecclesiastical persons; and a clergyman who presumes to marry a person out of the parishes in which the man and the woman reside is liable to penalties. Ib.

Questions of Tithe.]—The canonical constitutions of ecclesiastical synods have no binding force or authority in this kingdom in questions of tithes between the clergy and laity in courts of law without acquiescence evidenced by usage. Evans v. George, 12 Price, 76. S. C., nom. Erans v. Rove, M'Cle. & Y. 577.

- Dean and Assessors. ]-By the 21st canon it is cnacted, that "the dean, in causes which shall be handled in court, shall ask the advice and opinion of the ministers who shall be prehave no voice in the decision of the court, which rests with the dean or commissary alone. Jersey (Dean) v. Parish of - (Rector), 3 Moore P. C.

Convocation—Mandamus to President.]—The Archbishop of York as president of the convocation of his province having decided that a candidate who had been elected to represent an archdeaconry in the Lower House was disqualified :-Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to grant a mandamus commanding the archbishop to a manusmus communing the arenosnop to admit the candidate to convocation. Reg. v. York (Archbishop), 57 L. J., Q. B. 896; 20 Q. B. D. 740; 59 L. T. 443; 36 W. R. 718; 52 J. P. 709.

IV. COLONIAL CHURCH.

Position of Church of England. ]-The Church Position of Church of England, —The Church of England, in places where there is no church established by law, is in the same situation as any other religious body, and the members may adopt rules for enforcing discipline within their body which will be binding on those who expressly or by implication have assented to them. Cape Them (Bishop) v. Long, 1 Moore, P. C. (S. 83, 411; 2 N. R. #45; 9 Jur. (S. 8.) 805; 8 L. T. 738; 11 W. R. 900.
Where any religious or other lawful association has not only agreed on the terms of its union, but has also constituted a tribunal to union, but has also constituted a tribunal to determine whether the rules of the association have been violated by any of its members or not, and what shall be the consequence of such violation, then the decision of such tribunal will be binding when it has acted within the scope of its authority, has observed such forms as the rules require, if any forms be prescribed, and, if not, has proceeded in a manner consonant with the principles of justice. Ib.

That of Voluntary Association.] - The United Church of England and Ireland is no part of the constitution in a colonial settlement, nor can its authorities, or those who bear office in it, claim to be recognised by the law of the colony otherwise than as the members of a voluntary associa-a voluntary association, Colenso v. Gladstone, 36 a voluntary association. Concessor. Granastone, 36 L. J., Ch. 2; L. R. 3 Eq. 1; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 971; 15 L. T. 465; 15 W. R. 29. In the colonies the Anglican church is purely a voluntary association. Natal (Bishop) v. Green, 18 L. T. 112.

- South Africa. - The church of the province of South Africa is not a church in connection with the Church of England as by law established. Although there are in the articles of the constitution of the church of the province of South Africa general expressions affirming in the strongest way the connection of the church of the province with the Church of England, yet by the proviso in the said articles to the effect that in the interpretation of such faith and doctrine it is not bound by the decisions of the tribunals of the Church of England, it is practically declared that the connection is not maintained. In a suit by the Bishop of Graham's Town (one of the dioceses of the church of the province) against the officiating minister in possession of the church of St. George in Gra-ham's Town, whereby the defendant, a member of the church of the province, subject to its constitution and canons, and to the episcopal jurisdiction of the plaintiff, had been found guilty of contumacions disobedience, suspended from his ministerial functions until he should engage not to repeat the offence of preventing the bishop from preaching or ministering in the church of St. George, and finally excommunicated; it appeared that the church of St. George had been duly dedicated to ecclesiastical purposes in connection with the Church of England as by law established, and for no other purposes:—Held, that the plaintiff had no right in the said church of St. George, and that his suit must be dismissed. Marriman v. Williams, 51 L. J., P. C. 95; 7 App. Cas. 484; 47 L. T. 51—P. C.

Rights of Crown.]—The prerogative of the Crown to present to a benefice in England, avoided by the promotion of the incumbent to a bishopric in England, does not extend to present to a benefice in England which becomes vacant on the promotion of the incumbent to a colonial bishopric within the Queen's dominions, created solely by the preogative of the Crown. Rey, v. Etcn. College, 8 EL & Bl. 610; 27 L. J., Q. B. 132; 4 Jur. (x.s.) 335; 6 W. R. 72.

After an independent legislature is established in a colony, the Crown cannot by its prerogative establish a metropolitan see or province, or create an ecclesiastical corporation, whose status, rights, and authority the colony can be required to recognise. Natal (Bishop), In ve. 3 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 115; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 353; 12 L. T. 188; 13 W. R. 549.

Nor has the Crown in such circumstances power to confer any jurisdiction, or coercive legal authority, upon the metropolitan over the suffragan bishops, or over any other person. Ib.

Rights of Bishop of. |-When a bishop takes an oath of obedience to another bishop as his metropolitan, thinking erroneously that such latter bishop has been legally invested with the the control of the Church of England in a life position of the Church of England in a receive such a voluntary or consensual jurisdiction. Natal (Bishop), In re. 3 Moore P. C. (N.S.) 115; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 353; 12 L. T. 188; 13 W. R.

The oath of canonical obedience does not mean that the clergyman will obey all the commands of his bishop, against which there is no law, but that he will obey all such commands as the bishop by law is authorised to impose. Cape Town (Hishop) v. Long, 1 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 411; 2 N. R. 465; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 805; 8 L. T. 738; 11 W. R. 900.

Where a colonial bishop, without the consent either of the Crown or of the colonial legislature, convened an assembly which he alleged to be a synod, and by which acts and constitutions were passed purporting to bind members of the Church of England in the colony, whether they assented to them or not, in respect as well of some temporal as spiritual matters:—Held, that whether the bishop had authority to assemble a synod or not, the meeting convened was in no sense a synod, and the acts which it purported to declare were clearly illegal. Ib.

The bishop of Jamaica is empowered by letters rectors, &c., according to the laws and canons of the Church of England. The rector of a parish in Jamaica having declined to enter a marriage in the registry of his parish because it had been solemnised in a place supposed not within the parish, and being required by the bishop to make the entry, did so; but the bishop, nevertheless, proceeded against him for the former refusal, and The judicial committee held suspended him. this to be irregular, and reversed the sentence. Bowerbank v. Jamaica (Bishop), 2 Moore, P. C.

The jurisdiction of the bishop of a see erected in a colony by letters-patent rests only upon ompact, and is to be enforced through the lay tribunals, from which an appeal lies to the sovereign in council. Natal (Bishop) v. Green, 18 L. T. 118.

- Obedience of Dean to Bishop.]-A colonial bishop was excommunicated by a colonial superior of the Anglican church, which excommunication was held by the privy council to be null and void. A dean, appointed by the bishop so alleged to have been excommunicated, refused to recognise his capacity or anthority :- Held, that he could not so refuse whilst he remained a member of the Anglican church in the diocese of such bishop. Ib.

Salary of Bishop.]-A fund had been formed, and vested in trustees, for the endownment of bishoprics of the Church of England in the colonies. C. had been appointed bishop, and his see created, by letters patent, in a colony possessing at the time a legislative constitution. payment of his salary out of the fund. Colonso Moore, P.C. function of a bishop as that the failure of the letters-patent to create such a jurisdiction will deprive the bishop of his right to receive the income of a trust fund appropriated to the endownment of a bishopric founded by letterspatent, professing to create such a jurisdiction. Natal (Bishop) v. Green, 18 L. T. 112.

Contract to pay Salary to Bishop.]-Specific performance of a contract to pay a salary to a bishop in a colony was enforced, though the contributors to the salary may have intended to support a bishop with coercive jurisdiction over his elergy, and subject to coercive jurisdiction of his metropolitan. Ib.

Division of Diocese-Ejectment.]-In 1850 a piece of land in the colony of Natal was granted by the crown "in freehold to the bishop of Capetown, A., and his successors in the see, in trust for the English church at Pietermasee, in this to the Bigish chirch at Fletchia-ritzburg," in the colony of Natal, and a church was creeted on the land. At the time of the grant, Natal was part of the diocese of Capetown, but was subsequently created a separate see, of which C. was appointed bishop, and the church so erected became the cathedral church of the diocese of Natal. In 1863 A. took possession of the church, and excluded C. from the use of the same :- Held, in an action of ejectment by C. to recover possession of the land, first, that A. had no estate or title in the land so granted. cither as a trustee or otherwise; secondly, that patent to exercise spiritual jurisdiction, to punish C. had a right as against A. to use and have rectors, &c., according to the laws and canons of access to the church; thirdly, that, in an action of ejectment, the supreme court had no power to deal with the actual estate in the land. town (Bishop) v. An advowson is no exception to the general law as to the charitable trusts. The dicta in Att. Gen. v. Purker (1 Ves. sen. 43; 3 Atk. 576); Att.-Gen. v. Forster (10 Ves. 335); Att.-Gen. v. Newcombe (14 Ves. 1), and Att.-Gen. v. Webster (L. R. 20 Eq. 483), considered. Ib.

Descent of Right of Donation.]—The right of donation descends to the heir, and the executor has no title when the testator was seised of the advowson of a donation; otherwise if it had been a presentation benefice. Reppington v. Tamworth School, 2 Wils. 158.

Statute of Frauds.]—Advowsons are rents within Statute of Frauds, but an annuity in fee is not a personal inheritance. Stafford (Earl) v. Buckley, 2 Ves. 177.

7 Anne, c. 18.]—The statute 7 Anne, c. 18, enacting that the interest of the patron of an advowson shall not be displaced by usurpation, is not retrospective. Att.-Gen. v. Lichfield (Bishop), 5 Ves. 828.

Limited Owner.]-An advowson is not part of the inheritance, but fruit fallen, which every owner of the estate for life or years is entitled to. Sherrard v. Harborough, Ambl. 165.

Lunatic Tenant in tail—1 Will. 4, c. 65.]—The twenty-eighth section of the Act 1 Will. 4, c. 65, confers no power to sell the right to the next presentation to a rectory of the advowson of which a lunatic is tenant in tail in possession, except for one of the purposes specified in the section. Varasour, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 275; 20 L. J., Ch. 619.

Appendant to Manor. ]-In 1790, an advowson appendant to a manor was sold and assigned for appendint to a major was soft and assigned for the residue of a term of 500 years, created in the manor and advowson in 1745, and which, except as to the advowson, had ceased:—Held, that this did not sever the appendancy, and that the advowson passed by a subsequent release of the manor with general words. Rooper v. Harrisan, 2 Kay & J. 86.

A grant by Edw. 4 of an advowson having, by the effect of the statute of 10 Hen. 7 (Irish), been repealed, it was held to have become reappended to the manor, to which it was appendant before the grant. Meath (Bishop) v. Winchester (Marquis), 4 Cl. & F. 445; 10 Bh. (N.s.) 330.

When Passing.]—An advowson, although it is an hereditament, and, as being the right of presentation to a church at a particular place, "does concern land at a certain place," is but a right collateral to land, and is not aptly described as "being situate at" a particular place. Such a description, however, may pass an advowson under certain circumstances, e.g. when upon an examination of the whole instrument a clear intention is shown that it shall pass, or upon evidence that there is no other property in that Charity Property.]—An advowson in the city! the instrument. Anon. (3 Dyer, 323, b) and of London was invested in trustees for the benefit Kency v. Langham (Cas. t. Tal. 143) discussed if the parish, the vicar being always chosen by and reconciled. Chempton v. Larvartt, 54 L. J., the parishioners:—Held, to be "charity property" (Ch. 1109, 30 Ch. D. 298; 53 L. Having regard to the recitals, the omission of certain other property, and looking to the whole scope of the deed, an advowson was held not by force of the general words "all other heredita-ments situate in the parish of D.," included in a deed of resettlement. 1b.

Advowson does not pass by livery within view of church without deed, there being incumbent. Pannell v. Hodgson, Cary, 52.

An advowson does not pass by the word tenement." Kensey v. Langham, Forrest, 143. An advowson in gross will pass by the words "tenements" and "hereditaments," but not by the word "lands," and it is assets by descent to satisfy bond creditors. Westfaling v. Westfaling, 3 Atk. 460.

The word "living" is sufficient to pass the advowson, but it may be restricted to the next presentation. The context must determine its meaning. Webb v. Bugay, 2 Kay & J. 669; 4 W.R. 657.

Devise to a minor of "the livings of Q. and C., should be like the profession and be qualified for them":—Held, to show an intention to confer on the devisee a personal benefit; therefore, that the devise was confined to a single presentation, and did not extend to the advowson. Ib.

The commissioners of woods and forests having no power under the statute 57 Geo. 3, c. 97, to make sale of any royalties, honours, hundreds, manors, lordships, or franchises, "or any rights, members, or appurtenances thereof," belonging to the Crown, within the ordering and survey of the exchequer, contracted for the sale of the Crown manor of E., and all courts baron, courts leet, and all fines, reliefs, rents, profits, waifs, strays, deodands, and "all other rights. members, emoluments, and appurtenances thereto belonging":—Held, that this being in effect a contract for sale by the Crown, the advowson of E., which was appended to the manor, did not pass under the contract, and consequently, that the purchaser was bound to take a conveyance of the manor without the advowson. Att. Gen. v. Sitwell, 1 Y. & Coll. 559; 5 L. J., Ex. Eq. 86. Semble, that if the contract had been between subject and subject, the advowson would have passed, although, at the time of the contract, it was not known by either party to be appendant to the manor, and, therefore the sale of it was not in contemplation. Ib.

Sale.]-A conveyance of a fourth part of an advowson in 1672 is not to be deemed voluntary, because the only pecuniary consideration expressed in the deed is 20s.; the court will presume that 20s. would be the full value of the fourth part of an advowson at that time. v. Exeter (Bishop), 5 Bing. 171; 2 M. & P. 266; 7 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 50.

A declaration stated that a deed conveyed the purparty of an advowson. By the deed the whole was conveyed : but it appeared that the person making the conveyance was possessed only of a purparty:—Held, no variance. Gully v. Exeter (Bishop), 4 Bing, 290; 12 Moore, 291; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 178; 29 R. R. 565.

An advowson was sold. After the sale the purchaser found that there was a mortgage on the living in respect of money advanced to build particular place capable of being disposed of by a new parsonage house :- Held, that this did not form a ground for rescinding the contract for the advowson, or for allowing to the purchaser a deduction from the amount of the purchasemoney. Edwards-Wood v. Majoribanks, 7 H. L. Cas, 806; 30 L. J., Ch. 176; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1167; 3 L. T. 222.

— Pur autre via.]—At common law, the purchaser of an estate pur autre vie in an advow-son, may, no less than the purchaser of an advowson, in fee, offer himself to the ordinary, and pray to be admitted on a vacancy occurring; and the bishop, provided only if he is a fit and proper person in holy orders, is bound to institute him, and has no discretion to refuse. Walsh v. Lincoln (Bishop), +4 L. J., C. P. 24+; L. R. 10 C. P. 518; § 2 L. T. 471; 23 W. R. 829.

Purchase in Trust. ]-A father bequeathed 12,000% to trustees to invest the whole or part in the purchase of an advowson; and, until his son should be presented to a benefice producing a net 1,000%, per annum or die, the trustees were to present some fit person to the benefice, the advowson whereof they had purchased, and, subject as aforesaid, were to hold the advowson in trust for the son, his heirs and assigns; and in the meantime, and until such investment, the trustees were to lay out the 12,000l. upon certain securities, and, during twenty-one years from the testator's death, to accumulate the income, and the income of the 12,000l. and the accumulations was, after the twenty-one years (in ease the advowson had not been purchased), to belong to the sou, his executors or administrators; and it the son died or was presented to a benefice of 1,000%, a year before a contract for the purchase of the advowson had been entered into, or if part of the 12,000l, or the accumulations remained after completing such contract, the same was to be paid to the son, his executors or administra-The 12,000%, having been set apart and invested and accumulated, but no advowson having been bought, the son, thirteen years after the testator's death, claimed the entire fund :-Held, that although there was no person who could enforce the trust, yet, as the trustees were willing to carry it out, and could present any fit person they chose to the benefice when they had bought the advowson, the son was not the exclusive object of the trust, and was not entitled to a transfer of the fund. Gott v. Nairne, 3 Ch. D. 278; 35 L. T. 209.

Limitation in Trust.]-By a deed of settlement in 1783, an advowson was limited to Hill and his issue male in strict settlement, "upon this express condition and limitation," that the person who should at any time thereafter be seised of or entitled to the advowson under the deed should from time to time, as the church should become vacant, present a fellow of St. John's College. And on failure of such person presenting as aforesaid, and from and after such failure, the advowson should remain to the use of the master and senior fellows of the college. One of the persons entitled under the deed having suffered a recovery and conveyed the fee simple of the advowson to the defendant's predecessor in title :-Held, that the advowson was limited in trusts, not on condition, and that on failure of the defendant to present a fellow, the gift over took effect in favour of the master and seniors. St. John's College, Cambridge v. Effingham (Earl), 29 L. T. 447; 22 W. R. 125.

Devise.]—Under a devise of manors, lands, &c., to A., his executors, &c., for a term of eleven years, in trust to receive the rents, issues, and profits of the premises that should from the to time accrue and become due, and dispose of the same for the benefit of a certain cestri que trust, A. may, by the directions of the cestni que trust, and for his benefit, assign the advowson of a rectory appendant to a manor, to a purchaser for the said term of eleven years, to intent that purchaser may present for the next turn, in ease of an avoidance before the expiration of term, and in case of such avoidance the purchaser may present accordingly. Albemarle (Lurd) v. Ropers, 7 Bro. P. C. 522.

Devise of lauds, tenements, and hereditaments, subject to a term of cleven years, in trust to receive the rents, issues, and profits of the premises that from time to time should accure and become due, and dispose, &c., an advowson in gross passes, and a sale of the next presentation within term, by direction and for the benefit of the cestri que trust, was established. Ves. 477.

A. devised her real and personal estate to trustees, and directed her advorson of F. to be sold by them immediately after the death of H., the incumbent F-Hell, that although, on H. death, the living must be filled before there could be a sale, still that the court had no anthority to direct the sale of the next presentation in the lifetime of H., for the benefit of the residuary legatees. legatees. Bristow v. Shirmon, 27 Beav. 590. On devise of an advoyan to trustees to be sold on the death of the ineumbent:—Held, that although no sale after his death could be made until the benefice was filled, and a sale in his lifetime would be beneficial to the parties, the court had no jurisdiction to authorise is: Debustone v. Buber, 8 Beav. 293. See also, S. C., 22 Beav. v. Buber, 8 Beav. 293. See also, S. C., 22 Beav. Jur. (v. & J. 195), 4 W. R. 827; post, col. 1150. A. devised real estates (including several advowsons) to trustees, after payment of certain charges out of the rents, to accumulate the surplus rents by way of compound interest, and apply the accumulated fund as therein mentioned. He further directed that, in the event of the rectory of B. becoming vacant, and of his godson C. being in orders and qualified, the trustees should present him to the living. The testator afterwards sold the living of B., and by a codicil he directed that, in the event of his trustees being unable to make any arrangement for presenting his son to the rectory of B., he should be presented to the first of testator's other livings or rectories which should become vacant after he took holy orders and was qualified to hold the same. C. was six years of age:—Held, that the trustees were bound to sell the next presentations to the respective livings from time to time at their discretion, and that they were not prevented from so doing by the direction in the eodicil. Cust v. Middleton, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 709; 8 L. T. 160; 11 W. R. 456.

By a devise of lands and advowsons to trustees to apply the rents, issues, and annual proceeds as directed by the will, the proceeds of the sale of a next presentation are well given to the trustees, and do not pass to the heir-at-law as undisposed of. should take orders; and after their several deceases, or of such of them as should take orders and be presented, or in the event of neither taking orders, she devised the advowson to C. in fee :- Held, that the gifts in favour of A. and B. were in succession and not alternative, and that on the death of A., B. was entitled to be presented. Hatch v. Hatch, 20 Beav, 105; 3 W. R. 354.

A testator having the power of disposing of an advowson (subject to the existing incumbency of A., and a contingent right of B. to be afterwards presented), devised the next avoidance thereof in favour of C. :-Held, that "the next" meant, the next the testator had power to dispose of; viz. that following the incumbency of A.

and of B. Ib.

H. devises his manors, advowsons, &c., to trustees to pay his son 1.000l. for life, and the rest of the profits to be laid out in land during his son's life, and then settled :-Held, the son had a right to present to the living when vacant, not under the devise, but as heir-at-law, it being a fruit undisposed of. Sherrard v. Harberough, Ambl. 365

A., seised in fee, devises his lands and tenements in B. to trustees, to apply part of rents for charitable uses. The testator dies; the church of B. becomes void; the heir-at-law shall present.

Evidence.]—Where there is an old endowment of a vicarage, but the modern usage varies from it, there is ground to presume, that the variance has arisen from the act of persons competent to The endowment is not therefore conclusive evidence in favour of the vicar, but his right is properly triable at law, Carr v. ecclesiastical rectory. Z Price, 483; 20 R. R. 678.

A grant from the Crown of an advowson (excepted in a former grant under general words) will be presumed after a possession, evidenced by title deeds for 133 years, and three presentations. Gibson v. Clark, 1 Jac. & Walk. 159 ; 20 R. R. 266,

Lay. ]-In 1437, an almshouse or a hospital was founded and endowed by a lord of a manor for thirteen poor men, and two priests for praying for souls and the education of youth; and the right of nominating the master was vested in the lord of the manor for the time vested in the form of the manor nor the same being. Previously to 1513, the manor and the rights of patronage became, on the attainder of the lord, forfeited to the Crown. In 1618, James 1, by letters-patent, granted the right of nomination of the master to the University of Oxford, for the support of the Regius Pro-fessor of Medicine, and in 1818, the manor, with all its advantages and endowments, was duly granted by the Crown to B. :-Held, first, that the rights of nomination and visitation, incidental to the manor, did not, upon the forfeiture by attainder, become merged and extinguished, but vested in the Crown. Gen. v. Ewelme Hospital, 17 Beav. 366; 22 L. J., Ch. 846; 1 W. R. 523.

living of S., in case he should take orders; and if Held, secondly, that the property of the hospital he should not, or taking orders should die in the lifetime of B., then to present B., in case he lifetime of B., then to present B., in case he lifetime of monasteries (27 Hen. 8, c. 28, and 31 Hen. 8, c. 13), but remained vested in the Crown as before. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that it was not in any degree affected by the act respecting chantries (1 Edw. 6, c. 14), so as to vest the property in the Crown as its quasi private possessions. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the founder, by annexing the right of nomination to the manor, could not make and had not made them inseparable; but that the right of patronage was in the nature of a lay advowson, which the lord might alien without parting with the manor, and the converse. Ib.

Held, fifthly, that by the grant of James to the University of Oxford, the jus patronatus had, de facto, been severed from the manor. Ib.

Held, sixthly, that by the common law, the grant of a manor by the king, cum pertinentibus, would pass an advowson appendant to it, and that the 17 Edw. 2, c. 15, created a restriction as to advowsons of churches only, and did not apply to a lay advowson. Ib.

Compensation on Abolition in Ireland. ]testator made a devise of advowsons in Ireland. The Irish Church Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Viet. c. 42), was afterwards passed abolishing advowsons and giving their owners a right to compensation. The testator after the passing of the act made a codicil to his will and then died. Compensation for the advowsons was claimed on behalf of the devisee, and was ascertained and made payable to the executors of the testator :- Held, that the eompensation-money was payable to the executors of the testator, and not to the devisee of the advowsons. Frewen v. Frewen, L. R. 10 Ch. 610; 33 L. T. 43; 23 W. R. 864.

2. Presentation.

Meaning of ]-On the division of an old parish into three by act of parliament, it was provided "that the right of patronage and presentation to the said three churches should belong to a dean and chapter and their snccessors for ever, in such manner as the presentation to the rectory of the old parish did belong to them, and not otherwise." Upon a nomination-by them to one new parish, without a presenta-tion to the ordinary for institution:—Held, that the rectory was presentative, and not a donative, and that the word "presentation" is a known term of law, and when spoken of a benefice with cure, imports the patron's presenting his clerk to the ordinary to be admitted and instituted. Shirt v. Curr, 2 Bro. P. C. 173.

Legal Right.]—The right of a patron to pre-sent to a benefice is a legal right, subject in its exercise to the bishop's right to examine into the fitness of the presentee, and to reject him for sufficient ground. Exeter (Bishop) v. Marshall, 37 L. J., C. P. 331; L. R. 3 H. L. 17; 18 L. T. 376. Affirming, 10 W. R. 390—Ex. Ch.

By Parol.]—Presentation to a church, or commation to a perpetual curacy, may be by nomination to a perpetual curacy, may parol. Att. Gen. v. Brereton. 2 Ves. 425.

When Passing.] — Devise of surplus rents and profits carries a right of presentation. Sherrard v. Harborough, Ambl. 165.

Contract for Purchase as against Devisee.] | full, is not simoniacal by reason of the incum-Party having contracted with person since deceased, for purchase of advowson, but had taken no steps during lifetime of vendor to enforce the contract, and for a considerable time after her death (objecting to title on ground of outstanding judgments, and a creditor's bill pending).—Held, not entitled as against a devisee to present if a vacancy occur in the meantime, though he insists on having contract completed. And if, in consequence of his insisting on such right, a bill becomes necessary to ascertain the true claim to the next presentation, which is thereby put in danger of lapse, a decree in favour of plaintiff will carry costs as far as his claim came in question, although it be part of decree that subject to next presentation he be permitted to complete his contract. Wyrill v. Exeter (Bishap of), 1 Price, 292; 16 R. R. 727.

Sale void as against Remainderman.]—A., tenant for life, and B., a mortgagor (not in possession), sell the next presentation to a church to C., who takes a covenant from A., that if he cannot present, she, her executors, &c., shall repay him the purchase-money. This grant is void as against the remainderman, and the purchaser shall recover his money from the administrators of the tenant for life. Dymoke v. Hobart, 1 Bro. P. C. 108.

Revocation of ]-A. contracts with B. for the purchase of an advowson at a certain price, and a conveyance is accordingly executed. There being afterwards some suspicion of fraud on the part of A., B. files his bill to set aside the conveyance on that ground. Pending the suit, the church becomes vacant, and both parties present, but neither of their clerks is instituted. wards a compromise takes place, and B., consideration of a further snm, executes a deed of confirmation, and also an instrument revoking his presentation; but upon a question between B,'s clerk and A., it was held that the deed and instrument were not in law a good revocation, but that the clerk of B. was entitled to the benefit of his presentation. Rogers v. Holled, 1 Bro. P. C. 117.

Obtaining by Misconduct. ]—Demurrer allowed to a bill to have a presentation to a living upon the next avoidance delivered up, charging the defendant with gross miscondnet in obtaining it, and in other respects, while a private tutor in the family. M'Namara v. —, 5 Ves. 824.

VI. SIMONY.

Advowson.] — Party purchasing advowson, knowing incumbent was at the time on his death-bed, is not simony. Barret v. Glubb, Dick, 516.

Sale of an advowson during vacancy is not within the statute of simony, but is void at common law. Grey v. Hesketh, Ambl. 268.

A grant of an advowson after the church is actually vacant is void; but no lapse incurs till after induction to a second benefice. Salisbury (Bishop) v. Wolforston, 3 Burr. 1504; 2 Wils. 174. S. C., nom. Lincoln (Bishop) v. Wollaston, 1 W. Bl. 440.

An agreement for carrying a former simoniacal contract into effect is not necessarily also simoniacal and void. Greenwood v. London (Bishop), 1 Marsh. 292; 5 Taunt. 727; 15 R. B. 627.

Presentation. ]-The sale of the next presentation, the incumbent being in extrems, within the knowledge of both contracting parties, but without the privity or a view to the nomination of the particular clerk, is not void on the ground or the particular ciers, is not void on the ground of simony. Pax v. Chester (Bishap), 1 Dow & Cl. 416; 3 Bligh (N.S.) 123; 6 Bing, 1; 34 R. R. 23. Overruling S. C., 4 D. & R. 93; 2 B. & C. 635.

In a suit instituted against a clergyman by the secretary to the bishop of the diocese, it was proved that he had been guilty of simony, by reason of his having corruptly and simoniacally obtained presentation and institution to his vicarage, and also of conduct unbecoming a clergyman in unlawfully threatening a certain person to publish a libel upon him with the intent of extorting money. The court founding its sentence, in respect of the offence of simony, upon the general ecclesiastical as well as statute law, pronounced that he was a disabled person in law to have the vicarage, and that the presentation thereto, and his admission and institution thereupon, were void and frustrate, and of no effect in law, and, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, the offence of misconduct as well as that of simony, it further pronounced upon him a sentence of deprivation from the ministry and from the performance of all clerical functions whatsoever in the province of Canterbury, and condemned him in the costs of the suit. And it directed the registrar to apprise the Queen's proeter of the sentence in order that her majesty might exercise her right of presentation to the vacant benefice given by 12 Anne, stat. 2, c. 12. Lee v. Merest. 39 L. J., Eec. 53; 22 L. T. 420.

The patron was called as a witness in the suit, and was required to produce the deed of conveyance to him of the advowson of the vicarage in respect of the presentation to which the simony had been committed. It was admitted, that the deed was in court, but the witness declined to produce it on the ground that it was a title-deed. The court notwithstanding ordered its production. Ib.

An induction upon a simoniacal presentment is void against the presentee of the Crown, who upon being inducted may maintain ejectment il and void. Greenwood v. London (Bishop), Marsh. 292; 5 Taunt. 727; 15 R. R. 627.

In an action for use and occupation by an entered into when rector was presented, will not incumbent against a tenant of the glebe lands, who has paid him rent, the defendant cannot give evidence of a simoniacal presentation of the plaintiff, in order to avoid his title.

Loxley, 5 Term Rep. 4; 2 R. R. 521.

In an action for penalties under 31 Eliz. c. 6. for a simoniacal contract to present, the declaration alleged a contract by the clerk to buy the advowson, if he was presented to the living, and a presentation in pursuance of such contract : Held, that the proof of presentation was essential to the action, and that for that purpose it was not enough to shew that the defendant prepared a presentation, and tendered it to the bishop's secretary, but which never was in fact used or acted upon, the clerk having been afterwards instituted on his own petition as equitable owner of the advowson. A contract by T., a clerk in holy orders, to indemnify W., who claimed the right of presentation to a living, against the costs of a litigation to establish that right, provided that W., in case of success, should present T. to the living, is a corrupt agreement, and cannot be enforced. Semble, it partakes both of the nature of champerty and maintenance. Littledale v. Thompson,

4 L. R., Ir. 43.

The plaintiff, who was incumbent and patron of a living, put the rectory into repair, and, with the sanction of the bishop of the diocese, let it to a tenant for a certain period. Before the termination of the tenancy the plaintiff resigned the living, and presented the defendant thereto. The presentation was made upon an understanding and agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant that the defendant should, in consideration of having received the benefit of the said repairs, hand over to the plaintiff any rent which he should receive in respect of the said tenancy between the date of the presentation and the termination of the tenancy :- Held, a simoniacal agreement, and the presentation therefore void under 31 Eliz. c. 6. Mosse v. Killich, 50 L. J., Q. B. 300; 44 L. T. 149; 29 W. R. 522.

A lay patron may revoke his presentation, and such revocation cannot be void for simony.

Rogers v. Holled, 2 W. Bl. 1039.

Resignation Bonds.]—Bond to resign in favour of patron's nephew when of age. At that time, instead of insisting on resignation, incumbent agrees to pay 30l, per annun for seven years, and stops. Patron restrained from suing on bond, but incumbent left to his remedy at law to recover back money paid. Peele v. Cupel, 1 Stra. 534.

Though bonds of resignation are not prohibited by law, yet if they are made use of to extort money from the incumbent, or to turn him out for anything but ill behaviour or immorality, equity will grant an injunction against him. Hawkins v. Turner, Pre. Ch. 513.

Bonds for resignation held good where no improper use was made of them. Steeper v.

Carner, 2 Eq. Abr. 183.

Bill to compel rector to resign in favour of Held, also, that the contract was not simoniacal another in pursuance of contract for that purpose or invalid. Ib.

Newdigate v. Helps, 6 Madd, 133,

Before the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 25, and the 9 Geo. 4. e. 94, a general bond of resignation upon request given previously to presentation, was good; and if unattended with any illegality, which, if it existed, must be plainly alleged and fully proved, was not sufficient ground for the ordinary to refuse admission. London (Bishop) v. Fytche, 2 Bro. P. C. 211. A bond, reciting that the patron of a rectory had by an instrument of the same date presented an incumbent, and that he had agreed to resign upon request of the patron, or the owners of the advowson for the time being, for the purpose of enabling him or them to present one of the two vounger brothers of the patron when capable of holding, was simoniacal and void, on the ground that such an agreement was a benefit to the M. & Rob. 363.

Where excentor or trustee, entrusted with the disposition of some church preferments, made at 1 mg/centering to 31 Eliz, c. 6, and, semble, the common law. Fitecher v. Soules (Lord) were constraint of some church preferments, made at 1 mg/centering to 3 mg/centering 5 B. & Ald. 835.

A bond given by an incumbent to the patron, on presentation, to reside on the living, or to resign if he did not return to it after notice, and also not to commit waste on the parsonage house, is good. Bagshaw v. Bossley, 4 Term Rep. 78.

A bond given to an incumbent, securing him an annuity of equal value with the profits of the another may be presented, who might give a general bond of resignation, so that the patron's son, when of proper age, might be presented, was a bond within 31 Eliz. c. 6, s. 8, and void. Young v. Jones, 3 Dougl. 97.

Action on a general bond of resignation; bill for discovery, whether the advowson was not sold with promise to procure an immediate resignation. Demurrer, the discovery overruled. Grey v. Hesketh, Ambl. 268.

Dilapidations.]—An agreement by two incumbents to exchange their livings in their present state, and that one of them shall not call on the state, and that offee of them shall not call on the other to pay for repairs, is not necessarily simoniacal. Goldham v. Edwards, 16 C. B. 437; 24 L. J., C. P. 189; I Jun, (N.S.) 684; 3 W. R. 551, S. P. and S. C., 17 C. B. 141. Affirmed in error 18 C. B. 389; 25 L. J., C. P. 223; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 493; 4 W. R. 550—Ex. Ch.

Semble, if the dilapidations in each living are nearly equal, an agreement mutually to forego the amount would not be simoniacal. Ib. the amount would not be simoniacal.

So, if the dilapidations in one living were of an insignificant amount, an agreement that the incoming incumbent should forego such amount would not be simoniacal. Ib.

If facts are pleaded which show that an agreement relied on must necessarily be simoniaeal, it need not be alleged that the agreement was made corruptly, in order to bring it within 31 Eliz. c. 6, s. 8. Ib.

After the passing of the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act of 1871, an agreement was entered into by two incumbents for the exchange of the livings they then held, and one term of such agreement was, that neither party should make any claim upon the other for dilapidations :-Held, that the agreement was not in contravention of the above act. land, 2 Ves. & B. 150.

Bill by an ecclesiastical rector against an occupier for an account of tithes. The defendant by his answer not only insisted on a modus, but alleged that the plaintiff was simoniacally presented, and stated certain facts as evidence thereof. The occupier afterwards filed his cross-bill against the rector, to establish the modus, and for a discovery of various matters with reference to the purchase of the advowson by the rector's father, and the calculations made of the value of the tithes and moduses; a lease alleged to have been granted by the preceding incumbent to the rector's father; and the collection of the tithes and moduses by the plaintiff and his father during the incumbency of the preceding vicar. The rector, by his answer, stated that the matters charged by the occapier's bills, and to which he objected to make answer, would, if confessed, furnish evidence or lead to evidence in support of the charge of simony, or would aid the proof of the charge, and would subject the defendant to the forfeiture and penalties. Exceptions being taken to the answer for insufficiency, they were, on argument, overruled, on the ground that a party protecting himself from a discovery which may subject him to a penalty, is not bound to answer a single link in the chain of evidence. , 1 Younge, 308.

A mortgages a manor (to which an advowson was appendant) in fee to B.; then A. presents C. by simony, and C., being for that reason refused by the bishop, A. presents D., who is admitted, &c., but after resigns, and is again presented by A. and B.; the relator having got an assignment of the king's title for the simony, brings his quare impedit, and a bill, in this court, that the mortgage may not be set up, nor given in evidence Jurisdiction — Church Discipline Act, 1840.] - Proceedings against a clerk for the offence of simony cannot be taken under the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, as the scope of that act is confined to such criminal acts, conduct and habits as are described in the 75th and 109th canons issued by the Convocation of Canterbury in 1603, and are summed up in the 109th canon "as uncleanness and wickedness of life," In order to punish the offence of simony recourse must still be had to the Church Dicipline Act, 1840. Beneficed Clerk v. Lec, 66 L. J., P. C. 8; [1897] A. C. 226; 75 L. T. 461—P. C.

Declaration against Simony - Clerical Subscription Act, 1865. - The charge of a false declaration against simony made under the Clerical Subscription Act, 1865, cannot be isolated from the charge of simony itself, as it would be necessary to determine whether simony had in fact been committed, and thus an offence would be indirectly tried which could not be tried directly. Ib.

VII. EXCHANGE OF LIVINGS.

Practice.]—Plea of simony to bill for tithes, parties, but subsequently fell through. One of ordered to stand for an answer with liberty to the livings was in the meantime filled up by the to accept, as being multifartous. Wood v. Strick-leatron. The late rector brought ejectment against the new rector :-Held, that it would not lie. Rumsey v. Nicholl, 2 C. P. D. 294; 36 L. T. 786; 25 W. R. 614-C. A.

VIII. ENDOWMENT AND AUGMENTATION OF LIVINGS.

Presumption of. ] - Where a rectory was granted by the Crown in 22 Edw. 6, with licence to appropriate, and a direction to appoint a vicar, and endow him with a dwelling-house, and, on the appropriation, to endow him also with a specified annual pension or portion for his food and sustentation; and it appeared that there had been a vicar through all subsequent time, and that such vicar had, for a great number of years back, received from the lessees of the rectory for the time being a larger sum than the pension specified in the grant, but no instrument of endowment, nor evidence of the existence of such, was produced:—Held, that after so long a possession, it might be presumed that an endowment had been made according to the terms of the grant, and that the vicarage had been subsequently augmented. Inman v. Whormby, 1 Y. & J. 545.

Charge on Rectory Impropriate. - The augmentation of vicarage by yearly payment of corn and money out of rectory is a charge on rectory impropriate, into whose hands soever it shall Where a vicar brings bill for arrears of certain annual payments, issuing out of an impropriate rectory, he shall recover against the impropriator, though a considerable time had elapsed between the commencement of the arrears and the impropriator's possession. against him at law, and decreed accordingly, a purchaser, with notice pending such suit, shall Att.-Gen. v. Sudell, Pre. Ch. 214; 2 Vern. 549. Cooke v. Smee, 2 Bro. P. C. 184.

> Under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45.]—By a local act the tithes of a parish were extinguished, and in lieu an annuity was seenred to the vicar, and a remedy was given him for recovering arrears. Subsequently, under another local act, a church was built within the parish, and a district assigned to it under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, and the vicar annexed to this church, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 14, one-sixth part of the annuity:-Held that such annexation was valid within that cnactment. Hughes v. Denton, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 765; 28 L. J., M. C. 140; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 575; 7 W. R. 305.

> By the operation of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, passed in 1856, the church has become a "separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes since that act :- Held, not to prevent it from being capable of an annexation under I & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, it being at the time of the annexation a church to which a district had already been assigned under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, and there being nothing in 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, to alter the nature and character of district churches otherwise than for ecclesiastical purposes. and yearly issuing out of the rectory. The arch-by the name of the parish of K., and constituted bind patterwards leased the rectory to G. for the district or new parish of K. into a perpendat twenty-one years, yielding and paying yearly to cure, and declared that the curate thereof, and twenty-one years, yielding and paying yearly to the archbishop 9l. 13s. 6d., and also 6l. 16s. for redeemed land-tax, and to the perpetual curate 401. On appeal against a poor-rate for the parish in which G. was assessed as occupier of the tithe rent-charge :-Held, that he was not entitled to deduct the 401. paid to the perpetual curate, inasmuch as he was in occupation of the whole tithe rent-charge, including the 40*l. Reg.* v. Grores, 2 El. & El. 793; 29 L. J., M. C. 179; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1014; 8 W. R. 434.

Evidence. ]-An original ancient book containing, amongst other matters concerning a particular see, the entry of the endowment of a vicarage by a former bishop, to whom the rectory was granted by the Crown, with licence to appropriate, and coming from the registry of the diocese, is evidence of the endowment. v. Brownkill, M'Clel. 321; 13 Price, 500.

Ancient entries made by the monks of an abbey, relating to an endowment by them of a vicarage (whether perfect or not), are good evidence (quantum valeant) of their subject-matter; although such entries are mixed with extraneous memoranda, and the book is not confined or appropriated to subjects ejusdem generis; and, being admitted they may be read throughout, for the purpose of proving anything which is material to the issue, provided it is relevant. Bullen v. Michel, 2 Price, 399; 16 R. R. 77.

Proof of a curacy augmented is made by shewing an order for the augmentation of it, entered in a book and signed by the governors, according to 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 10, s. 20, without going on to prove that the money was afterwards laid out in land, and allotted by deed under the corporation seal of the governors of Queen Anne's bounty, to be annexed to the curacy, and that such deed was inrolled within six months after its execution. Doe d. Graham v. Scott, 11 East, 478.

Book from registry of Lincoln, containing inter alia what were called copies of endowments of certain vicarages, was received as evidence of an endowment of vicarages in Northampton, Leonard v. Franklyn, 4 Price, 264.

Rights of Perpetual Curate.]—A perpetual curate of an augmented parochial chapelry has a sufficient possession whereon to maintain an action for breaking and entering the chapel and destroying the pews. Jones v. Ellis, 2 Y. & J. 265; 31 R. R. 589.

— Union of Parishes.]—James 1, by letters patent, granted the rectorial churches and chapels of T. and K., and two parts of the tithes and altarages of the rectory or chapel of C., parcel of the possession of the abbey or monastery of T., in Ireland, the grantee repairing and maintaining the chancel of the churches, rectory and chapels, at his cost, from time to time, for ever, and supporting annually and from time to time paying the stipend of the curates, and all other the rents and services issuing or payable out of or from the premises. In 1641 the church of K. was destroyed, and was not afterwards rebuilt. By an order of the Lord Deputy and Council, in 1678, the parish of K, was united with the parish of A. In 1855 the bishop of the diocese, by a his successor, should be perpetual curates, thenceforth and for ever, of the new parish, and appointed a salary for the perpetual curate; and in 1856 a new church was erected, which was situate in the old parish of K. :-Held, that the curate of the new parish of K. was not entitled to any stipend from the owner of the tithes of K. Att.-Gen, v. Ashe, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 309.

Arrears-Recovery of Full Amount. ]-Where an ecclesiastical augmentation by way of rentcharge which has been granted to a vicar and his successors under 29 Car. 2, c. 8, as extended by the Augmentation of Benefices Act, 1831, is in arrear, the whole amount in arrear is recoverable as a clebt for which the assignce of the land so charged is liable, and is not limited to the extent of any profits which he may have received from the land. Pertwee v. Townsend, 65 L. J., Q. B. 659; [1896] 2 Q. B. 129; 75 L. T. 104.

IX. MODE OF FILLING BENEFICES. .

1. PRESENTATION AND NOMINATION.

a. By the Crown.

Right of Crown.]—The king, by his prerogative, has a right to present to a church which becomes vacant by his promoting the incumbent to a bishopric; but this right must be exercised in the lifetime of the persons promoted, otherwise the king's turn is lost. Armagh (Archbishop) v. Att.-Gen., 2 Bro. P. C. 514.

If, after a grant of the next presentation to a living, the incumbent is made a bishop, by which the living becomes vacant, and the king is entitled to present, the grant is not defeated, but the grantee may present on the next vacancy occasioned by the death or resignation of the king's presentee. Troward v. Calland, 8 Bro. P. C. 71. S. C., nom, Calland v. Troward, 2 H. Bl. 324;

6 Term Rep. 439, 778; 3 R. R. 389. If a bishop, having an advowson in another diocese, present and die before institution, there can be no institution, but it falls to the Crown. So, where a bishop has a right of collation in his own diocese. Potter v. Chapman, Ambl. 101; Dick. 146.

Injunction on filing of bill to stay induction of defendant to living. Ib.

The right of the Crown to present to an English benefice, upon the appointment of the incumbent by the Crown to a bishopric, is not barred by the Crown having, before such appointment, granted the advowson to a subject. Reg. v. Eton College, 8 El. & Bl. 610; 27 L. J., Q. B. 132; 4 Jur. (N.S.)

 On Promotion to Colonial Bishopric.]-See Reg. v. Eton College, ante, col. 1224.

b. By Ecclesiastical Persons.

By Bishop of Diocese.]-Where the right of presentation or nomination to the office of curate or reader fell within the provisions of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 31, and consequently such right, in the case of a vacancy before sale, vested in the deed, executed under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 72, erected bishop of the diocese, under the proviso in the first and a part of the parish of A, into a new district or parish, to be called | 2 Scott (Nal) 394; 2 Man. & C. 71.

—Where an advowson belongs to a prebendary in right of his prebend, and the church becoming vacant, the prebendary dies without having presented, the presentation belongs to his personal representative for that turn, according to the opinion of the six judges out of eight delivered in the House of Lords. Mirehouse v. Rennell, m the House of Loyus. Merenomae v. Remete, 8 Bing. 490; 1 M. & Scott, 683; 7 Bligh (N.S.) 241. Affirming Rennell v. Lincoln (Bishop), 7 B. & C. 113; 9 D. & R. 810; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 320 : 31 R. R. 171.

By Parson Impropriate.]—A parson impropriate shall not have the nomination of the vicar.

Mallet v. Trigg, 1 Vern. 42.

Building and endowing of a church did originally entitle the person to the patronage. Impropriator of a parish has no right to nominate a preacher to every chapel within the parish; it might be a hardship if he should be bound so to do, neither ought it to be at his election. One may build a private chapel for himself and family or for himself and neighbours, or for himself and twenty neighbours, and this will not give the parson a right to nominate a preacher there. Herbert v. Westminster (Dean), 1 P. W. 774.

By Incumbent of Mother Church. ]-The incumbent of the mother church has the right of nominating to chapels of ease, and can only lose that right by agreement between patron, parson and ordinary, and on a compensation made to him. Dixon v. Metcalfe, 2 Eden, 360. S. C. nom. Dixon v. Kershaw, Ambl. 528. S. P., Farnworth v. Chester (Bishop), 7 D. & R. 99; 4 B. & C. 555; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 14; 28 R. R. 390.

By Archbishop's Trustees.]-Archbishop P. devised his options to trustees regard being had in the disposition of them according to their discretion to his eldest son. Dr. P. the husbands of his daughters, his present and former chaplains, &c. :-Held, a personal trust, and the treasurership of C. being vacant, one of the trustees might present the other, he being within the description Potter v. Chapman, Ambl. 98; in the will. Dick. 146.

Surviving trustee could not present himself.

If the bishop from whom the archbishop takes the option dies or is translated before vacancy, the option is lost, semble. Ib.

The executors of the arehbishop cannot present after the death of the bishop, though the vacancy happened in his lifetime; but the presentation falls to the Crown. Ib.

By University.]—The right of presentation given to the universities by 3 Jac. 1, c. 5, ss. 18, 19, 20; 1 Will. & M. c. 26, s. 2; and 12 Anne, st. 2,

By Eleemosynary Hospital.]—In pursuance of an act of Elizabeth the Earl of Leicester by deed founded an eleemosynary hospital, and made it a corporation by the name of the master and brethren of the hospital. By ordinances for the constitution and government of it, he fixed the number of the brethren, who were to be chosen by preference from poor persons disabled in the The appointment of master he vested in his heirs, directing them, however, to appoint, if defendants, were done by them, and that they

By Personal Representation of Prebendary.] | fit, the vicar of a neighbouring church. By deed, he gave to the master and brothren to hold to their use and their successors for ever, lands and possessions, amongst which was the advowson of a vicarage. By several ordinances he vested the government and control of the brethren in the master :- Held, that the master had no veto in the election of a presentee to the vicarage by the majority, and that his concurrence was not necessary to the validity of an election by the majority. Reg. v. Kendall, 4 P. & D. 603; 1 O. B. 366: 10 L. J., Q. B. 137.

> Practice-Acquiescence-Estoppel. ] - Claim : That the plaintiff was vicar of a parish; that a chapel was erected within it, and endowed and consecrated for the administration of the sacraments and the performances of all other divine offices according to the rites of the Church of England; that the plaintiff as such vicar was entitled to nominate and present, and had nominated and presented, a clerk to the chaptel, but another clerk had been licensed, instituted and admitted by the defendant bishop on the nomination and presentation of certain other defendants, who thereby hindered the plaintiff in the exercise of his right; and he claimed to have his right established and declared. Defence of the last-mentioned defendants: That certain. freeholders had erected the chapel and conveyed it to the ecclesiastical commissioners, and applied to them under 14 & 15 Viet. c. 97, to declare the right of nomination to be in the defendants, who had endowed the chapel, and that before making such declaration a copy of the application was according to the act sent by the commissioners to the plaintiff, he being both patron and incum-bent of the parish; that if he had ceased to be patron he stood by and knowingly allowed those defendants to endow the chapel and procure the same to be consecrated in the belief entertained by them as he well knew that he was patron, and that the sending of such copy to him was in fact a sending of a copy both to the patron and incumbent, as required by the act, and the plaintiff was therefore stopped from denying that he was patron; and that the right of nomination had been declared to be in those defendants, who afterwards nominated. On demurrer to the allegation of estoppel:—Held, that it was bad, because the rights of the vicar were not merely private but were accompanied by spiritual and other duties in which his parishioners were interested, and he could not therefore waive or divest himself of those rights and duties by the conduct imputed to him. MAllister v. Ruchester (Bishop), 49 L. J., C. P. 114; 5 C. P. D. 194; 42 L. T. 22.

But held, also, that the claim was bad, inasmuch as it did not allege that the chapel was a chapel of ease, or otherwise show any right in the vicar to nominate and present a clerk to it. Ib.

____ Discovery.] — The defendant claiming relief over against the ecclesiastical commissioners served upon them a notice under Ord. XVI. r. 18. They entered an appearance under r. 20, and an order was afterwards made at chambers under r. 21 that they should be at liberty to appear and defend this action, so far as related to the question whether all things required to be done by them, in order to enable them as against the plaintiff to make a valid declaration of the right of nomination and to vest that right in the should be bound by the finding upon that ques- was not filled up at time of an avoidance, the tion. The plaintiff then obtained an order on the ceclesiastical commissioners for discovery of documents :- Held, that the third parties having appeared in the action to litigate with the plaintiff, he was entitled to discovery from them and the order for it was right. #### c. By Parishioners or Public Trustees.

Proxy. ]-Trustees for a parish having the right of electing a viear, cannot vote by proxy, for it is a personal trust. Wilson v. Dennison, Ambl. 82. Also, Att.-Gen. v. Scott, 1 Ves. 413.

Majority.]—Trust of an advowson to present some fit person, such as the inhabitants and parishioners, or the major part of the chiefest and discreetest of them should nominate. The right of election is in the inhabitants, paying the church and poor-rates, above the age of twentyone. A popular election by a majority of such voters, and others not so qualified was established. Fearon v. Webb, 14 Ves. 13.

- Remedy. ]-An advowson was vested in feoffees, in trust upon every avoidance to present to the ordinary such person as should be elected by a majority of the landowners in a parish. On a motion for a mandamus to the trustees to present a clerk on the ground that he had been so elected :- Held, that either the remedy of the landowners against the trustees was in equity for a breach of trust, or if the landowners had a legal right, their remedy was by quare impedit; and that in either case the mandamus would not lie. Rey. v. Orton (Trustees), 14 Q. B. 139; 18 L. J., Q. B. 321.

Held, also, that the remedy, if any, of the clerk was in equity, and that he had no legal right. Ib. See also post, col. 1406.

Right by Virtue of Assessment. ]-Information was filed at the relation of several inhabitants of C., praying that the election of defendant as curate might be declared void, and that another election might be had according to a deed in 1656, and decree in Exchequer, by which it appeared, that the impropriate rectory was pur-chased for the use of the parishioners and inhabitants, and that the nomination of the curate had been declared to be in parishioners and inhabitants paying to church and poor. Lord Chancellor expressed an opinion that assessment gave the right, though no actual payment had been radic, choigh no actual payment nat been made; but the election on that principle was not disturbed on the ground of common consent, no objection having been made to it at a general meeting, and the parish having no representative meeting in vestry for such purpose. And, the court declining to give prospective direction as to the future, the information and bill was dismissed, and with costs, except as to keeping up the number of trustees with reference to the only proper subject of the information, the stipend of the curate, all the rest as to the nomination, &c., being the subject of a private suit. An informality in the bill not stating the plaintiffs as suing on behalf of all the other parishioners, might have been cared by amendment. Att.-Gen. v. Forster, 10 Ves. 335. See also S. C., nom. Att.-Gen. v. Newcombe, 14 Ves. 1.

court would not by injunction prevent the effect of a presentation, under the legal title of the heir of the surviving trustee, without a special ground: but the court will take care as to the future, that the trust shall be properly filled up. Att.-Gen. v. Lichfield (Bishop), 5 Ves. 825.

Custom-Mode of Election. ]-A custom for the parishioners of a parish to elect a curate to the perpetual curacy thereof, will not legalise an election where some of the parishioners were excluded from voting, and the rest voted by ballot. Faulkner v. Elger, 4 B. & C. 449; 6 D. & R. 517; 28 R. R. 317.

An election by ballot of a curate of a parish by the parishioners is illegal and void.

Election by some, of Several ]-Twenty-five inhabitants, as trustees, having right to elect and present, all not joining, the election is void at law and cannot be supported in equity. Trustees cannot make proxies to vote in a personal trust requiring judgment. Disusage evidence of abandonment by consent, as to part of a constitution which arose from consent. Att.-Gen. v. Scott, 1 Ves. 413.

By deed, the advowson of a vicarage was vested in nine trustees, upon trust that they or the major part of them should present such clerk as should e elected by the parties therein mentioned. The be election was to be by parishioners having a certain qualification in land, "or the major part of such parishioners, together with the trustees as aforesaid, or the major part of them." On the occasion of an election in 1840, there were eight trustees, two of whom were out of the jurisdiction; of the remaining six, five attended at the meeting, and four of them voted for the successful These four, and the trustee within candidate. the jurisdiction who was not present at the meeting, joined in the presentation, which was sub-sequently approved of by the trustees out of the jurisdiction. The remaining trustee refused to join in the presentation :- Held, that the election was valid; that the dissentient trustee was bound to give effect to it by joining in the presentation; and that the bishop, subject to any question arising as to professional unfitness in the clerk, or corrupt, simoniacal or scandalous proceedings at the election, was bound to present. Att.-Gen. v. Cuming, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 139; 7 Jur. 187.

An informality in the appointment of the trustees, viz. not keeping up the number required by the deed, did not vitiate the election.

Lands and a free chapel were vested in twopersons by grant, and the original grantees vested them in feoffees for ever, with a power to appoint new ones whenever the number should be reduced to four; but there was no provision that a particular number should form a quorum, nor, in terms was there any power to appoint a minister; but the reuts were to be paid to one. Appointments of feoffees and ministers took place until 1823, when a scheme was proposed, a reference directed, and orders made upon it. In 1866 the feofees were reduced to three, one being incapable of acting, and the other two, by deed, to which all three were parties, but which was only executed by two, appointed H. as minister. A bill and information were filed to restrain the appointment against the feoffees, Number of Trustees.]—Where by neglect the vicar and bishop, but a second appointment was number of trustees in a trust to present to a living made after injunction granted:—Held, that the appointment by the two feoffees was valid, as voting, on the following and two successive days, was the second appointment after injunction at one polling place only, and that the poll granted, and the bill dismissed with costs against would be kept open from eight to eight. Governors specially Appointed.]—By a charter of Edw. 6, it was granted that the inhabitants of the village of S., within the parish of C., should have a chapel for all the inhabitants, with a chaplain, to be paid out of the profits of the vicarage of C., and that they should elect chapelwardens. And that certain governors appointed for the village pursuant to that charter, una cum assensu majoris partis inhabitantium eiusdem villate, should nominate and appoint the chaplain. The charter also provided, that the inhabitants of S. should not be charged towards the support of C., otherwise than the other inhabitants of C. In 1836, the governors, having upon a vacancy nominated a chaplain, gave notice to the inhabitants of S, that such nomination had been made, and required them to meet at a time and place named, for the purpose of assenting or dissenting. At such meeting the resident payers of church and poor-rates, and no other persons, were admitted to vote. Some persons, not rated, tendered their votes. majority of ratepayers assented to the nomination :-Held, that the nomination by the gover-nors, with a subscount reference to the inhabitants for their assent, was a compliance with the words una cum assensu. Rew v. Dane, 6 A. & E. 874.

Meaning of word "Inhabitants." -Held, also, that referring to the context of the charter, and the proof given as to use, the word "inhabitants" in this charter might be construed as meaning "inhabitants paying church and poorrates," J. S. P., Rev v. Masterton, 6 A. & E. 153; I N. & P. 314.

Mode of Election. ]-Where the advowson of a parish is vested in trustees for the benefit of the parishioners, an election of a vicar by ballot is not valid. The election must be by voting openly. Edenborough v. Canterbury (Archbishop), 2 Russ. 93.

In such a case, the right of voting at the elec-tion of a vicar may be limited by long usage to parishioners, who pay church-rates and poor-rates. Ib.

The advowson of a parish church being vested in trustees who were bound to present the nominee of the parishioners and inhabitants, a vacancy occurred, and at a meeting of parish-ioners convened by the churchwardens, and presided over by one of them, the 30th of August was fixed upon for a meeting to proceed to the election of a vicar. Meanwhile, upon the requisition of certain inhabitants, a meeting on the 25th of August, summoned by the churchwardens, but at which they declined to preside, was held, at which resolutious were passed to the effect that the election should be by ballot, on one day only, and at several polling places, and that the poll should be open from nine to nine. On the solth of August the meeting resolved upon was A., seised of the manor and patronage of W., held, candidates were nominated, a shew of by will gives 100\(ldot\) per annum rent-charge, and hands taken, and a poll demanded, and one of the advowson to six trustees, and those trustees, he the only served to the control of the advowson to six trustees, and those trustees.

a parishioner rising to move amendments similar to those of the 25th of August, the chairman left the chair and declared the meeting at an end, After the churchwarden had left the chair another chairman was chosen, and a series of resolutions, similar to those of the 25th of August, were moved and carried. The poll having been taken in the way announced by the chairman of the meeting of the 30th of August :- Held, that the conduct of the churchwardens had been erroneous and illegal; but, there being no evidence of any voter having been deprived of an opportunity of voting, that the election could not opportunity or young, that the election come not be disturbed. Shaw v. Thompson, 45 L. J., Ch. 827; 3 Ch. D. 233; 34 L. T. 721.

Semble, an election by ballot, if duly resolved upon, is not at the present day an illegal mode of election. Ib.

Nomination, Right of - In whom. ]-Under 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, a church building act, where only one subscriber of 50% is left surviving, and only one trustee by election, the incumbent of the parish becomes trustee ex officio jointly with the surviving trustee by election, and on the death of the latter within forty years, entitled to nominate on the vacancy in the incumbency of the church. Allen v. Gloucester and Bristol (Bishap), 42 L. J., C. P. 299; L. R. 6 H. L. 219; 22 W. R. 198.

For the purpose of election, by subscribers to the building of a church, of three trustees to nominate a spiritual person to serve the church, under 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, s. 6:-Held, that s. 8 applies only to the first election of trustees, and that there could be no subsequent appointment of trustees except in the manner pointed out in s. 7, viz. by the majority at a meeting called by the surviving trustees, even though there was only one 50% subscriber remaining; and that, on the death of one or all of the trustees without any such election having taken place, the sole surviving 50%, subscriber did not by force of the statute become a life trustee. Fowler v. Gloucestru and Bristot (Bishop), 38 L. J., C. P. 341; L. R. 4 C. P. 668; 17 W. R. 1026—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 20 L. T. 706.

A., being impropriator of a parish, demised part of the tithes to certain parishioners as trustees for 1,900 years, who re-demised it tohim for 999 years under the yearly rent of 50%, payable to the trustees as a provision for a preacher, to be nominated by the trustees. The heir of A. afterwards sold the rectory to B., and the representative of the surviving trustee was prevailed upon to assign to B. the right of nominating a preacher. From the date of the atting a presence. From the date of the original demise, and for forty years after the latter transaction, the preacher was constantly nominated by the parishioners —Held, upon a contest between the parishioners and B. it was held that the right of nomination was absolutely in the trustees, and that the assignment of that right was a breach of trust; and directions were given by the House of Lords for the re-establishment of the trust in trustees, to be impartially Presentation, Rights of-In whom.]-Queen Elizabeth, for the advancement and better maintenance of the free grammar school of Shrewsbury, granted to the baliffs and burgesses of Shrewsbury, and their successors, amongst other hereditaments, the advowson of the vicarage of C. By the 38 Gco. 3, c. 68, all the hereditaments and real and personal estates belonging to the school were vested in a corporate body, called "The governors and trustees of the school," who were to hold the same in trust for the benefit and maintenance of the school, except the right of presentation, nomination and appointment, to those ceclesiastical benefices which were thereinafter declared to be in the mayor, aldermen and assistants of the town of Shrewsbury. By a subsequent section of the act, the mayor, aldermen and assistants were directed to fill up vacancies in the vicarage of C., by nominating, appointing or presenting a fit person, provided that such person should be preferred, exteris paribus, who should have been brought up in the school, and a graduate of one or other of the universities, and born within the parish of C., except that it should be lawful to give such benefice to either of the masters of the school, after he should have vacated his office of master, notwithstanding any such claim or preference as last aforesaid:—Held, that the right of presentation to the vicarage of C. was vested in the mayor, aldermen and assistants, as charitable trustees within the meaning of the act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, for the regulation of municipal corporations. Re Shrewsbury School, 1 Myl. & C. 632.

Hearle v. Greenbank, 3 Atk. 710.

> By Devisee. ]-If A., seised of an advowson, be also incumbent and devises it, the devisee, after his death, shall nominate; for, where the ownership and property of an advowson be in the devisee, they, and not the heir, shall nominate in consequence of such ownership, nor will it make any difference, whether the devisee has the advowson in him as a personalty or as a realty. Hawkins v. Chappel, I Atk. 622.

By Heir-at-law. —A testator, who was both patron and incumbent of a living, devised the advowson and all his other real estates, and also his personal estate, to trustees in trust to pay the rents, dividends, interest and annual income of his real estates, until they should be sold as thereinafter directed, and also of his personal estate, to his sister, until she should have a child; and, immediately after her having a child, in trust to stand seised and possessed of his real estates, if not then sold, and of his personal estate, and the rents, dividends, interest and annual income thereof, in trust for her children or child, who should attain twenty-one, their heirs, &c.; and, if she should have no such child. then in trust, after her death, for the trustees, their heirs, &c. The testator then directed his trustees to sell the advowson and his other real estates with all convenient speed after his death, and to stand possessed of the proceeds upon the trusts before declared of his personal estate; and he empowered his trustees to apply the rents, dividends, interest and annual income of the presumptive shares of his sister's children, of not to the general qualifications of a candidate his real estates if not then sold, and if sold then for the duties of a clergyman. Att.-Gen. v. Powis of the money arising therefrom, and of his personal estate, for their maintenance during their minorities; and directed that the surplus rents, dividends, interest and annual income should be invested and accumulated for the benefit of the children, from whose shares the same should be saved. At the testator's death, his sister (who was his heir) had three infant children; and his living having become vacant by his death, the question was, whether the children, their mother or the trustees, were entitled to present to it :- Held, that as the presentation to a living does not produce rents, dividends, interest or annual income, the dispositions of the will were not applicable to that species of property, and, consequently, that the testator's sister was entitled, as his heir-at-law, to present to the living on the existing vacancy. Martin v. Martin, 12 Sim. 579; 11 L. J., Ch. 291; 6 Jur. 360.

Vacancy after Contract for Sale.]—M. D., a married woman, having a separate property, offered, by letter, to give C. M. 1,500*l*. for the By Infant.]—As to presentation and nomina-on by infant to benefice. See Arthington v. v. derverley, 2 Eq. Abr. 518.

This preliminary matter, however, cannot be arranged till M. C., my solicitor, returns to Before the article was executed, the living became vacant, upon which C. refused to perform the agreement. M. D. died. A bill was then filed by her heir-at-law against C. M. for a specific execution of the agreement. C. M., however, presented a clerk, E., who was inducted by the bishop; an amended bill was then filed by the heir at-law and the personal representatives of M. D. against the bishop, C. M., and E., for a specific execution of the agreement, and for the removal of E. :- Held, that the contract, although in letters, was final and complete, the thing to be bought, and the sum to be given, being distinctly stated in the proposal, and explicitly accepted in the answer thereto, and ought to be specifically performed. Dowling v. Maguire, Ll. & G. t. Plunk, 1.

Held, also, that a married woman having separate property might, by her contract to pay a specific sum of money for an estate, bind that property, and that it was not necessary she should in such contract expressly refer to it. Ib.

Held, also, that, the plaintiff having only equitable rights, the original bill was an equitable quare impedit, which was sued out within the proper period, i.e. within six months from the vacancy, and was sufficient notice to E.; and that E., who was admitted pending the suit, not having alleged any title in a stranger, must abide the fate of his patron, and be removed. Ib.

By Trustees.]—A. by will directed her trustees to sell an advowson immediately after the death of H., the present incumbent, but on no account to sell it to any member of the family of H.; the proceeds of such sale to fall into her residuary personal estate :- Held, that the next presentation was vested in the trustees, and that they must present. Bristow v. Skirrow, 5 Jur. (N.S. 1379 ; 1 L. T. 180.

Validity of Nomination.]-Lord Fairfax, by codicil in 1671, gave all his tithes of Bilborough in fee (subject to an estate therein for the life of R.) to H., and his heirs and assigns, to the use of a preaching minister, there to be nominated by the said H. and his heirs. The heir of H. conveyed the tithes, with other property, to trustees for sale for payment of his debts, and they were accordingly sold and conveyed by the said trustees in 1716 to F. and J., and their heirs, on trust as to the tithes to the use of a preaching minister to be nominated by F. and his heirs. J. (who was only trustee for F.) surviving F. became seised of the legal estate, and his descendants continued so seised until 1826, when his heir-at-law conveyed the said tithes upon the original trusts to T., the heir of F.; T. had, in 1821, nominated B. the preaching minister of Bilborough :- Held, in suit by T. and B. for an account of tithes, that this was a valid nomination of B. Holdsworth v. Fairfaw, 3 Cl. & F. 115:8 Bligh (N.S.) 882.

Nomination of Self.]-The patron of a donative benefice, being a qualified clergyman and officiating curate of the church, by deed poll, executed during a vacancy of the benefic, granted the advowson to a trustee in trust to present whomsoever the patron should nominate; he patron then by word of mouth nominated himself, and the trustee by deed poll granted the office of rector to him :-Held, that the transaction was valid, and that he thereupon became rector and entitled to the profits of the benefice. Lowe v. Chester (Bishop), 10 Q. B. D. 407; 48 L. T. 790; 47 J. P. 375.

Nomination, Right of—In whom.]—The owner of an advowson after directing that 13,000L should be invested and the interest paid to his wife for her life for the support of herself and their children, directed his executors when the church was full to sell the advowson, and also certain freehold land, and invest the proceeds for the same purpose as before directed with respect to the 13,000l., and after the death of his wife then for the purposes in the will mentioned. The husband died in September, 1874, the church then being full, and he left his widow and five iufant daughters, his co-heiresses-at-law, him surviving. The executors did not sell the advowson, and on the death of the incumbent in February, 1875, the question arose who was entitled to nominate to the vacant benefice: Held, that the right to nominate was in the widow. Briggs v. Sharp, 44 L. J., Ch. 510; L. R. 20 Eq. 317; 33 L. T. 154; 23 W. R. 806. Followed in Welch v. Peterborough (Bishop), 15 Q. B. D. 432; 1 Cab. & E. 534. See also Hawkins v. #### e. By Parceners or Joint-tenants.

Priority.] -- Coparceners present in turn to benefice, and the elder has the right of first turn : and this right extends to his assignee. Bullery. Exeter (Bishop), 1 Ves. 340.

— On Partition.]—On partition of coparce-nary of advowson where one has before presented, other shall present the next turn. Matthews v. Bath and Wells (Bishop), Dick. 652.

Decree for partition of advowson by alternate presentations. Bodicoate v. Steers, Dick, 69. A., seised of an advowson, of which his son W. was incumbent, devised it to trustees to sell on his son's death, and divide the produce between his own nine children:—Held, by Romilly, M.R., that the court had authority to make a partition of an advowson, and would follow, by analogy, the rule as to coparceners, and give the right of presentation to the members by seniright of presentation to the members by semi-ority; but Cranworth, C, and Knight Brace, L.J., held, that the right to present was to be deter-mined between the children by lot. When the third turn came, C. had died, leaving two cheirs, E. and F., between whom the right to present was disputed. F., however, presented, and on the next avoidance, E. presented:—Held, that the presentations of E. and F. were to be counted, though they were usurpations on the rights of F. and D. respectively, and that on the seventh avoidance F. would be again entitled to present. Richards v. Macelosfield (Earl), 7 Sim. 257; 4 t. J., Ch. 153.

Advowson held in Common.]—A prerogative representation to a church, of which the advowson is held in common, does not pass for the turn of the otherwise rightful patron. Gracers' Co. v. Canterbury (Architshop), 2 Wm. Bl. 770; 3 Wls. K. B. 214, 221.

Where an advowson is held in common, and the rote of presentation not expressly settled, the first and peaceable presentations are evidence of composition between the parties. Ib.

Protestant and Catholic Co-partners.]—When a protestant and a catholic are co-partners in an advovson, the right of presentation is in the protestant alone. Edwards v. Exeter (Bishop), 5 Bing. (N.G.) E6t; 7 Scott, 652; 9 L. J., C. P. 87; 3 Jur. 72.

Presentation by Turns.]—Where the right of presentation is vested in different parties by turn, a presentation made on exchange of benefices counts as a turn. The principle of Richards v. Maccelepted (Earl) (7 Sim. 257) applies between parties to a deed limitage, the turns. There is no equity enabling a party whose turn has been usurped to take turn of the usurping party. Ducues v. ### f. By Mortgagors or Mortgagees.

Mortgage Absolute.]—When mortgage of mere advowson is absolute in mortgagee, he may present. Dyer v. Craven (Lord), Dick. 662.

Before Forcelosure, ]—A manor with an advoveson appendant being mortgaged, the church becomes void, the mortgagor shall present, unless forcelosed; and if, pending a suit by the mort agec to forcelose, the churchi becomes vacaut, though the defendant has no bill to redeem, the court will grant an injunction to stay proceedings in a quare impedit brought by the plaintiff. Ambure V. Juaching, 2 Vern. 401.

Mortgagee, till a foreclosure, is but in nature of a trustee for the mortgagor. Ib.

If an advowson only be mortgaged, and becomes void, it seems in this case the mortgage is to present, especially if in the deed the agreement be that the mortgage shall present. Cartiner v. Griffiths, 2 P. Wms. 404; Moseley, 16.

One mortgages a manor, with an advowson appendant, and the church becomes void; mortgage, though in possession, shall not present to the church till the mortgage is foreclosed. Ib.

Mortgagee cannot, before foreclosure, present to benefice. Hungarford v. Clay, 9 Mod. 1.

Presentation Revoked.]—Decree against a mortgagee in possession to redeem, but, a church becoming void before the account taken, mortgagee presents; yet on petition ordered to revoke his presentation. Jopy v. Cvx, Pre. Ch. 71.

Nominee of Mortgagor.]—Mortgagee cannot present to vacant benefice, but must present nominee of mortgagor as his trustee. Gally v. Selby, 1 Comyns, 343; 1 Str. 403.

A mortgagee must accept of a mortgagor's nominee to an avoidance of an advoson, for, where arrears are great, instead of foreclosure he should have prayed a sale of the advowsom. Machenie v. Robinem 8 Atk. 592

2. QUARE IMPEDIT.

Pleading.]—Sects. 80 and 81 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, applied to pleadings in quare impedit. Marshall v. Electer (Bishup), 6 C. B. (N.S.) 716; 28 L. J., C. P. 800; 7 W. R. 525.

— Bishoy's Plea, ]—In quare impedit, upon a rejection of the patron's presentee, the bishoy's plea must state not only that the presentee is not a fit person, but also in what respect he is not fit, and state it in such a manure as will enable the patron to take issue on the objection, and a proper tribunal to judge of its soundness. Exeter (Bishoy) v. Marvhall, 37 L. J., C. P. 381; L. R. 3 H. L. 17; 18 L. T. 376.

An allegation in the plea that the bishop had good reason to believe that the presentee had been guilty of an attempt to commit simony is not sufficient. Ib.

Semble, that a plea alleging a presentation by the bishop as on a lapse must allege notice to the patron of the circumstances under which the bishop would so claim to present. Ib.

The right of a patron is a temporal right, and the plea to an action to enforce this right must be one upon the sufficiency of which in point of law the court may decide, or which may be traversed and issue joined upon it to be tried, if the cause is spiritual, by the certificate of the archbishop, and if temporal, by a jury.  $I\delta$ .

- Insufficient Declaration.]—A plaintiff claimed the second turn to a living but in list declaration did not lay any presentation made by him, or any of his predecessors, in the second turn ; in ealso acknowledged a title in the defendant to the first turn, but he did not set out the conveyances particularly, by which it was derived down to him: this declaration was held to be insufficient to maintain the plaintiff's action. Skirchurer v. Hitch, 1 Pro. P. C. 110.
- Strength of Title.]—When a church is vacant by the death of the incumbent, and two conflicting claimants allege a right to present, but the bishop refuses to present the clerk of either until the right to present inas been established, and one of them brings his action of — Variance.]—In quare impedit, a count alleged an immediate right in the plaintiffs as owners of messuages and lands within a chapelry (which lands were charged with the payment of yearly sums for the repair of the chapel) to nominate a curate, and present him to the bishop, and it was proved that part of the repairs of the chapel was defrayed out of the poor-rates :-Held to be a variance, and that the evidence did not support the allegation. Shepherd v. Chester (Bishop), 4 M. & P. 130; 6 Bing. 435; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 141.

Chester (Bishop), 7 D. & R. 96; 4 B. & C. 555; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 14; 28 R. R. 390.

When will lie.]-On a commission of charitable uses, it was agreed between the lord of the manor of A, and the inhabitants of W. within the manor, that certain copyhold lands should be let for the maintenance of a stipendiary curate of the chapel of W., to be nominated by a majority of the inhabitants, and to be allowed by the lord and by him presented to the ordinary for a licence to preach ; the usage of nominating had been pursuant to the agreement; the lord having refused to allow and present the nominee of a majority of the inhabitants, the latter prayed a mandamus, which the court refused; for their right is either a mere trust. and then their remedy is in equity; or it is a legal right, and then a quare impedit will lie. Rew v. Stafford (Marquis), 3 Term Rep. 646.

> 3. COLLATION, INSTITUTION AND INDUCTION.

Effect of. ]-By his induction the parson is put in possession of a part for the whole, and may maintain an action for a trespass on the glebe land, although he has not taken actual possession of it. Bulwer v. Bulwer, 2 B. & Ald. 470; 21 R. R. 358.

Of Archdeacon.] -- An archdeacon of Rochester, when instituted and inducted into that office, is ipso facto inducted into the prebend annexed to it by royal grant, and may claim to be sworn in prebendary without being installed. Rew v. Ruchester (Dean and Chapter), 3 B. & Ad. 95. S. P., Rew v. Bayley, 1 B. & Ad. 761; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 131.

Practice. ]-The issuing of the writ, de vi laica removenda, from the common law side of the court of chancery has fallen into desuetude, as the same relief can be given by injunction, in a case of obstruction to the induction of a party to. a benefice, to restrain all interference therewith. Jenkins, In re, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 351; 38 L. J., P. C. 6; L. R. 2 P. C. 258; 19 L. T. 583; 17 W. R. 502.

Evidence.]—Where a blank is left in the register of an institution or collation for the patron's name, pavol evidence of common report is admissible to prove who was the patron. Mea (Bishop) v. Belfield (Lord), 1 Wils. K. B. 215. A copy of the bishop's institution book is not evidence of a presentation by the patron to a living. Tillard v. Shebbeare, 2 Wils. K. B. 366.

The institution of a party to a living, recitingthe cession of his predecessor, followed by induction, is sufficient evidence to support an ejectment; though the predecessor is shown to have been in possession, and no other evidence of his cession is given. Doe d. Kerby v. Carter, R. & M. 237. And see Cook v. Elphin, 5 Bligh (N.S.) 103.
Parsons need not prove their reading the articles, &c., till something appears to the con-trary. Powell v. Milbank, 2 Wm. Bl. 852; 3 Wils. K. B. 355.

Where in ejectment the plaintiff gave evidence of some acts of ownership exercised upon the land in dispute by the lessor's ancestor, and of a fine levied by him about the same time, and the defendant proved some acts of ownership by the vicar, and gave evidence which tended to show that the land was formerly part of the churchyard; the judge refused to leave it as a question to the jury whether the parties to the fine had any estate of freehold, but told them that the fine was a conclusive bar to the vicar :- Held, that this was wrong. Runcorn v. Doe d. Cooper, 5 B. & C. 696; 8 D. & R. 450; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 281.

Fifteen years' possession of a benefice is primâ facie evidence of a regular induction, and of Beard, 3 Anst. 942; 4 R. R. 875.

An original collation from the registry of a claimed has in fact been exercised. Irish Society v. Derry (Bishop), 12 Cl. & F. 642.

Entries in the book kept at the First Fruits' Office are admissible to show the fact of a collation to a living made by the bishop at a particular time Th.

Returns made by the bishop in obedience to writs from the Exchequer, requiring him to state the vacancies of, and presentations and collations to, the livings in his diocese, are admissible as statements made by a public officer in the discharge of a public duty. Though some returns may contain statements of a kind unusual in such documents, which statements were in favour of the rights of the bishop who made them, they were, nevertheless, admissible, provided that the statements are within the scope of the inquiry in the writ. Ib.

Act of Uniformity.]—The meaning of the Act of Uniformity is that the party is to subscribe the declaration as soon as it is in his power, semble. Queen's College Case, Jacob, 29.

Restraining.]—Qualification in the grant of a living, that the person to be presented should not, at such time as the church should be void, "be presented, instituted or inducted into any other living," complied with by previous resignation of another living. Resignation of a living, sent by the post to the bishop who indorsed and signed a memorandum of his acceptance, sufficient, though no public act. Heyes v. Excter College, Oxford, 12 Ves. 336; 8 R. R. 327.

Injunction, on filing of bill, to stay induction Potter v. Chapman, of defendant to living. Dick, 146; Ambl. 98.

On the principle of protecting property pending litigation, the court will, in a suit to impeach a conveyance of an advowson, restrain the institution of a clerk, even as against a defendant claiming to be a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice under it. Greenslade v. Dare, 17 Beav. 502.

Refusal of Bishop to Institute—Grounds of.] -A bishop refused to institute a clerk in holy orders to a benefice on the grounds that he had, whilst acting as curate to a former holder of the benefice, habitually committed offences against ecclesiastical law and failed to observe the book of common prayer, by wearing anlawful vestments and doing unlawful acts in respect of matters of ritual when officiating in the communion service; and that he declined to undertake not to repeat the offences in the future. In an action against the bishop in which the patron claimed a declaration that he was entitled to have the clerk instituted :- Held, that the defendant had acted within his discretion in refusing to institute the clerk upon the grounds stated, and was therefore entitled to judgment. Heywood v. Manchester (Bishop), 53 L. J., Q. B. 196; 12 Q. B. D. 404; 50 L. T. 236; 32 W. R. 567. In 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 104, under which, within certain dioceses, the bishop may, if he shall think fit, refuse to institute or license any spiritual person "who, after due examination and inquiry, shall be found unable to preach, administer the sacraments, perform other pastoral duties, and converse in the Welsh language," "due examination and inquiry" means examination and inquiry as to the clergyman's knowledge of the Welsh language, not as to the requirements value of SL, he thereby vacated the former.

pleno jure, is admissible to show that the right of the parish, and the statute gives an absolute discretion to the bishop as to the mode of ascertaining the requirements of the parish, and he is not bound to hold a formal inquiry of a judicial character for that purpose. Abergavenay (Marquis) v. Llandaff (Bishap), 57 L. J., Q. B. 233; 20 Q. B. D. 460; 58 L. T. 812; 36 W. R. 859.

A bishop having commissioned certain persons to hold an inquiry as to whether a parish, to which a clergyman had been presented, required a pastor who could speak Welsh :-Held, that a refusal to hear the patron or his presentee did not invalidate the inquiry. Ib.

Institution to second Living without deprivation of first.]—After an incumbent of a benefice, under the value of 8l. in the king's books, has been justituted and inducted to another benefice with cure of souls, the right of presentation accrues thereby to the patron, and is not assignable by law to another, and the incumbent not having been deprived, and no new clerk having been presented, remains still the incumbent, and is legally entitled to the tithes. Alston v. Atlay, 7 A. & E. 289; 2 N. & P. 492; W. W. & D. 662; 7 L. J., Ex. 392.

Upon institution to the second living the first is void as to the patron, but not so as to incur lapse without sentence of deprivation and notice by the ordinary, or at least until notice by the ordinary. Ib.

The right to the fallen presentation having become a personal inalienable right in the patron disannexed from the advowson, the want of knowledge of the vacancy by the patron does not alter the quality of the right so as to make it real, or re-annex it to the advowson. Ib.

4. LAPSE.

Collation pending Suit.]—Injunction granted to restrain an archbishop from collating by way of lapse to a deanery, pending a suit in the Consistorial Court respecting the presentment by the chapter. Daly v. Dublin (Archbishop), Fl. & K. 268

In a suit for the specific performance of an agreement for the sale of the next presentation to a living, the court will restrain the bishop of the diocese from taking advantage of a lapse pending the suit. Nicholson v. Knapp, 9 Sim. 326 : 7 L. J., Ch. 219.

Equity of Redemption.]—The plaintiff claims the advowson of a vicurage as mortgagor, insisting that it was inserted fraudulently in a particular of trust estate directed by decree to be sold for payment of debts :—Held, that the equity of redemption of an advowson lapses, and the plea allowed without prejudice, &c. Mallock v. Salter, 2 Ken. Ch. 49.

5. AVOIDANCE.

When.]—If an incumbent, in possession of above 81, per annum in the king's books, accepts a second living under that value, it is absolute avoidance of the first; and, if he possesses one under that value and takes a second without a dispensation, the first is void at the election of the patron. Boteler v. Allington, 3 Atk. 455.

If a clerk, having a benefice with cure of souls took another benefice with cure of souls of the

Where an act of parliament created a new parish church and rectory, and directed that the bishop shall confer a certain prebend on the rector, and that the prebend shall remain united and annexed to the rectory for ever; this was not such an appropriation of the rectory to the prebend, as made it an appropriate benefice within 21 Hen. 8, c. 13, s. 31, and tenable with another benefice having cure of souls. 1b.

By a local act the hamlet of Bethnal Green, in the parish of Stepney, was divided from it, and made a distinct parish under the name of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, with a parish church, and the advowson was vested in the patrons of the original church; and it was enacted, that the rectory of the new church or parish should not be taken or held in commendam. The rector of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, while holding that benefice, accepted another :- Held, that the rectory did not thereby and by force of the statute become void, the rectory not being rated in the king's books, and the patrons not making a new presentation. King v. Alston, 12 Q. B. 971; 18 L. J., Q. B. 59.

A clerk in holy orders being in possession of a perpetual curacy, with cure of souls, augmented by the governors of Queen Anne's bounty, and having, without dispensation, been instituted and inducted into another benefice with cure of souls: -Held, to have forfeited the former, which was on sentence declared void. Burder v. Mavor,

1 Rob. Ec. Rep. 614.

Where the incumbent of a parish church presents himself to a district church within the parish created under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, the annual value of the two livings exceeding 1,000%, the parish church becomes, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, ss. 4, 11, ipso facto void. Starie v. Winchester (Bishop), 17 C. B. 653; 9 C. B. 62; 19 L. J., C. P. 217.

6. RIGHT TO PROFITS DURING VACANCY.

From what Time Recoverable.]-A patron of a benefice with eure of souls, under the value of 8/. in the king's books, being also incumbent of the same benefice, accepted another with cure, and thereupon presented a clerk to the proper ordinary, who was afterwards admitted, instituted and inducted, on his presentation, to the former living:—Held, that the first benefice thereby became actually void, from the time of presentation, within 28 Hen. 8, c. 11, and the succeeding incumbent entitled to the tithes from such presentation. Betham v. Gregg, 4 M. & Sc. 230; 10 Bing, 352; 3 L. J., C. P. 121.

An incumbent of a living with cure of souls, valued at less than 81. a year in the king's books, accepted another benefice without having a dispensation to hold both, whereby the presentation became void de jure; but he continued in possession. The bishop presented another clerk, and afterwards brought quare impedit, and recovered against the defendant, upon which the new presentee was instituted and inducted. In an action by the latter against the defendant, founded on 28 Hen. 8, c. 11, s. 3, which gives the profits of every benefice during vacation to the next incumbent :- Held, that he could not recover the profits either from the time of his being presented, or from the suing out of the defect of creating a new presentative benefice quare impedit, the vacation contemplated by wholly distinct from the former benefices, and Bruzennose College v. Salisbury (Bishap), 4 the statute being a vacation de facto. Halton v. Taunt. 831. See also Betham v. Gregg, infra. | Chre, 1 B. & Ad. 538.

From what Source arising.]-The 28 Hen. 8, c. 11, s. 3, gives the tithes, fruits, oblations, obventions, emoluments, commodities, advantages, rents and all other whatsoever revenues, casualties or profits, certain and uncertain, affering or belonging to any dignity, prebend or benefice, which shall accrue between the occurrence of a vacancy and a new appointment, to the appointee. The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 30, directs the profits of dignitaries or benefices without cure of souls becoming vacant during the existence of an ecclesiastical commission to be paid to the treasurer of Queen Anne's bounty, who is to keep an account of the receipts and expenses, and retain the balance until he shall be otherwise ordered by competent authority. By a subsequent statute, the crown is declared entitled to appoint, notwithstanding the existence of the commission in question, three persons to eertain prebends therein named. One of these appointees, having demanded from the treasurer of Queen Anne's bounty the profits received by him during the vacancy, brought an action to recover them. A special verdict (on a verdict found in his favour) declared these to be the net profits of the prebend :-Held, that a judgmentfor the plaintiff given on this verdict could not be sustained, because it did not distinguish the sources from which these profits might arise, nor show whether they were derived from the corpus of the prebend, to which he was individually entitled, or from sums due to him in respect of his share of the funds of the corporation aggregate, of which as prebend he was a member. Repton v. Hodgson, 3 H. L. Cas. 72. S. C. (in court below), 7 Q. B. 84.

X. UNION OF BENEFICES.

How Effected.] - The union of two or more: benefices cannot be effected without the assent of the patrons. Daniel v. Morton, 16 Q. B. 198; 20 L. J., Q. B. 98; 15 Jur. 699. Quere, whether a union of two benefices during the life of the incumbent is valid. Ib. In 1593, the parish church of K. (a rectory) having become rninons, the parishioners of the adjoining parish of W. (a perpetual curacy), entered into an agreement under which the parishioners of K, were admitted to the use of their church and to the benefit of all usual ecclesiastical offices, which were thence-forward performed by the incumbents for the time being of W. for the parishioners of both parishes. From 1605 onwards there was no parishes. separate presentation to the benefice of K., but no formal union of the livings of W. and K. was made, although the holders for the time being of the living of W. were cited, and made official returns and paid charges, as rectors of K. In 1844 the tithe commissioners awarded a tithe rent-charge in respect of lands at K. The holder of the benefice of W. claimed the tithe rentcharge upon the ground that there had been a union of his benefice with that of K.:-Held that there had been no legal or effectual union upon which the claim could be founded. of giving the patronage of this new benefice to See Robinson v. Bristol (Marquis), 11 C. B. 241; 22 L. J., C. P. 21; 16 Jur. 889-Ex. Ch.

Where two churches are united by act of parliament after the next avoidance of both, the patron cannot present to the united vicarage upon the next avoidance of one. Hardinge v. Winchester (Bishop), 2 Wm. Bl. 1162.

· Liability to Repair Chancel, |- See Att .-Gen, v. Ashe, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 309.

Presumption.]—The rectory of St. Faith was in 1448 appropriated by the Bishop of Winchester to the hospital of St. Cross for the purpose of endowing a distinct charity intended to be established within the hospital. The hospital, which adjoined the parish of St. Faith, had a chapel, designed for the use of the inmates, and the master of the hospital was an ecclesiastical person, the power of appointing to the mastership being in the bishop. The parish church of St. Faith was destroyed at some time subsequently to this endowment, and never was rebuilt, and the inhabitants during a long period attended divine service at the chapel of the hospital, and their baptisms, burials and marriages were performed there. By an act of Queen Elizabeth, it was enacted that the church and possessions of the hospital should remain the property of the hospital, and be employed for the charitable uses for which the hospital was founded :-Held, that this statute negatived any presumption, which might have arisen from the long use of the chapel, that there had been such a union of the rectory with the mastership of the hospital as to make the chapel of the hospital the parish church of the parish of St. Faith. Att.-Gen. v. St. Cross Hospital, 8 De G. M. & G. 38; 25 L. J., Ch. 202; 2 Jur. (N.s.) 336; 4 W. R. 310,

Semble, that there is no precedent or principle for the union of the mastership of a hospital with the rectory of a parish. It

Semble, that, if such union could be presumed from custom, a custom which was not shown to extend to the interference of the churchwarden of the parish with the chapel would not lead to a presumption of a union authorising such inter-

Practice — Pleading] — Where three parish churches have been united by 22 Car. 2, c. 11, the benefice may be described in pleading as one rectory. Wilson v. Van Mildert, 2 Bos. & P. 394.

XI. NON-RESIDENCE

Penalties for-Liability to Pay.]-A curate of an augmented curacy by Queen Anne's bounty was not liable to the penalties of 21 Hen. 8, c. 13, for non-residence. Jenkinson v. Thomas, 4 Term Rep. 665; 2 R. R. 493. But see now 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 124.

Proceedings to Recover. ]-A proceeding in the Consistorial Court, to recover penalties for non-residence, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, ss. 32, 114, is not a criminal suit, within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 23, but a civil suit, and therefore is not to be instituted in the mode pointed out by s. 3 of the latter act. Rackham v. Bluck, 9 Q. B. 691; 16 L. J., Q. B. 82; 11 Jur. 325. S. C., 5 Moore, P. C. 305. S. P. and

Where a sentence of the Consistorial Court in the owners of the former advowsons in turn, such proceeding condemned the party charged in payment of one third part of the annual value of his benefice, with the reasonable expense of the promoter of the suit :- Held, that such sentence was valid, and consistent with 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 10, though it went on to order that the amount of such third part, and of such expense, should be ascertained in the usual and accustomed manner by the registrar of the court, it appearing that the sentence was conformable to the practice of the Consistorial Court, and that by such practice payment would not be enforced until the bishop had received the registrar's report of the amount and made an order thereon,

> Proceedings to compel Residence. - In proeeedings for the sequestration of a benefice for non-residence, it is not necessary that the bishops' monition, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 54, should be preceded by a citation or other warning to the incumbent. Bartlett v. Kirwood, 2 EL & Bl. 771; 2 C. L. R. 253; 23 L. J., Q. B. 9; 18 Jur. 173; 2 W. R. 17.

Where an incumbent, in answer to such monition, sends a return assigning an excuse for nonresidence, which the bishop considers insufficient, that is a sufficient hearing of the incumbent to authorise the bishop to make an order upon the incumbent to return into residence within thirty days. Ib.

Where the incumbent, being served with such order, sends to the bishop, upon affidavit, an excuse for not obeying the order which the bishop considers insufficient, that is a sufficient hearing of the incumbent to authorise the bishop to sequestrate the benefice after the lapse of the thirty days. Ib.

Under s. 58, a benefice becomes void if it remains for the space of a year under sequestration for non-residence, the year commencing from the date of the decree of sequestration; the case not falling within s. 120, which provides that for all purposes of the act, except as therein otherwise provided, the year shall commence on 1st January, and be reekoned to 31st December, both inclusive. Ib.

Where an incumbent, having begun to reside upon his benefice in obedience to a monition or an order, afterwards, and before the expiration of twelve months, wilfully absents himself for one month, the bishop is justified in issuing an order on the incumbent to reside; though he might under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 56, without issuing such order, sequester the benefice. Bona-ker v. Erans, 16 Q. B. 163; 20 L. J., Q. B. 137; 15 Jur. 460—Ex. Ch.

A sequestration ordered by the bishop, under s. 56, is a penal proceeding, inasmuch as, although one of the objects of it may be to enforce future residence, it operates as a forfeiture of part of the profits of the benefice, under s. 54; and, by s. 58, if it continues for a year the benefice is void; and therefore the bishop ought to give the incumbent an opportunity of being heard before it is issued. Ib.

Fact of-How Ascertained.]-Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 54, the question as to the fact of non-residence, or the sufficiency of the excuse for it, is for the determination of the bishop, and the remedy against his judgment thereon is by appeal to the archbishop. Bartlett, In re, 3 Ex. 28; 18 L. J., Ex. 25; 12 Jur. 940. S. P. and S. C., 12 Q. B. 488; 18 L. J., Q. B. 16; 12 Jur. when it was originally granted.

Lamb, 1 Marshall, 372; 5 Taunt. 807.

Effect of.]—Under 1 & 2 Viet. c. 106, s. 58, if a benefice continues one whole year under sequestration issued, under the provisions of the act, for disobedience of the order requiring residence, the benefice becomes void; the subsequent provision in that section, as to giving notice, is only for the purpose of giving the bishop a right to present by lapse, and not for creating an avoidance. Ib.

The power of the bishop to appoint a stipendiary curate, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 75, is only when the incumbent is absent from his benefice for a period exceeding three months altogether, or to be accounted at several times in the course of any one year; and by s. 121, the year is to be reckoned from the 1st of January to the 31st of December. Sharpe v. Bluck, 10

Q. B. 280; 11 Jur. 328.

A lease of a rectory-house by a rector became yold by 13 Eliz. c. 20, by his non-residence for eighty days, of which a stranger might take advantage. Doe d. Crisp v. Barber, 2 Term Rep. 749. S. P., Doe d. Rogers v. Mears, Cowp.

129; Lofft, 602.

A rector might recover in ejectment against his lessee, on the ground of the lease of the rectory being avoided on account of his own non-residence, by force of 13 Eliz. e. 20; and the lease to him, describing him as a doctor in divinity, produced by him at the trial in support of his title, was prima facie evidence of his being such as he was therein described to be, so as also to avoid the lease under 21 Hen. 8, e. 13, s. 3. Frogmorton d. Fleming v. Scott, 2 East, 467; 6 R. R. 477.

One in possession of glebe land under a lease void by 13 Eliz. c. 20, by reason of the rector's non-residence, might yet maintain trespass upon his possession against a wrong-doer. Graham v. Peate, 1 East, 244; 6 R. R. 268; 11 R. R. Pre-

Although an incumbent of a benefice is bound to reside and perform the duties in his benefice, notwithstanding his living is sequestered; if the bishop, under the sequestration, assigns him the vicarage-house, and a stipend for his services, he receives the stipend not in his right as a viear, but under the bishop's licence; and therefore he cannot calculate the stipend as a freehold qualification under 18 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 1. Pack v. Tarpley, 1 P. & D. 478; 9 A. & E. 468; 2 W. W. & H. 88; 8 L. J., M. C. 93.

Licence for. ]-The non-residence on one benefice, under a licence from the diocesan, is not equivalent to actual residence thereon, so as to excuse the incumbent's non-residence on another benefice. Wright v. Flamank, 6 Taunt. 52; 1

Marshall, 368.

If a clergyman who has two livings resides within one of the parishes, wherein there is no house of residence, it is a sufficient residence there to exempt him, without licence from the bishop, from penalties for not residing on his other benefice. Wynn v. Smithies, 6 Taunt. 198; 1 Marshall, 547.

Wright v.

Though a licence for non-residence did not cover the whole of the period for which penalties were sought to be recovered; yet, if there was not sufficient time left uncovered to subject the incumbent to a penalty, the court would interfere to stay the proceedings. Wynne v. Kay, 1 Marshall, 387 : 5 Taunt, 843.

Where a private aet united and annexed a rectory in the diocese of O, to a deanery in the dioeese of S., and dispensed with any presentation to the dean, but left institution and induction still necessary :--Held, that a licence from the bishop of O, for non-residence on the rectory was necessary, as well as a licence for non-resi-dence on the deanery from the bishop of S. Wright v. Legge, 6 Taunt. 48.

A licence of non-residence on a benefice within an archbishop's peculiar, locally situated in another diocese, need not to be registered in the registry of the diocese, but ought to be registered in the registry of the archbishop.

Moore, 5 Taunt. 757.

- Revocation of. ]-A license to the incumbent to absent himself from a living might be revoked, under peculiar circumstances, before 1 & 2 Viet. c. 106, s. 49. Bagshaw v. Bossley, 4 Term Rep. 78.

Excuse for. ]-Imprisonment for a crime is no legal cause of exemption for non-residence within 1 & 2 Viet. c. 106, s. 84. Bartlett, In re, 3 Ex. 28; 18 L. J., Ex. 25; 12 Jur. 140. S. C. and S. P., 12 Q. B. 488; 18 L. J., Q. B. 11; 12 Jur. 726. Total want of health is a sufficient excuse for an absence of twenty years. Scammell v. Willett, 3 Esp. 29.

But the want of a parsonage-house is no excuse for the incumbent's residing out of the parish. Wilhinson v. Allott, Cowp. 429.

A sequestration upon a fi. fa. of a benefice with cure is no excuse for the non-residence of the incumbent. Doe d. Rogers v. Mears, Cowp. 129; Lofft, 602.

A private aet annexed the rectory of H. to the deanery of Windsor, and recited that the necessary residence on the deanery, and the dean's attendance on her majesty, as registrar of the Order of the Garter, would oblige him to be often absent from H., and the act compelled him to appoint a stipendiary curate constantly resident at H. Semble, that this, without more, conferred an excuse for non-residence at H., although in 43 Geo. 3, c. 84, imposing residence on all benefices not therein excepted, this was not enumerated as a ground of exemption or of licence. Wright v. Legge, 6 Taunt. 48.

Where two Benefices held together. ] - A bishop within whose diocese were the perpetual curacy of W., and the rectory of C., addressed an instrument to D., the perpetual curate of W., under the episeopal seal, setting forth that he, the bishop, did, by these presents, "unite, annex and incorporate the rectory of C. . . . to and with the perpetual curacy of W. during your incumbency on the same, . . . so that you, the Where a licence for non-residence had been aforesaid rectory of C. with the perpetual curacy obtained previously to the 1st of July, 1814, pur-suant to 54 Geo. 3, e. 54, but the allowance by the archibishop, required by 43 Geo. 3, e. 84, s. 20, the archibishop, required by 43 Geo. 3, e. 84, s. 20, was not obtained till after that period, the locence, when ratified, was valid from the time teach the people of the parish in which you shall patron, that the instrument, on the whole, did not show an intention to effect such a union; and therefore (W. and C. being fifty miles from each other) that D., while residing at C., was non-resident at W., within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106; and the bishop might, under s. 83, while D. was receiving the profits of both livings, appoint a stipend to the curate of W., and enforce the payment by monition and sequestration of W. Daniel v. Morton, 16 Q. B. 198; 20 L. J., Q. B. 98: 15 Jur. 699.

Held, that the fact of non-payment of the salary must, after the summons and sequestration, be assumed to have been duly proved before the bishop, and it could not be objected that D. had not notice of all the facts. Ib.

XII. CHARGES ON BENEFICES.

13 Eliz. c. 20.]—The 13 Eliz. e. 20, avoids the charge upon the benefice only, and not the deed containing it. Sloane v. Packman, 1 D. & L. 382; 11 M. & W. 770; 12 L. J., Ex. 423.

A grant of a rent-charge by a rector or vicar out of his benefice is void by 13 Eliz. c. 20. Mouys v. Leake, 8 Term Rep. 411.

Ejectment may be maintained upon a term duly created, but assigned to the lessor of the plaintiff by a deed defective under 13 Eliz. c. 20. Doe d. Moore v. Ramsden, 1 N. & M. 489. S. C. nom. Doe d. Wilkes v. Ramsden, 4 B. & Ad. 609.

Charge of Retiring Pension. ] - See McBean v. Deane, aute, col. 1220.

10 & 11 Car. 1.]-A grant of an interest in a benefice is binding upon the grantor, the statute 10 & 11 Car. 1, c. 3 (Ir.), extending only to successors of the grantor. Wise v. Beresford, 2 Con. & L. 282; 3 Dr. & War. 270; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 407.

An annuity granted by a rector, and charged upon his benefice, before the repeal of the 10 & 11 Car. 1, c. 2, s. 7, together with a term of years to secure it, is absolutely void, upon the absence of the rector from his benefice for more than eighty days in a year; but the grant would be valid during the incumbency of the grantor. Robinson v. Wynne, Hayes, 336.

Before 57 Geo. 3.]-A term ereated by an incumbent after the 43 Gco. 3, and before the 57 Geo, 3, for the purpose of charging his rectory with an annuity, may be legally assigned, since the latter act, to a person who advances a sum for the redemption of the annuity. So, though the rector was a party to the assignment, and by the instrument attempted to subject the rectory to the repayment not only of that sum, but also of other moneys then and previously advanced to him by the assignee. Doe d. Brumghton v. Gully, 4 M. & Ry. 249; 9 B. & C. 344; 7 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 201.

For Improvements. - Moneys expended under the statutes for buildings and other improvements upon glebe lands, and duly certified by the bishop, constitute a good legal charge upon a moiety of the benefice. But a court of equity will not cutertain a suit in respect of such a charge unless there be special equitable grounds which call for its interference. Brooke v. Horner, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 272.

not reside" :- Held, assuming that the bishop for glebe improvements, can be recovered only had power to unite the two benefices into one by distress, as pointed out by the 10 Will. 3, c. 6, without the assent of the Crown, chapter, or and no subsequent act according to that statute creates a claim against the benefice, which can be recovered by bill in equity. S. C., 11 Ir. Eq.

> For Repairs. ] -- An incumbent who advances his own money under 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, for repairing and rebuilding a rectory house, may charge the living with the money so advanced. Boyd v. Barker, 4 Drew. 582; 28 L. J., Ch. 445; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 234; 7 W. R. 297.

Warrant of Attorney.]-A warrant of attorney given to confess judgment at the suit of A., reciting a grant of an annuity to A., and that the same was secured by the demise of a rectory, glebe lands, tithes, &c., by the grantor to B., and then declaring that the warrant of attorney was executed for the purpose of securing the annuity, and to the end and intent that a sequestration might be obtained by A., and continued during the continuance of the annuity, for the better securing the same, is a fraud on 13 Eliz. c. 20, as creating a charge on an occlesiastical benefice. Flight v. Salter, 1 B. & Ad. 673; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 67.

A warrant of attorney given by a clergyman, authorising his creditor to use a sequestration, is void under 13 Eliz. c. 20. Newland v. Watkin, 9 Bing. 113; 2 M. & Sc. 174; 1 L. J., C. P. 177. So is a warrant of attorney, which appears upon the face of it to be to secure the payment of an annuity charged upon an ecclesiastical benefice. Sultmarshe v. Hewitt, 3 N. & M. 656;

1 A. & E. 812; 3 L. J., K. B. 188. The deed by which an annuity was granted contained a charge on a rectory, but a warrant of attorney which accompanied the deed, though it recited the deed, gave no authority to sequester the rectory :- Held, that, although the deed was void so far as it operated as a charge upon the rectory, the warrant of attorney was unimpeachable. Faircloth v. Gurney, 9 Bing. 622; 2 M. & Sc. 822; 1 D. P. C. 724.

A beneficed clergyman granted annuities by three several deeds, and made them chargeable on his living, which he conveyed in trust for the grantee, for the more effectually raising and enforcing payment of the annuities out of the living; and he also gave as a security for the payment of the annuities, three warrants of attorney, with defeasances, to confess judgment at the suit of the grantee. On motion to set aside the warrants of attorney, as being charges upon the living in evasion of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, the court held that this did not appear; that the covenants in the annuity deed for payment of the annuity might be good, though the deeds were void, and that payment of the arrears, under these covenants, might well be enforced by the warrants of attorney. Gibbins v. Hooper, 2 B. & Ad. 734.

C., a rector of a parish, and A. B. his surety, executed a warrant of attorney for 3,000%. reciting that, by indenture of the same date, C. for a pecuniary consideration had granted to D. an annuity of 300%, charged by demise upon the rectory; by the indenture it was declared, that D. should hold the judgment in trust to secure the annuity, but that no execution should be issued, unless the annuity should be in arrear fourteen days; and that, if and as often as one Sums to be repaid by succeeding incumbents year's annuity should be in arrear and not paid for fourteen days after demand, then execution executed a warrant of attorner, which was stated might issue against 0, and his estate for 3007. In the defeasance to be given as a collateral Judgment was accordingly entered up, and, a security with the lease :—Heal, that the warrant year's annuity being in arrear more than fourteen was not a charge on the benefice, within 13 Eliz. days after demand, a sequestration issued, under c. 20, s. 1, but it was an independent security for which the tithes and property of the living were a loan. Bendry v. Price, 7 D. P. C. 753; 3 Jur. sequestered to a greater amount than the arrears. 1150. The court on application set aside the execution, but allowed the warrant of attorney and judgment to stand. Kirlen v. Butts, 2 B. & Ad. 736.

A clergyman granted an annuity, and secured it by a conveyance of his benefice, and by a warrant of attorney :-Held, that the conveyance was void, but the warrant of attorney good.

Aberdeen v. Newland, 4 Sim. 281.

A warrant of attorney, the defeasance to which recites that it is given to secure the payment of an annuity, and authorises the plaintiff to issue a fi. fa, de bonis ecclesiasticis for arrears, but does not state that it is given for the purpose of charging the defendant's ecclesiastical living, is valid, though it refers to the annuity deed of the aune date in which that object is distinctly avowed. Colebrack v. Layton, 1 N. & M. 374; 4 B. & Ad. 578; 2 L. J., K. B. 95.

A beneficed clergyman granted, in 1813, an annuity, which he charged on his rectory, demising it for a term of years to a trustee. In 1825, this and other annuities, with the terms thereby created, were by deed transferred to the plaintiff, on his advancing 4,400l. to take them up, and an annuity of 574l. 9s. granted him. The clergyman, by the same deed, again demised his rectory, and also the vicarage of W., for a term, giving power to the plaintiff to sequester the rectory and vicarage if he should think fit. The deed also stated that he had executed a warrant of attorney, authorising the plaintiff to enter up judgment for 8,800%. (being double the sum advanced), which it was intended should be a collateral security only, and that no execution should issue unless the annuity was in arrear for twenty days. The warrant of attorney recited the deed, which stated the grant of the annuity of 1813, and of the other annuities, and the transfer of them to the plaintiff, and the grant of the annuity of 5741, 9s., and for the further securing the regular payment of this annuity, authorised judgment to be entered up against the defendant. In 1882, the plaintiff brought an ejectment to recover the rectory of S., under the term granted in 1813, and in July, 1833, obtained possession. In June, 1833, the annuity being 8611, in arrear, the plaintiff sued out a levari facias, and sequestered the vicarage. rule nisi having been obtained in 1836, to set aside the warrant of attorney, on the ground of its being a charge on a benefice, and a sequestration, on the ground of its being kept in force to satisfy arrears subsequently accruing, all arrears due at the time of the sequestration issuing having been paid ont of the proceeds of S.:—Held, first, that the warrant of attorney was not void, as it did not, in terms, charge the benefice. Moore v. Rumsden, 3 N. & P. 180;

Setting Aside.]—On an application to set aside a warrant of attorney, pursuant to 13 Eliz. e. 20, s. 1, on the ground of its amounting to a charging of a benefice, the court will not look beyond the warrant to ascertain the intention of the parties, and therefore will not read affidavits for that purpose, Bishop v. Hatch, 7 D. P. C. 763; purpose. 4 Jur. 318.

Where the defeasance of a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, executed by A., a beneficed clergyman, stated that it was given to seeme to B. the payment of an annuity granted by A. to B. for his life, described in a certain indenture of even date between A. and B., in which indenture it was agreed that judgment should be entered no on the warrant of attorney, but that no execution should issue until the annuity should have been in arrear fourteen days after any of the days for payment expressed in the indeuture; but that, if the aunuity should be so in arrear, B. might sue out such execution upon or by virtue of the judgment, as he should think fit, for the recovery of the arrears and all costs; the court cannot, upon a question as to the validity of a sequestration granted by the bishop, in pur-suance of a writ of levari facias issued upon the judgment entered up on the warrant of attorney, look at the indenture for the purpose of deciding whether it operated as a charge upon A.'s benefice. Johnson v. Brazier, 3 N. & M. 653; 1 A. & E. 624.

A beneficed clergyman granted an annuity by deed, and made it chargeable on his living, and gave a warrant of attorney, to confess judgment at the sait of the grantee for 3,2001. By the annuity deed it was agreed, that the judgment to be entered up on the warrant of attorney was to be a further security for the munity, and that no execution or sequestration should be issued thereon, other than such sequestration as was therein mentioned, until the annuity should be in arrear; and the grantor then covenanted, that, if the grantee should at any time deem it expedient to sequester the living, it should be lawful for him to issue a sequestration by virtue of the judgment for the 3,200%, or any part. Judgment having been entered up on the warrant of attorney, and the annuity being in arrear, the grantee issued a sequestration for 3,2001, (which sum greatly exceeded the arrears due) and entered into possession of the living. On motion the court refused to set aside the annuity deed, warrant of attorney, and judgment; but directed that the writ of sequestration should continue in force only for the arrears that had become due on the annuity. Britten v. Wait, 3 B. & Ad. 915.

A rector was empowered, by act of parliament, with the consent of the bishop, to raise money by way of annuity on lives, for the purpose of build paid by the rector until his death; the sum thus A vicar demised two vicarages for 99 years at paid amounted to the sum advanced, with interest. At the suit of the succeeding rector, the transaccipal sum of money and interest; and he also tion was set aside on the ground of the equitable ineapacity of the bishop to become the purchaser should be applied in payment of the debts due of the annuity :—Held, that he had a right to to V. and M., with interest, after payment of the avoid the annuity altogether, and that the defen-dant was not entitled to have the secretained, policies of assurance on the life of D., for the what was a proper annuity to have been granted, Ch. 129; 5 Jur. 18.

A rector, who was also the patron of a living, gave warrants of attorney to various creditors, who had mortgages on the advowson, subject to an agreement that the judgment to be entered up by the first mortgagec should have priority over the rest, whenever execution should be issued:—Held, that the agreement pointed so particularly to making the judgment charges on the living that the Court of Chancery could not give effect to it by grauting an injunction Judgment.]-A judgment is not by the 1 & 2 benefice held by the debtor. Bates v. Brothers, 2 Sm. & G. 509; 23 L. J., Ch. 782; 18 Jur. 715; 2 W. R. 636.

A registered judgment against a clergyman does not create a charge upon his benefice entiling the judgment creditor to the appointment of a receiver under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13. Hawkins v. Gathercole, 6 De G. M. & G. 1; 3 Eq. R. 348; 24 L. J., Ch. 332; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 481; 3 W. R. 194.

A judgment is not made a charge upon the ecclesiastical rectories of the Crown, by 3 & 4 Viet. c. 105, s. 22. Sweeny v. Fleming, 4 Ir. Ch. Rep. 23.

— Registering.]—A judgment entered up on a warrant of attorney, given by a beneficed clergyman in the North Riding of Yorkshire, to secure payment of an annuity, need not be registered under 8 Geo. 2, c. 6; for, though it may be enforced by sequestration, the benefice is not affected by the judgment. Cottle v. Warrington, 5 B. & Ad. 447; 2 N. & M. 227.

Assignment of Rent. ]—To a declaration by a sequestrator, for rent due under a lease, whereby D., the rector of S., demised to the defendant the rectory and parsonage, with the tithes, except the parsonage-house, for fourteen years, if the rector should so long live, at a yearly rent, the defendant pleaded, that before the sequestration D. was indebted to V. and M., and requested them to give time for payment, and also requested V. to lend him a further sum, which they consented to do, and V. lent the money upon the terms that D. should execute the lease and an indenture, for the purpose of authorising the de-fendant to apply the rent as the agent and for the benefit of V. and M. That D. executed the lease; and another indenture of the same date, by which, after reciting the demise to the defendant of the rectory and parsonage, with the tithes, except the parsonage-house, and also reciting that by a deed of even date therewith D. had appointed the defendant his receiver, agent and attorney, to collect the tithes, rents, &c. (except as in the lease excepted), with a declaration that the defendant might retain a percentage for his direct, D. covenanted with the defendant, and whereby the land became exonerated from the directed that the surplus of the tithes, rents, &c., land tax, and chargeable for the benefit of the

J., was the attorney and agent of V., and that the was the attorney and agent of V., and that the indenture was made by D. with the defendant as such agent and attorney, and to enable him to apply the rent reserved by the lease in the manner above mentioned; that there were due from D. to V. and M. moneys exceeding the rent due under the lease, and that the defendant had applied the moneys alleged to be due for rent according to the second indenture. The defendant pleaded also, that before the execution of the lease D. was indebted to V. and M. and others, and that in consideration thereof, and of a further anda receiver. Long v. Storie, 3 De G. & Sm. 308. sum to be lent by V., and of the defendant consenting to be V.'s agent, D. agreed with the defendant and V. to charge the rectory of S. with Vict. c. 110 made a charge on the ecclesiastical that sum and the others, by making the lease and appointing the defendant receiver of the tithes, rents, &c., in order that he might apply the rent reserved by the lease in payment of the moneys so to be charged on the benefice; that the money was advanced by V., and that D., in pursuance of the agreement, and in order to charge the benefice, executed the lease, and also an indenture, appointing the defendant receiver, and that the lease was part of the same transaction :-Held, that the former plea did not show any defeasance of the covenant to pay the rent reserved by the lease; but that, under the second indenture, there was an equitable assignment or a valid appropriation of so much of the rent as was necessary to pay V. and M. their debts, and that such assignment was a charge upon the benefice, and therefore the lease, which was part of the same transaction, was void under 13 Eliz. c. 20. Walthew v. Crafts, 6 Ex. 1; 20 L. J., Ex. 257

> Composition in Consideration of future Income. —A composition with a clergyman in considera-tion of his future income being received by a trustee, and applied in liquidation of his debts, after providing for a curate, is void under 13 Eliz. c. 20. Alchin v. Hopkins, 4 M. & Sc. 615; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 99; 3 L. J., C. P. 272.

> Agreement to Charge future Income.]-In 1811, an incumbent duly charged his then present benefice with an annuity, and covenanted that, if he should afterwards be preferred to any other benefice, he would fully charge the same with the annuity; and that in the meantime the same would be charged with the annuity. In 1814, the incumbent was preferred to another benefice, but no legal charge upon it was executed until 1818 .—Hekl, that the deed of 1811 constituted a good equitable charge, which attached upon the new benefice as soon as it was acquired. Metcalfe v. York (Archbishop), 1 Myl. & Cr. 547; 6 Sim. 224; 6 L. J., Ch. 65.

Redemption of Land Tax.]-In 1798, Dr. K., an ecclesiastical incumbent of a living, redeemed the land tax charged on his rectory out of his own estate, under 38 Geo. 3, c. 60, and did not in his contract with the commissioners for the trouble; and it was agreed that he should apply reduction of the national debt declare his option the surplus of the tithes, rents, &c., as D. should to be considered a purchaser of the land tax, incumbent his executors, administrators and a case being the same against a corporation assigns, with the amount of the 31.per cent. consols aggregate as against an ordinary person. transferred, and with the payment of a yearly sum, by way of interest, equal to the amount of the land tax redeemed:—Held, first, that Dr. K., as an ecclesiastical incumbent, had such an estate as is contemplated by 33 Geo. 3, c. 60, s. 37, taken connection with 39 Geo. 3, c. 6, s. 5, and that he cutor. St. John's College v. Fleming, 2 Vern. 390. was entitled to create the charge upon the living. Kilderbee v. Ambrose, 10 Ex. 454; 3 C. L. R. 181; 24 L. J., Ex. 49.

Held, secondly, that his personal representatives were entitled to maintain an action against the succeeding incumbent, for the recovery of the interest accrued due on the amount of the 31. per cent. consols so transferred from the time when the latter succeeded to the rectory. Ib.

As against Lessor's Successor. ]-On grant of advowson to bishop and his successors after death of the then incumbent, a lease by bishop, to commence when the advowson falls in, is void against his successor, if incumbent survive him. Montgomery's Case, Dyer, 244, pl. 60.

A manor belonging to a bishop's sec was usually leased out for lives, at a rent of 497. One of the bishops, on renewing the lease, excepted the demesnes, which were of the value of 321., but he reserved the full ancient rent, 491. He, however, accepted a rent of 171, being the proportion, after deducting for the demesnes, in full of the whole reserved rent. This acceptance will not bind his successor. Dyke v. Bath and Wells (Bishop), 6 Bro. P. C. 365.

A lease of a manor by a dean and chapter not in conformity with an enabling statute, held to have been confirmed as against the chapter by the receipt of rent under it; at all events, for the life of the dean who received the rent; and a lease of the reversion, reserving the rent upon and subject to the former lease; and the holder

Underlease. ]-A lessee for lives from a dean and chapter, without a covenant for perpetual renewal, granted an underlease, for the same lives, of part of the premises, with a totics quoties covenant at a fixed fine. The reversion quoties covenant at a fixed fine. having become vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners, they refused to renew, but offered to sell the reversion. The lessee purchased :-Held. that the sub-lessee was not entitled to perpetual renewal at the specified fine, but was entitled to a conveyance of the reversion on the terms of paying a due proportion of the consideration and expenses of the purchase, regard being had to his existing interest and the extent of the property comprised in his lease. Postlethwaite v. Lewth-waite, 2 John. & H. 237; 31 L. J., Ch. 584; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 791; 6 L. T. 779; 10 W. R. 459.

Time, of Essence of Contract. |-Time is, to a great extent, of the essence of contract entered into with an ecclesiastical corporation. Therefore, where A. agreed to take a concurrent lease of a dean and chapter, and to pay the fine in January, but was not ready with the money in March following, a bill filed by him for specific performance was dismissed with costs. - 42 Geo. 3, c. 116.]-By 42 Geo. 3, e. 116, s. 100, surplus stock in court arising from the sale of land for the redemption of land tax may be laid out in manors, messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments, to be settled and conveyed to like uses to those upon which the lands taken were settled. A petition by a vicar for the repayment to him out of the fund in court of money disbursed by him for repairs to the vicarage-house was dismissed as an unauthorised investment under the act, the decisions allowing such an investment under the Lands Clauses Aet not being held binding on the court in a case under that act. # 5. DILAPIDATIONS.

Liability—Frebendary.]—An action for dilapidations of a prebendal house may be maintained by a succeeding prebendary against his pre-decessor. Radeliff v. D' Oyley, 2 Term Rep. 639;

Vicar-Choral. ]-A vicar-choral in a cathedral church, who succeeds or is appointed to a house of his predecessor in the vicar-choralship, is within the custom of ecclesiastical dilapidations, and therefore his representatives may be sucd in respect of dilapidations at his death. Gleaves v. Parjitt, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 838; 29 L. J., C. P. 216; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 805.

Executors of Fredecessor—Fayment pari passu.]—Where the bishop has, under s. 34 —Where Recessive rectors had been in possession the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, andel of land for above fifty years past, but, in an

Monk, In re, Wayman v. Monk, 56 L. J., Ch. 809; 35 Ch. D. 583; 56 L. T. 856; 35 W. R. 691 : 52 J. P. 198,

> - Action by Executors of Successor. -- An action is maintainable by the executors of a deceased incumbent against the executors of his predecessor, for dilapidations which occurred during the incumbency of the predecessor. Bunbury v. Hewson, 3 Ex. 558; 18 L. J., Ex.

> The incumbent of a benefice under a sequestration was liable to repay instalments for glebe improvements to his predccessor's executor, Sums were also ascertained, under a commission, as due for dilapidations in the time of the pre-decessor, which were to be set off under the 12 Geo. 1, c. 10. Semble, the bishop could require a molety of the income received by the sconestrator to be deducted for the dilapidations: but, semble, the right of set-off is connected with but, semble, the right of set-off is conflected with the liability to pay the instalments which did not apply to the first year's income, and therefore no deduction should be made from it. Brooke v. Horner, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 214.

In an action by the successor against the exeentors of a deccased rector for dilapidations, the declaration alleged that the deceased was rector of the parish church of T. cum J., and was seised in right of the rectory buildings, and also of glebe lands lying and being, to wit, in the parish afore-said. The rectory consisted of the parish of T., of which the plaintiff was rector, and of the parishes of I. and C., of which he was vicar: Held, that the plaintiff could not recover in respect of dilapidations in the parish of C. Warren v. Lugger, 3 Ex. 579; 18 L. J., Ex. 256.

- Extension of Custom to Wales. ]-The custom of England for rectors and vicars to leave their vicarages in repair to their successors was transferred to Wales by 27 Hen. 8, c. 26. Bunbury v. Heicson, supra.

----- Perpetual Curate.]--- A perpetual curate, who is not removable by his patron, and who holds a house and buildings as curate, and as annexed to his curacy, is bound to repair. Mason v. Lambert, 12 Q. B. 795; 17 L. J., Q. B. 366; 12. Jur. 1045.

— Trustees of Vicar.]—In a declaration by a vicar against his prodecessor for dilapidations, he averred that he was seised in right of his vicarage: it appeared that part of the premises was copyhold, and devised to the master and senior fellows of a college, in trust to permit the vicar to receive the profits arising therefrom, after deducting certain charges which might accrue to the lord of the manor, or the expenses attending the repairs of the premises:—Held, that the legal estate was vested in the trustees; that the use was not executed within 9 Geo. 2. e. 36; and consequently that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Browne v. Ramsden, 2. Moore, 612.

action for dilapidations brought by the present bound to put the rectory-house into a finished against the late rector, it appeared that the absolute seisin in fee of the same land was in certain devisees, since the 9 Geo, 2, c, 36, and that no conveyance was enrolled according to the first section of that act, nor any disposition of it made to any college, &c., according to the fourth section :- Held, that no presumption could be made of any such conveyance enrolled (which, if it existed, the party might have shown), and consequently that the rector had no title to the land, as the statute avoids all other grants in trust for any charitable use made otherwise than is thereby directed; although in fact it appeared that one of those devisees was the then rector, and that the title to the rectory was in Balliol College, Oxford, Wright v. Smuthies, 10 East, 409: 10 R. R. 337.

Where Benefice under Sequestration, 1 When a benefice was under sequestration at the death of the incumbent, and after the avoidance the buildings were inspected by the diocesan surveyor, and the bishop made an order pursuant to the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, s. 34 stating the cost of the repairs required, and declaring the executors or administrators of the incumbent liable for the same :- Held, that the sequestrator was not liable under s. 53 for the cost of the repairs, and was not entitled to deduct the same from the profits of the benefice in his hands. Jones v. Dangerfield, 45 L. J., Ch. 161; 1 Ch. D. 438; 84 L. T. 387; 24 W. R. 203.

- Fences of Allotted Lands. |-- Under an inclosure act, lands were fenced in and allotted to the vicar and his snecessors, in lieu of tithes. The vicar died, leaving the fences out of repair:
—Held, that his executors were liable to be sued by the succeeding vicar for dilapidations. Bird v. Relph, 4 N. & M. 878; 2 A. & E. 773; 4 L. J., K. B. 128.

— Glebe Land.]—Neglect to cultivate the glebe land in a husbandlike manner, is not a dilapidation for which an incumbent can recover. Therefore an action, as for dilapidations, does not lie against the excentors of a prior incumbent for miscultivation of the glebe land. Bird v. Relph, 1 N. & M. 415; 4 B. & Ad. 826; 2 L. J., K. B. 99.

The right of a rector to recover, from the representatives of his predecessor, damages for waste, is confined to the case of dilapidations to houses and buildings, and does not extend to waste committed by digging gravel in the glebe. Ross v. Adewch, 37 L. J., C. P. 290; L. R. 3 C. P. 655; 19 L. T. 202; 16 W. R. 1193.

- Extent of ]-An incumbent of a living is bound to keep the parsonage-house, buildings, and chancel in good and substantial repair, restoring and rebuilding when necessary, according to the original form, without addition of modern improvement; but he is not nature of ornament, such as painting (unless that is necessary to preserve exposed timber from decay), and whitewashing and papering; and in an action for dilapidations against the executors of a deceased rector by the successor, the damages are to be calculated upon this principle, Wise v. Metcalfe, 10 B. & C. 299; 5 M. & Ry. 235; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 126.

state of repair, but are only bound to restore what is actually in decay, and to make such repairs as are absolutely necessary for the pre-servation of the premises. If the present incumbent has repaired with timber which grew on the glebe, the executors of the late incumbent are entitled to be allowed for the value of such timber in the estimate of dilapidations due from them. Pervival v. Cooke, 2 Car. & P. 460; 31 R. R. 677.

- Principle of Law of. |- The right of a succeeding rector to bring an action for dilapidations against the executor or administrator of his predecessor rests upon particular custom, derived from ecclesiastical law; and it is an incident of such custom that the claim in respect of dilapidations is to be postponed in the distri-bution of assets to the payment of specialty and simple contract debts. Bryan v. Clay, 1 El. & Bl 38; 22 L. J., Q. B. 23; 17 Jur. 276; 1 W. R. 20.

- How Discharged.] - The claim of an inenmbent against the representatives of his predecessor, for dilapidations, will be paid out of equitable assets, pari passu with other creditors, though at law it would be postponed to simple contract creditors. Bissett v. Buryess, 23 Beav. 278; 26 L. J., Ch. 697; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1221.

17 Geo. 3, c. 53.]-The 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, enables the incumbent of a living, with the consent of the bishop and patron, to add to as well as to repair or rebuild a rectory-house, and necessary or sufficient repairs under that act mean such repairs or additions as the bishop thinks fit, for making the rectory a fit and a comfortable habitation for a clergyman. Buyd v. Barker, 4 Drew. 582; 28 L. J., Ch. 445; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 234; 7 W. R. 297.

Separate Actions for Separate Dilapidations.] -The successor may have separate actions against the executor of the late rector, for dilapidations in different parts of the rectory. Young v. Munby, 4 M. & S. 183.

Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871-Reckoning of Time. |-Within three calendar months after the avoidance of a benefice by resignation the bishop of the diocese directed the surveyor to inspect the buildings which were out of repair. After the expiration of the three months the surveyor inspected and reported to the bishop, who thereupon, under the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 43), made an order for the cost of repairs. The new inenmbent having brought an action upon the order against the late incumbent, the latter pleaded that the surveyor neither inspected nor reported within the three months limited by s. 29 :- Held, that this was no defence to the action, for the three months mentioned in the bound to supply or maintain anything in the section refer not to the surveyor's inspection and report, but to the bishop's direction to the surveyor. Gleaves v. Marriner, 1 Ex. D. 107; 34 L. T. 496; 24 W. R. 539.

The provision of s. 29 as to the time within which the bishop is to direct the surveyor to inspect and report upon the buildings of a benefice after its avoidance is directory only, and not imperative; and a direction to inspect The executors of a deceased incumbent are not and report made by a bishop more than three

On Exchange of Livings. ]-Two clergymen, being possessed of livings, agreed to exchange the one for the other, with the consent of their respective patrons, and the livings were accordingly resigned into the hands of the bishop, and each party was inducted into the other of them. There was no specific agreement entered into upon the subject of dilapidations, but neither party at the time contemplated a claim for dilapidations:—Held, in an action by one of the incumbents against the other, and his successor, for dilapidations, that he was entitled to recover. Downes v. Craig, 9 M. & W. 166; 11 L. J., Ex. 239.

An agreement between two incumbents to exchange their respective livings in their present condition, and that one of them shall not call upon the other to pay for dilapidations, is not necessarily simoniacal, for the dilapidations may be equal or nearly so in each living, or of so insignificant an amount as not to be worth the expense of valuation. Goldham v. Edwards, 16 C. B. 487; 24 L. J., C. P. 189; 1 Jur. (8.8) 684; 3 W. R. 551. S. C. and S. P., 17 C. B. 141. Affirmed in error, 18 C. B. 889; 25 L. J., C. P. 2021, 1 Jur. 686; 25 L. J., C. P. 223 : 2 Jur. (N.s.) 493 ; 4 W. R. 550.

After the passing of the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act of 1871, an agreement was entered into by two incumbents for the exchange of the livings they then held, and one term of such agreement was that neither party should make any claim upon the other for dilapidations :-Held, that the agreement was not in contra-vention of the above act. Wright v. Davies, 46 L. J., C. P. 41; 1 C. P. D. 638; 35 L. T. 188; 24 W. R. 841-C. A.

6. WASTE.

Liability—Of Bishop.]—Waste by a bishop is the subject of prohibition. Winchester (Bishop) v. Wolgar, 3 Swanst, 493.

The clerk of a patron who had recovered in quare impedit filed a bill under the act of 1 Geo. 2, c. 23, against the bishop presenting and his clerk, for an account of the profits of the benefice pending the litigation; and it contained charges of acts of interference with the profits and of waste by the cutting of trees and otherwise, "by the defendants or one of them, and of a conversion of a portion of the profits to their own use." Upon a general demurrer by the bishop, which was allowed:—Held, that a bishop as ordinary is not liable to any account at common law, or under the statute West 2, c. 5, giving damages in quare impedit; or to the account of the profits given under the 1 Geo. 2, c. 23.

Crampton v. Meath (Bishop), San. & Sc. 297.

Held, also, that, although a bishop may by interfering in the defence of a suit, or otherwise, make himself a principal in the transaction and accountable as such, yet that joining as ordinary with his clerk in defence of the quare impedit was not such an act as to render him personally answerable for the profits which accrued during the litigation, nor were the other acts charged sufficient to have that effect, there being no direct and positive charge of any act done by the bishop months after the avoidance of a benefice may be court under the 1 Geo. 2, c. 23, to account for valid. Catdom v. Piretl., 46 L. J., C. P. 541; 2 the waste committed, and that the incumbent's C. P. D. 562; 36 L. T. 469; 23 W. R. 773. proceeding in the Ecclesiastical Court, under 11 Will. 3, c. 6, and 12 Geo. 3, c. 10. Ib.

The court may interfere at the suit of the Crown to restrain a bishop from wasting the property of the sec, or at the suit of the patron of a living to restrain the incumbent from wasting the glebe-house or lands; but, semble, as to the church and churchyard, the Ecclesiastical Court having, ratione loci, the proper jurisdiction, this court has never interfered to restrain the acts of the incumbent with respect to them. Fitzwilliam (Earl) v. Moore, 3 Ir. Eq. B. 615; Fl. & K. 287.

- Of Lessee. Injunction to restrain the lessee for years of the temporalities of a bishop, under a lease confirmed by the dean and chapter, and without impeachment of waste, from felling timber. Winchester (Bishop) v. Wolgar, 3 Swanst. 493.

Lessee for years sans waste, remainder in fee to a bishop. Lessec enjoined from digging the ground for brick. London (Bishop) v. Webb, 1 P. Wms, 527.

- Of Dean and Chapter, ] - Chapter not being entitled to fell timber on the deanery lands except for the purpose of repairs, a lease granted by it of certain "woods, groves, hedge-rows, and springs," was construed not to include the right of felling timber, and a bill by the lessee for an account of timber felled during the lease by the lessors, was dismissed with costs.

Herring v. St. Paul's (Dean and Chapter), 3 Swanst. 492; 2 Wils. Ch. 1; 19 R. R. 259.

Timber on the estates of ecclesiastical corporations is a fund for the benefit of the church,

Deans and chapters, like other ecclesiastical persons, are not liable to be restrained in cases of waste, either by prohibition or injunction, except in the Ecclesiastical Court, or at the suit of the Crown. It seems that the right to cut timber for the purpose of repairs extends to selling timber and applying the produce. Wither v. Winchester (Dean), 3 Mcr. 421; 17 R. R.

- Of Prebendary.]-Writs of prohibition and assistance, to prevent a prebendary from committing waste on his prebend. Actand v. Atwell, 3 Swanst, 499, n.

- Injunction against Incumbent-Against Bishop—Account of Profits.]—Patron of a living may have an injunction against the incumbent to stay waste. So may the attorney-general against a bishop. But they cannot pray any account of the profits for their own benefit as patrons. Knight v. Moseley, Ambl. 176.

- Of Parson or Vicar, ]-In respect to waste, a parson or vicar is not to be considered as merely lessee for years or as tenant for life under a will or settlement. The court will not restrain an incumbent from ploughing up meadow infested with moss and weeds for the purpose of laying of Clerk. Held, also, that such clerk Seav. 35t | 14t L J, Ch. 24t ; 9 Jun. 256.

to an injunction to restrain the incumbent from | of a rectory or of a vicarage, but not fixed into ploughing up ancient meadows. Ib.

Of Vicar. ]-Although, as a general rule, a vicar has a right to cut timber for the purposes of applying it specifically to repairs of the vicarage premises, and possibly a right to sell the timber and buy with the proceeds an equivalent amount of timber in a more convenient place for the purpose of using it in such repairs, he has no right to cut timber for the purpose of selling it to raise a fund to repair dilapidations in the vicarage premises arising from his own 38 L. J., Ch. 617; L. R. 8 Eq. 417; 20 L. T. 868; 17 W. R. 879.

- Of Widow of Rector,]-Injunction to stay waste granted against the widow of a rector, at the suit of the patroness, during vacancy. Hoskins v. Featherstone, 2 Bro. C. C. 552.

Of Rector. A rector may cut down timber for the repairs of the parsonage-house, or chancel, but not for any common purpose. Stracky v. Francis, 2 Atk. 217.

He is entitled to botes for repairing barns and outhouses belonging to the parsonage. Ib.

Repairs. Injunction granted restraining a rector from felling timber on the rectory lands, save only for necessary repairs. Marthorough (Duke) v. St. John, 5 De G. & Sm. 174; 21 L. J., Ch. 381; 16 Jnr. 810.

Semble, if other timber had been cut, and sold merely for the purpose of providing timber more suitable for repairs, the court would not have interfered by injunction. Ib.

The parson, with the consent of the patron and ordinary, may cut timber and open mines, and the court will have no difficulty in directing timber to be cut, and the purchase-money to be applied for the benefit of the living. Ib.

There is no principle of law on which a rector can obtain more extensive privileges as to waste than an ordinary tenant for life. Ib.

-Building Schoolhouse in Churchyard. ]-Where a bill was filed, by a parishiouer on behalf of himself and all others, for an injunction to restrain the defendant, the rector of the parish, from building a schoolhouse in the churchyard, the court refused the injunction, the injury not being of an irreparable nature.

Erecting Buildings in Substitution of Others. |-The executors of a rector are not liable to an action in the nature of waste for pulling down a building on the rectory, and substituting another in a different part, unless the value of the estate is thereby impaired, the burdens upon it increased, or the evidence of title impaired. Not, therefore, if the rector suffers a farm building adjoining the rectory-house to go to decay, and in the meantime erects a better building for the same purpose a mile from the house, but in a situation more convenient for the farming business, as carried on at and from the time of the substitution, although no faculty or licence is obtained for the alteration. Huntley v. is obtained for the alteration. Huntley v. Russell, 13 Q. B. 572; 18 L. J., Q. B. 239; 13 Jur. 837.

- Taking away Movable Buildings. |--- A cottage and farm building placed upon the soil without the consent of the patron and ordinary.

the ground, and intended at the time of the erection to be removable at will, may be removed without incurring liability for waste or dilapidation, although posts on which it stands have, by the weight of the building, become imbedded in the ground to the depth of a foot. Ib.

- Excavating Gravel. - A gravel-pit on the soil of a rectory was opened and kept open by orders of magistrates, under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 29, and 5 & 6 Will, 4, c. 50, s. 54, for the repair of the highways: the soil was not sloped down nor filled up according to s. 31 of the former, or s. 55 of the latter act, nor was any step taken during the incumbency to enforce this duty upon the surveyors; and the excavation was increased from one rood to four acres in width. While the pit was so kept open some gravel was also dug from it by the rector's lessee of the soil, and sold to private persons, without sloping or filling up the cavities :- Held, in an action against the executors of the rector for dilapidations, that the making or continuance of the excavations for repair of the highways was not chargeable upon the rector or his representatives as an act of waste. Ib.

Held, also, that the executors might allege the compulsory act of the magistrates and surveyors, under a plea that no waste was committed by their testator, or in his time, with his permission; and that the omission to slope or fill up the excavations, or to enforce this duty on the surveyors, did not operate retrospectively so as to make the digging of the soil an act of waste done or suffered by the rector, and to support issues affirming that the rector wasted the soil and permitted it to be wasted, by excavating, &c., without filling up, &c. Ib.

Held, also, that the digging up and sale to private persons of gravel from the pits opened under order of the imagistrates, and improperly kept open by the surveyors, was, as far as it went, equivalent to an original opening by the rector, and was a waste for which the executors were liable in an action for dilapidations. Ib.

Removing Hot-house.]-A rector erected in the garden of the rectory, apart from the rectory-house, hot-houses about seventy feet long and between ten and twenty feet high. They consisted of a frame and glasswork, resting on brick walls about two feet high, and imbedded in mortar on these walls:—Held, that he, in his lifetime, was, or his executors in a reasonable. time after his death were, entitled to remove them, without incurring any liability for dilapidations or waste. Martin v. Roc, 7 El. & Bl. 237; 26 L. J., Q. B. 129; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 465; 5 W. B. 263.

Opening Mines. ]-The coal under parts of the glebe of a vicarage had at different times since 1756, with the consent of the vicars for the time being, been gotten by the persons working adjoining collieries, and royalties had been paid to the vicas for the time being, the working being conducted solely by underground passages from the adjoining collieries without entering on the surface of the glebe :-Held, that no presumption could be drawn from these facts that there had been any grant authorising the vicars to open mines. Burtlett v. Phillips, 4 De G. & J. 414.

The incumbent of a living cannot open mines

Quere, whether he can do so with such consent without the sanction of the ecclesiastical commissioners. 1b.

The patron of the living is the proper person to institute a suit to restrain the opening of mines, and generally the only proper person, but, semble, the ordinary may take proceedings to prevent waste by collusion between the patron and incumbent. Ib.

- Consent of Ecclesiastical Commissioners -Unauthorised Working-Right to Sue. ]-The consent of the ecclesiastical commissioners is necessary before any mine can be opened under glebe land. Without such consent no mine may be legally opened, even with the consent of the patron and ordinary. Holden v. Weekes (1 J. & H. 278) and Marlborough (Duke) v. St. John (5 De G. & Sm. 174), considered. Though an open mine may lawfully be worked by an incumbent, an unauthorised opening and working by a former rector does not make a mine an open one so as to enable succeeding incumbents to work it without such consent. Under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts, 1842 and 1858, the ecclesiastical commissioners have a clear interest in mines under the glebe, and are, therefore, entitled to under the globe, and are, therefore, childled to sue in order to prevent waste. Huntley, Russell (13 Q. B. 572) and Bartlett v. Phillips (4 De G. & J. 414), considered. Exclesiational Commissioners v. Wookbowse, 64 L. J., Ch. 329; [1805] I Ch. 552; 13 R. 372; 72 L. T. 257; 48 W. R. 305; 60 J. P. 200.

Jurisdiction to order Restoration. ] - The Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to direct the restoration of the interior of a church to its former condition, from which it has been altered, the loan could not affect the commissioners' Cardinall v. Molyneux, 4 De G. F. & J. 117; 7 Jnr. (N.S.) 854; 4 L. T. 605.

The Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to order an incumbent of a church, who had made alterations in the building by removing the pews, and substituting chairs, to take the necessary proceedings to obtain a faculty from the bishop of the diocese for the restoration of the church. Ib.

An injunction was granted to restrain the alteration of the walls or brickwork of a church without the authority of the archdeacon or bishop, on the plaintiff's undertaking to apply to the proper ecclesiastical court for authority to restore the church to its original state. Ib.

7. REPAIRS.

Loans for.]—The 5 Geo. 4, e. 36, s. 1, gives to churchwardens and overseers of parishes the power to borrow money from the Public Works Loan Commissioners for the purpose of building or repairing churches, and gives the commissioners the power to make loans to them for such purposes. It then confers on the churchwardens the power to make rates for the repay-ment of such loans, "by annual or half-yearly instalments within the period of twenty years, at farthest," from the advancing of any such sums respectively :-Held, that after the expiration of the twenty years the churchwardens and overseers had no power to make a rate for the purposes of paying money borrowed under the act, and that, consequently, a mandamus commanding them to do so could not be sustained. sonal estate, provided they did not exceed a fixed

Holden v. Weckes, 1 J. & H. 278; 30 L. J., Ch., Reg. v. All Saints, Wigan, Churchwardens, 35; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1288; 3 L. T. 437; 9 W. R. 94. 1 App. Cas. 611; 35 L. T. 381; 25 W. R. 128 -H. L. (E.)

The 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104. s. 15, does not affect this matter. Ib.

A power of that sort given in any particular act must be exercised in exact accordance with the authority given, and the restrictions imposed, by the act itself. Ib.

A loan was made under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36, s. 1 for the purpose of repairing a church. All the formalities required by the act were duly com-plied with before the loan was granted. A portion of the money was expended in repairing the chancel, and the rest in repairing the other portions of the church. Subsequently a rate was made in due form to repay the loan. In a suit against a ratepayer for refusal to pay the rate, he alleged in his answer that it was the duty of the rector alone to repair the chancel; that the preliminary resolution of the vestry contemplated the application of a portion of the loan to the repair of the chancel; that a portion of the loan was expended in repairing the chancel; that the consent of the bishop, and the advance by the commissioners, were given and made respectively on the representation that the loan was wanted for purposes that did not include the repair of the chancel; and that, therefore, the rate was void:—Held, that the word "church" in the statute included the chancel, and that, therefore, a portion of the loan might properly be expended in repairing the chancel. Rippin v. Bastin, 38 L. J., Ecc. 33; L. R. 2 Ecc. 386; 20 L. T. 622.

Held, also, that even if the word "church" did not include the chancel, yet, as all the required formalities had been observed before the loan was granted, an improper expenditure of right to repayment; and that the rate, being duly made in form, was valid. Ib.

Liability of Incumbent for.]-The incumbent of a district church is not the owner or occupier of the church within the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Viet, c. 122). Reg. v. Lee, 48 L. J., M. C. 22; 4 Q. B. D. 75; 39 L. T. 605; 27 W. R. 151. See col. 1296.

Part of a district church became out of repairso as to become a dangerous structure as defined by the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855. The Metropolitan Board of Works took proceedings. under'ss. 69-81 against the owner and occupier, and, upon the repairs not being executed, themselves did the necessary repairs. The metro-politan police magistrate made an order upon the incumbent of the church for the payment of the costs of these repairs; subsequently he refused to issue a distress warrant to levy the amount of these costs as provided by the act, and the board applied to the court for a mandanus to compel him to do so:—Held, that the mandamus should not issue, as the incumbent was not the owner of the church, Ib.

Promise to rebuild by Patron since deceased. -When the patron of a living which had become vacant, who had promised, on the appointment of a new incumbent, to rebuild the parsonage-house at his own expense, died before any new incumbent was appointed, the court gave leave to the trustees of his will to defray the expense of the rebuilding out of his residuary per

Eq. 76: 19 W. R. 794.

Trust for.]—Where property is held by trustees to be employed in the repairs of a chapel, and any surplus is to be distributed among the poor of the parish, the trustees will not be ordered to rebuild the chapel instead of merely repairing it, although it is in a very dilapidated condition, and unequal to the wants of the inhabitants, and the trust estate has increased very largely since its first institution. Booth, In re, 14 W. R. 761.

Duty of Parish as to. |- It is the duty of a parish to repair the fabric of the parish church, and the neglect or refusal to perform this duty will subject those who so neglect or refuse to punishment in the Ecclesiastical Court. Gosling v. Veley, 4 H. L. Cas. 679; 1 C. L. R. 950; 17 Jur.

XIV. SEQUESTRATION.

What, ]-A sequestration is a charge upon the benefice of a clergyman within 18 Geo. 2, c. 20, and it is immaterial in this respect in what manner the sequestrator has disposed of the rents and profits. Pack v. Tarpley, 1 P. & D. 478; 9 A. & E. 468; 2 W. W. & H. 88; 8 L. J., M. C. 93. A sequestration is a charge upon the rents and profits, including the glebe lands of the benefice, except the parsonage-house, in which the incumbent is bound to reside. Ib.

Judgment. - A judgment creditor, who has obtained a sequestration before a sequestration is issued out by the assignees in bankruptey, is not a creditor holding security within s. 184 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, so as to be entitled to only a ratable part of his debt. Hopkins v. Clarke, 5 B. & S. 753; 33 L. J., Q. B. 334; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1071; 11 L. T. 204; 12 W. R. 1029—Ex. Ch.

A judgment is not per se a lien upon a benefice, but it is attached upon it by a sequestration. Wise v. Beresford, 2 Con. & L. 282; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 407; 3 Dr. & War. 276,

The sequestration will not by relation give to the judgment creditor priority over an annuitant who became such after the entry of the judgment but before the sequestration issued. Ib.

What may be taken.]-Semble, ecclesiastical estate may be taken in execution, and in bankruptcy. Meymott, Ex parte, 1 Atk. 200.

Position of Bishop granting. - Where a bishop grants sequestration against the effects of a clergyman within his diocese, he stands in the same situation as a sheriff, and the court has the same power over him as over that officer. Rew v. London (Bishop), 1 D. & R. 486; 24 R. R.

How affected by Sale of Advowson. ]-S. mortgaged the advowson of the vicarage of St. Giles, Camberwell, to the plaintiff, as a security for the repayment of two sums of 7,500l, and 5,000l. advanced by the plaintiff to him, and afterwards conveyed the advowson, subject to the payment of the two sums, to the defendant, who, as a security for the payment, executed a warrant of attorney, whereby he confessed judgment at the suit of the plaintiff for 25,000l. The vicarage having become vacant, the defendant was pre- satisfaction on the judgment, and that the writ Hotham's Trusts (Lord), In re, L. R. 12 sented, and default having been made in payment of the interest on the several sums, plaintiff caused a writ of sequestration to issue against the vicarage. The plaintiff subsequently died, and his representatives afterwards obtained a decree of foreclosure of the equity of redemption, and sold the advewson for 11,000%. On a motion for a rule to set aside the writ of sequestration : Held, that the sale was not a satisfaction of the indement, and that the sequestration remained in full force and praffected. Long v. Williams. 26 L. T. 878.

> Position of Rector and Tenant.]-Where a notice given by a rector to the tenant of his glebe land expired previously to the time when a sequestration was read:—Held, that the rector might, after receiving a weekly allowance from the tenant, still maintain an ejectment, laying the demise between the time of the expiration of the notice and the reading of the sequestration. Doe d. Morgan v. Bluch, 3 Camp. 447; 14 R. R.

> Before Bankruptcy,]—Order made to prevent the bankrupt from availing himself of a sequestration, obtained by him before his bankruptey, of the rents and profits of a rectory. Hull, Exparte, 1 Deac. 87; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 392; 4 L. J., Bk. 83.

No Priority between Trustees in Bankruptcy. Held, by James and Cotton, L.JJ. (diss. Brett. L.J.), that the effect of s. 88 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is only to give priority to a sequestration issued by the trustee in the bankruptcy of a beneficed elergyman over a sequestration issued by an individual creditor in respect of a debt provable in the bankruptey, but that the section has no application as between segnestrations issued by the trustees in two different bank-rupteies. Chick, Ex parte, Meredith, In re, 11 Ch. D. 731—C. A.

Bankruptcy of Incumbent-Effect of Order of Discharge. - In a sequestration of the benefice of a bankrupt elergyman, where the debts provable in the bankruptcy were nupaid, although the bankrupt had obtained his order of discharge: -Held, that the order of discharge did not entitle the debtor to the income of his benefice. Lawrence v. Adams, 75 L. T. 410.

— Inability of Ordinary to relax Sequestration where Bankruptcy discharged. The ordinary has no jurisdiction to relax the sequestration of the benefice of a bankrupt clergyman if the debts provable in the bankruptcy are unpaid, although the bankrupt has obtained his order of discharge. Lawrence, In re, [1896] P.

Action for Account.]—A vicar suffered judgment to be entered up against him for a debt in virtue of which the tithes, rents, and profits of the vicarage were sequestered; after the sequestration had continued for some time, the vicar filed a bill against the judgment creditor, the sequestrator, and the bishop, praying that an account might be taken of the tithes, rents, and profits received by the sequestrator, and the payments thereout to the judgment creditor; and that upon payment of what should be found due to the creditor, he might be ordered to enter up of sequestration might be discharged:—Held, balance of profits of the benefice which have that the bill must be dismissed with costs against accrued during the vacancy. Russell v. Lay, the bishop and the sequestrator on the ground 66 L. J., Q. B. 582. of want of privity, and against the judgment creditor on the ground that the matter was one entirely for the court of common law in which the judgment was entered up, and that the Court of Chancery had no jurisdiction to decree an account to be taken in such a case. Williams v. Icimey, 23 L. T. 100.

A suit is sustainable for an account on foot of a sequestration over a benefice in the diocese, against the personal representatives of two successive bishops and against the present bishop, on the allegation of loss to the creditor by the default of the se questrator during their respective bishopries. Quere, if a sequestration, not issued for ever be received and paid to the vicar of the until the levari on which it is founded is out vicarage in augmentation thereof." In 1841 a of return, be not void, although the benefice was in the bishop's hands under a prior sequestration. Hogg v. Garrett, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 559.

A sequestrator being in possession of a rectory, under a sequestration issued by a creditor of the rector, a second creditor, having obtained a second sequestration, is entitled to an account in conity against the first sequestrator, and payment of the surplus after satisfaction of the first creditor; nor are prior incumbrancers, who have

Bill by a vicar against a sequestrator for an account of profits during the vacancy, the bishop must be a party. Jones v. Barret, Bunb. 192.

Profits of Benefice of Bankrupt before. ]-The profits of a benefice of a bankrupt clergyman do not vest in the assignces under 24 & 25 Viet. c, 134, s, 135, until the assignees have obtained a sequestration and the same has been published. Sequestration and the same has been profished. Hopkins v. Clarke, 5 B. & S. 753; 33 L. J., Q. B. 334; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1071; 11 L. T. 204; 12 W. R. 1029—Ex. Ch.

Fruits of Benefice during.]-When a living is vacant by reason of the suspension of a clerk under sentence founded on proceedings under the Church Discipline Act (3 & 4 Viet. c. 86), and the proceeds have been sequestrated, the fruits of the sequestration belong to the bishop, as chief pastor of the church, subject to the duty of providing for the services. Thakeham, In re, L. R. 12 Eq. 494; 24 L. T. 902; 19 W. R. 1001.

Queen's Bench, a sequestrator had been regularly appointed and was in receipt of the profits of a vicarage, and afterwards a second sequestration to a different sequestrator was issued and published by virtue of a decree of suspension for eighteen mouths pronounced in a proceeding in the Arches Court against the viear under the Church Discipline Act :- Held, that such second sequestration had the effect of suspending, from the time of its publication, all right to receive the profits of the vicarage under the first sequestra-tion. Bunter or Fisher v. Cresswell, 14 Q. B. 825; 19 L. J., Q. B. 357; 14 Jur. 692.

the sequestrator of a vacant ecclesiastical benefice, necessary repairs to the buildings at 1401, and

Arrears of Income as between Vicar and Sequestrators.] — A. in 1763 bequeathed the residue of her personal estate to trustees, "for the sole use and benefit of the vicar for the time being of the vicarage of N. . . . . such vicar for the time being, in the forenoon of every 21st June for ever, preaching in the parish church, immediately after divine service, an anniversary sermon in commemoration of her and of that her begnest." The testatrix also directed that the yearly or other dividends or proceeds of the whole of her residuum should from time to time vicar was duly instituted; but he was ignorant of the existence of the bequest, and of the duty thereby imposed on him, and no sermons were prenched by him. In 1847 a sequestration was issued against him. In 1852 he took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act, and an assignee of his estate and effects was appointed. In 1858 the vicar became aware of the bequest, and the preaching of the sermons was resumed. In 1863 there was a large sum of money in the hands of not obtained sequestration, necessary parties to the trustees, representing arrears of the dividends the suit. Caddington v. Withy, 2 Swaust. 174; on the estate accrued from 1841 to 1858. Thecourt assumed the assent of the ordinary. Upon the question who was entitled to such sum :-Held, that the vicar was entitled to so much of the sum as represented the arrears accrued prior to 1847, and the sequestrators to that which represented the arrears accrued subsequently to that period. Parker, In re, 32 Beav. 654; 9 L. T. 72; 11 W. R. 937.

> Sequestrator-Charges of. ]-A sequestrator has no right to charge the estate with the expense of andit dinners if the incumbent expressly forbids it; but, by lying by and not objecting at the time, the incumbent cannot afterwards object to such charge if it is the practice to give such dinners to the payers of tithe. Sanders v. Penleuse, 1

Where the bishop appointed a stranger to act as curate during the sequestration, at a salary, with the use of the parsonage-house, the payment of the rates of the house out of the estate by the sequestrator seems reasonable; but the incumbent who had acted as curate on the same terms. and seen the estate applied to the payment of — Effect of Second.]—Where, under a writ such rates, cannot object to such payment if a of sequestrari facias issued out of the Court of stranger afterwards is appointed curate. Ib.

> - Right to maintain Action, ]-A person who has been appointed sequestrator of an ecclesiastical benefice under a sequestrari facias has no such interest in the profits of the living as will entitle him to maintain an action against a party who wrongfully takes them. Harding v. Hall, 10 M, & W. 42; 11 L. J., Ex. 354; 6 Jur. 649.

— Repairs done by.]—A benefice having been sequestrated under a writ of sequestra-tion in an action, an inspection of the glebe buildings by the diocesan surveyor was directed Profits accrued during Yacaney—Claim by the bishop, and a report made by such sur-by Succeeding Incumbent.]—The common-law veyor under the Ecclesiastical Diapidations action for money had and received lies against Jack 1871. The report estimated the cost of the at the suit of the succeeding incumbent, for the no objections were taken to such report under s. 16 of the act. The sequestrator, being subsequently of opinion that the repairs provided for by the surveyor's report were inadequate, expended on the repairs of the buildings a much larger sum than 140. No inspection or report, except as before mentioned, was ordered by the bishop or made by the surveyor:—Held, that the sequestrator had no authority to expend on repairs out of the proceeds of the benefice a larger sum than that estimated as necessary by the surveyor's report under the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, and 'that such expenditure must be disallowed. Kinher v. Pararticini, 54 L. J., Q. B. 471, 15 Q. B. D. 222; 53 L. 7. 299; 33 W. R. 907.

— Liability for Costa of Repairs.]—When a benefice was under a sequestration at the death of the incumbent, and after the avoidance the buildings were inspected by the diocesan acreyor, and the bishop nade an order pursuant to the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, s.4s, stating the cost of the requirs required, and declaring the executors or administrators of the incumbent liable for the same:—Held, that the sequestrator was not liable, under s. 53, for the cost of the repairs, and was not cutified to deduct the same from the profits of the benefice in his hands. Jones v. Dangerfield, 43: L. J., Ch. 161; 1 Ch. D. 433; 34 L. T. 887; 24 W. R. 208.

Writ—Issue of.]—On the death of a bishop, to whom a writ of sequestration has been directed, no fresh writ of sequestration need issue, and his successor is bound to return the writ. Phelps v. St. John, 3 C. L. R. 478; 10 Ex. 895; 24 L. J., Ex. 171.

Where the sheriff returned to a capies utdeagating that the defendant had no goods nor any lay fee within his balliwick, but that he was a beneficed elergyman, not stating the name or situation of the benefice, the court refused a writ of sequestration, but suggested a notion for a rule calling upon the sheriff to amend his return.

Rew v. Powell, 1 M. S. W. 321; 5 L. J., EX. 170. Where the sheriff returned to a capins utlagatum that the defendant had no goods nor any lay few without his balliwick, but that he was possessed of a rectory, the court awarded the writ of sequestration, although the shoriff did not return that he had seized the rectory into his bands. Rew v. Armetrong, 2 C. M. & R. 205; 3 D. P. C. 760; 5 Tyr. 752; 4 L. J., Ex. 167.

The defendant, a beneficed clerk, having falled to pay to the plaintiff his debt as ordered by the court, an attachment was issued against him, to which non est inventus was returned. The ordinary writ of sequestration was then issued, to which it was returned that the defendant had no lay property, and the court, on motion, ordered a writ of sequestrat facins de bonts ecclosiasticis to issue as of course, directed to the bishop of the diocese. Aller v. Williams, 2 Sm. & G. 455; 3 Eq. R. 67; 24 L. J., Ch. 160; 3 W. R. 83.

—— After partial Levy.]—A writ of sequestration may issue, notwithstanding a partial levy may have been made under a former writ; the elergyman having only a life estate in certain freehold rents, the sheriff could not make the usual return of nulla bona. Rabbittes v. Woodward, 20 L. T. 603. But see S. C., Ib. 778.

— Contumacy.]—Sequestration under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 93, against a party declared contumacious by the Ecclesiastical Court. Cooper v. Dodd, 15 Jur. 69.

— Provisional Assignee.]—A provisional assignee, in whom the estate and effects of a prisoner, who is a beneficed clergyman, are vested by an order of the Insolvent Debtors Court under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 37, has power to apply for a sequestration under s. 55. Smith v. Wetherell, 2 B. O. Rep. 179, 5 D. & L. 278; 17 L. J., Q. B. 57; 12 Jur. 53.

Effect of Interim Order for Protection.]
—An Interim order for protection under 5 & 6
Vict. c. 116, and 7 & 8 Vict. e. 96, operated only to protect the person of the petitioner and such of his property as by those acts vested in his assigness, and, therefore, such order did not prevent a creditor from issuing a sequestrari facias to seize the profits of a benefice after the insolvent's petition and before the final order.

Parry v. Jones, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 339; 26 L. J., C. P. 36; 2 Jun. (N.S.) 190.

— After Discharge.]—The fact that a baukrupt beneficed elergyman has obtained an order of discharge does not prevent the trustee in the bankruptey from issuing a sequestration of the profits of the benefice which the bankrupt held at the time of the bankruptey. Chick, Ex parte, Mercdith, In re, 11 Ch. D. 781.—C. A.

— Priority of.]—When several writs of levari facias are delivered to the bishop's officer, he is bound to issue the writs of sequestration thereon in the order of time in which the writs of levari facias were delivered to him to be executed, and not according to the date of their teste. Sturgis v. Lundow (Bishop), 7 El. & Bl. 542; 26 L. J., Q. B. 20; 3 Jun. (K.S.) 564.

— Statute of Frauds.]—Writs of leverifacias are not within the 16th section of the Statute of Frauds. Ib.

Two Benefices, One Writ. ]-A judgment of outlawry was obtained against a clergyman and the incumbent of two benefices situate in the counties of Stafford and Salop. Special writs of capias atlagatum issued at the suit of the plaintiff, directed to the same sheriffs, to which they respectively returned the inquisitions made under those writs into the treasury of King's Bench, and stated that the defendant had no goods, &c., but that he had a benefice in each county and within one diocese :- Held, that one writ of sequestrari facias was sufficient, there being only one suit and one defendant, though two inquisitions had been rendered necessary by the situation of the benefices in different counties. Hinde, In re, 1 Tyr. 347; 1 C. & J. 389; 1 D. P. C. 286; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 107.

— Publication of.]—It is not necessary that a writ of sequestration should be published before the return day of the levari facins upon which it is founded, or that a copy should be fixed to the church door where that is not the usual mode of publication. Barrettv. Apperley, 6 B. & C. 630; 9 D. & R. 639.

- Effect of ]-A sequestration issued by the assignces of an insolvent incumbent operates only from the time of publication, and does not can apply for an account of the moneys received entitle the assignces to the arrears of composition in a bigner of the scale before publication. White v. lield by an insolvent in his diocese. Majfatt, Em Bishap. 1 C. M. & R. 505; 3 D. P. C. 234; 5 parte, W. W. & D. 358; 1 Jur. 453. Tyr. 90: 4 L. J., Ex. 50.

property of the incumbent from the time of such lodging. Ib.

- Duration of. ]-A writ of sequestration is a continuing execution, and remains in force until the debt and costs are realised, without reference to the time at which the writ is nominally returned, or until the bishop is ruled to return it, which puts an end to the writ. Pholps v. St. John, 3 C. L. R. 478; 10 Ex. 895; 24 L. J., Ex. 171.

Though a levari facias de bonis ecclesiasticis is a continuing execution, and a levy may be made after it is returnable; yet, if it is actually returned, the bishop's authority is at an end. Marsh v. Faucett, 2 H. Bl. 582; 3 R. R. 510.

The proper way is to rule the bishop from time to time, to ascertain what he has levied. Ib.

- Validity.]—The parish of H., which had been included in the diocese of L., was by an order in council in 1836 transferred to the diocese of W. In 1843 a sequestration was issued by the bishop of L., founded upon a writ of levari facias, against the vicar of H., under which the sequestrator received the rents up to Lady-day, 1848. No other writ of sequestration had at that time been issued by the bishop of We into the parish of H. In an action by the vicer of H. to recover the rent of certain premises due at Lady-day, 1848:—Held, that the issuing the sequestration was an act of jurisdiction or authority exercised by the bishop of L., to whose diocese the parish formerly belonged, and that it was rendered valid by 10 & 11 Vict. e. 98, s. 8. Powell v. Hibbert, 15 Q. B. 129; 19 L. J., Q. B. 347; 14 Jur. 866.

- Setting Aside. ]-Judgment having been obtained against a beneficed clergyman, a writ of sequestration was issued against him on 17th August, at which time no fl. fa. had been issued. On 9th October a fi, fa. against him was returned by the sheriff nulla bona, but not that he was a beneficed clerk. The rule to set aside the writ was moved for on 22nd November :-Held, that the writ was irregular, and that the application to set it aside was made in sufficient time. Bromage v. Vaughan, 7 Ex. 223; 21 L. J.,

Return to Writ.]-It is a good objection to a rule requiring a bishop to make his return to a levari facias, obtained by an attorney not employed in the cause originally, that the order for changing the attorney has not been served on the bishop. Phillips v. Berkeley, 5 D. P. C. 279; W. W. & D. 50.

A bishop cannot be required to make a return of what has been levied under a levari facias previously to his coming into office. Ib.

Upon the translation of a bishop to another diocese pending a sequestration issued by him, the return to a fi. fa. de bonis ecclesiasticis is properly made by his successor. Dawson v. Symmons, 12 Q. B. 830; 18 L. J., Q. B. 34; 12 Jur. 1072.

Lodging a levari facias with the registrar of _____ Before Execution satisfied.]—A levari the bishop of the diocese does not bind the facias having been returned by the bishop, and filed, before the execution was satisfied, the court granted a rule absolute, in the first in-stance, that the writ should be taken off the file and sent back to the bishop, and that he should certify to the court what he had done under it. Alderton v. St. Aubyn, 6 M. & W. 150; 8 D. P. C. 223; 9 L. J., Ex. 60; 4 Jur. 53.

> —— Sufficiency of ]—A levari facias having been issued in 1834, the bishop, in 1838, was ruled to return what sums he had from time to time levied under the writ; he made a return, setting out certain items of receipt and disbursement:—Held, insufficient, inasmuch as it did not state that the items of receipt were all that had been received, or that payments had been actually made. Alchin v. Hophins, 1 Arn. 399; 7 D. P. C. 146; 3 Jur. 11.

> - Within what Time Application should be made.]—Where no wrongful act is shewn, it is too late, three years after satisfaction of a sequestrari facias, to call upon the bishop to certify to the court what has been done under the writ. Billing v. St. Aubyn, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 775 ; 4 L. T. 404.

> Deductions from Sum levied.]-A return having been made by a bishop to a sequestrari facias de bonis ecclesiasticis, with the amounts annexed, which had been filed in the bishop's court after suit, the Court of Exchequer of Pleas referred it to the master to examine the deductions made from the sum levied under the writ, and to say whether they were proper to be allowed. Morris v. Phelps, 4 Ex. 895; 19 L. J., Ex. 165.

> When a return is made by a bishop to a fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis issued either to himself or his predecessor, the Court of Queen's Bench will refer it to the master to say whether the deductions made from the sum levied under the writ in respect of the sequestrator's charges are proper to be allowed. Dawson v. Symmons, 12 Q. B. 830; 18 L. J., Q. B. 34; 12 Jur. 1072.

Practice—Service of Monition.]—Where an incumbent of a benefice cannot be found, service of a copy of a monition, by leaving it at the parsonage-house, is sufficient whereon to found a sequestration, notwithstanding the incumbent does not habitually reside in it, the officiating minister being the sequestrator, and having the original in his possession. Green v. Cobden, 2 Bing, (N.O.) 627; 3 Scott, 80; 2 Hodges, 6; 5 L. J., C. P. 209.

____Proof.]—The production of the judgment-roll, and of the writs of execution issued thereupon, one of which is of sequestrari facias to the bishop, is good evidence that a benefice has been sequestered, although the judgment-roll does not contain an award of the latter writ. Pack v. Tarpley, 1 P. & D. 478; 9 A. & E. 468; 2 W. W. & H. 88; 8 L. J., M. C. 93.

- Receiver.]-A receiver will not be ap-— Who can Apply for. ]—The assignces of an insolvent debtor only, and not his creditors, pointed over an ecclesiastical benefice with cure issued and the bishop was not a party to the suit. M Curdy v. Chichester, 2 Jones, 358.

A third incumbrancer on a rectory having obtained a sequestration, a receiver was appointed at the instance of the second incumbrancer. White v. Peterborough (Bishop), 3 Swanst. 109; 19 R. R. 183.

Where the plaintiff, as mortgagec of the tithe rent-charge, filed a bill against the incumbent and a sequestration creditor in possession, and the answer of the creditor submitted that the mortgage was void under the 10 & 11 Car. 1. c. 3 (lr.): the court appointed a receiver. Kenny v. Cumming, Fl. & K. 321.

— Injunction.]—Sequestrators forcibly dis-possessed, restored by injunction. Pelham (Lord) v. Newcastle (Duchess), 3 Swanst, 289.

 Cause of Action passing to Assignees. ]-In an action by an insolvent beneficed clergyman against an attorney, the court charged negligence in setting aside a sequestrari facias issued against the benefice, by reason whereof the writ remained in force longer than it otherwise would have done, whereby the rents were lost:—Held, that the cause of action passed to the assignees. Wetherell v. Julius, 10 C. B. 267; 19 L. J., C. P. 367; 14 Jur. 700.

—— Sequestrator, When Party.]—Sequestrators in possession of a benefice, and who have been appointed merely for the purpose of paying curates, &c., are not necessary parties to a bill by an annuitant whose annuity is charged upon the benefice. Stannus v. Robinson, 2 Jones, 498.

XV. CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

1. GENERALLY,

Antiquity. |-- A parochial chapelry must have been coeval with the parish, that is, immemorial, but, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, its existence may be inferred from modern usage, like other ancient rights and exemptions. v. Mostyn, 5 Ex. 69; 19 L. J., Ex. 249.

A church and chapel were formerly synonymous terms. A church may be presented to as a chapel. and yet remain in right a church ; and a chapel may commence a church by being presented and instituted to as such. Yuteman v. Cux, 2 Bro. P. C. 191.

Chapelry. - A chapelry in 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 14, means a parochial chapelry, strictly so called, not merely a district recently treated as a parochial chapelry. Carr v. Mostyn, 5 Ex. 69; 19 L. J., Ex. 249.

Where parishioners, dwelling within a chapelry, contribute to the repairs of the parish church, it is strong, but not conclusive, evidence that the

of souls in a case where no sequestration had of the inhabitants of the district; and thirdly, as to the rights and dues belonging to the curate such a curate not removable at pleasure. A bill is the proper mode of establishing a right to a perpetual curacy, &c., and not an information in the name of the attorney-general, except in the case of charities. Angmentations of vicarages, &c., form such an exception. Att.-Gen. v. Brereton, 2 Ves. 425.

> Church whether a "House"-" Owner." ]-A church is a house, and the vicar an owner, within the meaning of the Folkestone Improvement Act, 1855 (wherewith the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, is incorporated); and, where the vicar was proceeding to build a church upon a site where, under that act, the corporation had power to prescribe the line of building, but the corporation did not actually prescribe the line of building until after the foundations of the church were laid and the walls commenced :- Held, that the corporation was too late in prescribing the line of building, and was not entitled, though offering compensation, to have the church set back or to restrain the vicar from building as he proposed. Follestone Corporation v. Woodward, 42 L. J., Ch. 782; L. R. 15 Eq. 159; 27 L. T. 574; 21 W. R. 97.

> By the term "houses," in s. 105 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, and the term "land," in s. 77 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1862, it is intended to include (with certain exceptions) all the frontage of a new street, so as to make all the owners of the frontage liable to contribute to the expense of paving the new street. The word "house" includes every building which is capable of being used as a human habitation. If a building, which is physically capable of being so used, is prevented, either by common law or statute, from being ever put to such a use, it is exempted from the liability to contribute to the expense. A consecrated church of the Established Church of England is exempted, because, by reason of its consecration, it becomes by the common law for ever incapable of being used as a habitation for man. Wright v. Ingle, 55 L. J., M. C. 17; 16 Q. B. D. 379; 54 L. T. 511; 34 W. R. 220; 50 J. P. 436-C. A.

> Wesleyan Chapel.]—But a leasehold chapel fronting on a new street, the chapel being vested in trustees, on trust to permit it to be used as a place of religious worship by a congregation of Wesleyans, is a house within the meaning of s. 105, for, by the consent of the landlord, the trustees, and the cestuis que trustent, the trusts might at any moment be put an end to:-Held, also, that the trustees were the "owners" of the chapel, and as such liable to contribute to the expense of paving the new street. Ib.

- Dissenting Chapel. The appellants were trustees of a chapel which abutted on and formed part of a new street, within the meaning of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. ---- Lessee of Chapel.]—The appellants, being seised in fee of a building used as a chapel, leased it for twenty-one years to N., who was then in possession of it:—Held, that N. was the owner within the meaning of 18 & 19 Viet, c. 122, s. 3, and, therefore, an order upon the appellants for expenses incurred by the commissioners under s. 73 (relating to dangerous structures) was bad. New Church-Publication of Poor-rate. ]-An ancient chapel in a township having fallen into decay, a new church was built and consecrated in 1832, and divine service had been regularly performed there since, but parish meetings were sometimes held, and christenings and burials performed, in the chapel. There was also a schoolhouse in the township where divine service was performed on Sundays:-Held, that the new church was de facto the church of the place, and that the publication of a poor-rate by affixing the notice required by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 45, at or near the principal door only, was sufficient. Ormerod v. Chadwick, 16 M. & W. 367; 16 L. J., M. C. 143.

Non-Consecration.] - Sackville College had attached to it a building called the Chapel, which did not appear to have been consecrated, and in which the warden, a elergyman, read prayers and performed other divine offices, according to the forms prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer, and the rites and ceremonies of the United Church of England and Ireland, without the licence, and, subsequently, contrary to the inhibition, of the bishop of the diocese. The inmates of the college attended, and sometimes their friends, but strangers were not allowed to be present at the services :- Held, that such chapel was not a private house; that officiating there was a public officiating; and that the warden had, therefore, committed an ecclesiastical offence, for which he was liable to ecclesiastical ceusure. Freeland v. Neale, 1 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 648; 12 Jur. 635.

After rebuilding Church. - When an old parish church is pulled down and rebuilt on the same site, the new building does not become a parish church without consecration, and the Ecclesiastical Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit with respect to the pews or seats in Battiscombe v. Ere, 9 Jur. such a building. (N.S.) 210 ; 7 L. T. 697.

But, when a church has not been entirely destroyed or pulled down, there is no need of meanment of a pullding within his parish, if 36 × 37 vict. c. 50 (Places of Worship Sites Act), the bishop overules such objection, and proceeds is. 1. as Burial-Ground. -The guardians of the poor of a parish, being owners in fee of land, on part of which a parish workhouse had been erected, and another part of which had been consecrated as a burial-ground, prayed a faculty in the Consistory Court of London to authorise the erection of a chanel for the immates of the workhouse, and other buildings connected with the workhouse, on a part of the consecrated ground in which no bodies had been buried. No sentence had been pronounced by the Consistory Court; and a stranger to the parish, and having no interest in the matter, obtained a rule for a prohibition to prohibit proceedings in the suit. The court discharged the rule: first, because, although a faculty ought not to be granted to apply consecrated ground to seenlar purposes, yet a distinc-tion might be made as to the chapel being an ecclesiastical purpose; and it was not to be presumed that the inferior court would exceed its jurisdiction and grant the faculty for both the purposes prayed; and, secondly, because, in the exercise of its discretion, the court would not Twiss, 10 B. & S. 298; 38 L. Dedication. - An ancient church of great architectural beauty belonged to a corporation as trustees for a charity. The church had been granted by the Crown in the sixteenth century to the use of the charity, but soon afterwards it was, and had ever since been, used by the inhabitants of the district as a parish church, the charity not requiring the whole of the accommodation. In 1846 a railway company obtained their act of parliament; and as the line passed over the site of the church it was provided by the act that the company should not make their railway till they had agreed with the corporation on a plan for the removal and rebuilding of the church on some neighbouring site in the same style and model; but it should be competent to the company to pay a sum as compensation in lien of the foregoing obligation. The company paid 17,000% as compensation:—Held, that, in consequence of the ancient user under the grant, there had been a dedication of the church for the use of the neighbouring inhabitants, concurrently with user by the charity. Clephane v. Edinburgh Magistrates, 4 Macq. H. L. Cas. 603; 10 L. T.

Held, also, that the corporation was not bound to rebuild the church in the old style and model, but merely to build a church giving the same accommodation, and to apply the surplus of the money for the use of the charity. Ib.

4. PRIVATE CHAPELS.

Ownership of . - Acts of user and reparation from time immemorial will support a prescriptive title in the lord of a manor to the exclusive use and occupation of a private chapel annexed to a parish church, Churton v. Frewen, 35 L. J., Ch. 692; L. R. 2 Eq. 634; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 879; 14 L. T. 846.

A lord of a manor claimed exclusive right to a chapel annexed to the parish church, as appendant or appurtenant to the manor or the manorhonse. He shewed that from time immemorial the lords of the manor had repaired, and had been held liable to repair, the chapel; that previous lords or their permissees had been buried therein; and that monuments had been erected by the lords as of right, and without permission asked :- Held, that though the freehold was vested in the rector, and not in the elaimant, still he was entitled to such exclusive use and occupation. Ib.

Held, also, that this right was not affected by the fact of his non-residence in the parish, and that such right need not necessarily be claimed in respect of any house in the parish. Ib.

It is necessary, in a claim of prescriptive right to a chapel, to allege and prove reparation; and, in such a case as the claim to a chapel, the court will presume that at the time of its foundation such special rights were reserved by the founder in consideration of his founding the church. Ib.

- Right of Proprietor of Unconsecrated. to remove Person therefrom.]—A proprietor of an unconsecrated chapel, though open for the performance of divine service according to the rites of the established church, has a right to request anyone therein to depart, and if he refuses, to remove him by ordinary legal measures. Heuth v. Bosanquet, 3 L. T. 290; S W. R. 35.

Licences to Officiate.]—A bishop granted a licence to a clerk to officiate as minister in an unconsecrated proprietary chapel in a parish within the diocese; the licence was granted with the consent of the incumbent of the parish. Afterwards the bishop died, and the incumbent died, and the succeeding incumbent forbade the clerk to minister in the parish. The clerk insisted on his right to officiate in the chapel, and the succeeding incumbent promoted crimiand the successing inclined by hard the clerk under the Church Discipline Act, and prayed that he should be moutished to abstain from officiating in the chapel:—Held, that the licence was invalid as against the promoter, and did not, under the circumstances, authorise the clerk to officiate in the chapel. Richards v. Fincher, 43 L. J., Ecc. 21; L. R. 4 Ecc. 255.

of Charitable Institution.]—The trustee of a charity is not authorised by the Church Buildings Act to convey to the commissioners the private chapel of a charitable foundation held by him as a trustee for the benefit of the charity.

Att.-Gen.v. Manchester (Hishop), L. R. 3 Eq. 436;
15 L. T. 646; 15 W. R. 673.

Such a conveyance was declared to be a breach of trust, and a reconveyance ordered, although the commissioners had caused the chapel to be chapel, the ecclesiastical commissioners were church, and caused a district to be assigned to it as a parish church under an order in council. Ib.

The acts of public functionaries who exceed the bounds of their authority, by assuming a power over property which the law does not give them, whether a corporation or individuals, are treated as the acts of private persons dealing with property without legal authority. Ih,

Of Ease.]—A private act, after providing for the sale of glebe land, and the erection of an additional church with part of the proceeds, directed that the curate of the new church should, during the incumbency of the then rector, be appointed by him; and that, after his death, avoidance or resignation, the new church should become the principal church, with all the rights, immunities and privileges appertaining to a mother church, and the then church should become and be deemed a chapel-of-ease thereto, to be served by a minister capable of having cure of souls; and that the patronage of or right of presentation to the chapel, as well as the patronage of or right of presentation to the new church, should be vested in the patron of the rectory, his heirs and assigns; so nevertheless that the minister of the chapel should not be removable at pleasure :- Held, that the chapel-of-ease thus created by the act was thereby made presentative and not donative. Reg. v. Foley, 2 C. B. 664: 15 L. J., C. P. 108.

Proprietary - " Regular Clergyman."] -Where a lease of a proprietary chapel contained a covenant against allowing anyone who was not a "regular elergyman of the Church of England" from officiating therein:—Held, that "regular clergyman" meant a person who could officiate in the chapel without being guilty of irregularity, and that a clergyman of the Church of England who had been inhibited by the bishop from performing divine service within the diocese in which the chapel was situate would be guilty of irregularity by performing divine service in the chapel in defiance of the inhibition and without the consent of the vicar of the parish, and must be restrained by injunction from continuing to so officiate. Foundling from continuing to so officiate. Hospital Governors v. Garrett, 47 L. T. 280.

5. DISTRICT CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

a. Creation and Formation.

Under 59 Geo, 3, c. 134. ]-An ancient chapelry, situate within a large parish, had from time immemorial had a separate church and churchyard, and separate churchwardens and church rates, and in which the incumbent had performed marriages, christenings, churchings and burials, and retained the fees to his own use. The right of presentation to the chapelry (which was a perpetual curacy) was in the rector of the parish. The chapelry was described as a parish in the ecclesiastical survey, but in recent local acts of parliament the church of the chapelry was referred to as a church, or ancient chapel-of-ease : -Held, that the chapetry was not a distinct parish, and that, under the power conferred by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 16, authorising the assignment of a district to a chapel-of-ease, or parochial consecrated as a parish church, and had caused the grant of the consecrated as a parish church, and had caused the parson who was chaplain of the charity and to again a particular district to the appointed the incumbent, as of a parish longer Tuckense v. Where a district chapelry had been carved out of an ancient parochial chapelry, and part the same fees as were taken in the mother of such district chapelry had been formed into a Peel parish, and the incumbent of the ancient 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 14, was not a licence by parochial chapelry claimed to be entitled to the hishop, which, by 6 & 7 Will: 4, c. 85, s. 32, is publish bunys and celebrate marriages between revocable, but an authority under an order of publish banus and celebrate marriages between Peel parish, and to receive the fees for such offices :- Held, that, when marriages were sanctioned in the chapel attached to the district chapelry, the incumbent of the district chapelry had an exclusive right to publish banns and celebrate marriages between persons residing in the district chapelry, and to receive the fees for so doing, and that the creation of the Peel parish out of the district chapelry did not restore the right of the incumbent of the ancient parochial c. 38, s. 16, and not in the parishioners, under chapelry, and therefore that (whatever might 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 15. Ib. be the rights as between the incumbents of the district parish and Peel parish) the incumbent of the ancient parochial chapelry had no right to perform such offices or receive the fees in the Peel parish. Ib.

A district formed under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, and called a consolidated chapelry, is governed by the same regulations as a district formed under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and called a district parish. Jones v. Gough, 3 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 251; 12 L. T. 31; 13 W. R. 509.

Inrolment of Name and Description of Boundaries.]-A consolidated chaptry, formed by order in council, on the representation of the church building commissioners under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 9, the boundaries of which are set forth in the order, is duly constituted without of a district church. Assignment of District to Chapel vested in Trustees.]—Where an order in council assigned to a chapel, originally built as a chapel-of-ease to a parish church, and vested in trustees upon trusts declared by a deed, a definite part of the parish as a district :- Held, that the effect of the order in council was to withdraw the chapel from the trusts declared by the deed, to make it a benefice, and the perpetual curate thereof a beneficed clergyman; and, there having been an avoidance of the parish church, that the new vicar had no right to receive the pew-rents of, or to appoint the clerk or sexton for, the new benefice. Reg. v Perry, 3 El & El, 640; 30 L. J., Q. B. 141; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 655; 3 L. T. 885; 9 W. R. 383.

Held, therefore, upon a mandamus to the incumbent of this new church to summon a meeting of the inhabitants to elect a churchwarden, that the election was in the renters of pews in the new church, under 1 & 2 Will. 4,

Rights of Incumbent.]-An incumbent of a district parish created by a private act of parliament will not be allowed to restrain the incumbent of the mother church from publishing banns and celebrating marriages between persons resident in the district parish, nor from receiving ecclesiastical dues. Fitzgerald v. Champagys, 2 J. & H. 31; 30 L. J., Ch. 777; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1006; 5 L. T. 233; 9 W. R. 850.

The provisions of a local act governing a district parish remain in force where they are not specially repealed by the Church Building

Acts. Ib.

Incumbent of, whether "Owner."]-The incumbent of a district church in the metropolis, although the freehold of each church is vested in him under the Church Building Acts, is not the "owner" of the church within the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, Part. II, Dangerous Structures), so as to be personally liable for the expenses incurred by such church as a dangerous structure. Reg. v. Lee, 48 L. J., M. C. 22; 4 Q. B. D. 75; 39 L. T. 605; 27 W. R. 151. See Mourilyan v. Labalmondiere, ante, col. 1297.

Freehold in Incumbent.]—In 1816, under a local act, a new church was built in St. Paneras, which was to be the parish church, the old church being thereby converted into a parish chapel. In 1853, by an order in council, the original burial-place for the parish, which surrounded the old church, and also an additional ground provided under an earlier local act, were closed, and a cometery was provided for the whole parish. In 1863 that part of the parish in which the old church stood was turned into a vest the old burial-ground in the incumbent of - Right to County Vote. |-The incum-usual quarter-days, by even and equal portions, bent of a district chapelry had the freehold of beginning from Christmas-day, and, if the powthe church and its site, and, in virtue of his benefice, received fees to the value of more than forty shillings a year for marriages, churchings, and baptisms, performed within the church; -Held, that these fees were paid for the personal services of the incumbent, and not for the use of the church, and, therefore, did not arise out of land, and could not add to the value of the church and site (which of themselves were of no value), so as to entitle the claimant to be registered as a county voter for a freehold of the clear yearly value of 40s. Kirton v. Dear, 39 L. J., C. P. 36; L. R. 5 C. P. 217; 21 L. T. 532; 18 W. R. 144; 1 Hopw, & C. 349, Stopping up Paths and Ways.]-Under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 39, the notice of stopping up useless ways must be given before making an order by the commissioners; and an order made and consented to by two justices before notice, and confirmed at the sessions, is bad. Reg. v. Arkwright, 12 Q. B. 960; 18 L. J., Q. B. 26; 13 Jnr. 300.

Although it appeared to be the intention of the legislature to give an appeal against an order of the commissioners under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, they had not carried that intention into effect, Reg. v. Stock, 3 N. & P. 420; 8 A. & E. 405; 1 W. W. & H. 894.

Evidence of . - It does not of necessity follow that there cannot be a parochial chapel because there has not been a union of parishes in ancient times, nor any vicarage or mother church with which the chapel can be supposed to have been anciently united. And the circumstance that there is no vicarage may be accounted for by the fact of the rectory having been conveyed to a monastery prior to the statutes 15 R. 2 and 4 Hen. 4. Dent v. Rob. 1 Y. & C. L.

h. Fees and Dues.

Payable to Incumbent.]-Under 59 Geo. 3, c. 184, and by an order in council, a district, with a district church, was parted off from the parish of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green; but the order in conneil directed that, during the incumbency of the rector of St. Matthew, two-thirds of the fees to be received for marriages, baptisms, churchings, and burials at the district church should belong and be paid to the rector, and one-third to the district minister :- Held, that, where the minister had actually received the entire fees for marriages, &c., the rector might recover from him the two-thirds in an action for Q. B. 971; 18 L. J., Q. B. 59; 18 Jur. 297.

Held, also, that the act and order in council did not oblige the minister to receive the fees, or any part of them, and that the rector could not maintain assumpsit against him on a supposed duty to take the fees and pay the rector his twothirds. Ib.

The minister of the church of a district which had been constituted under the 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, brought an action against the churchwardens for stipend due in respect of two quarters ending Michaelmas-day, 1867. By the assignment of his stipend out of the pewrents, which had been made by the commisrents did not in any one year produce 550l, after paying the clerk's salary, the minister should receive the residue of them in lien of 550l. The churchwardens had paid over to the plaintiff all the moneys that had been paid for pew-rents and had come to their hands prior to Michaelmas. but they held in their hands a sum of money which had been received at Michaelmas for pewrents payable in advance for the occupation of news for the ensuing half-year from Michaelmas to Lady-day. This sum of money amounted to 1201., a sum less than a quarter of 5501., the full amount of the stipend :-Held, first, that the minister might maintain an action against the churchwardens, by virtue of the provisions of the acts and assignment, for pew-rents in their hands applicable to payment of his stipend: but, secondly, that the churchwardens were entitled to retain in their hands the 1201, against the stipend accraing after Michaelmas, 1867; and, thirdly, that they were not liable in respect of new-rents received by their predecessors in office, but which had not come to their hands. Lloyd. v. Burrup, 38 L. J., Ex. 25; L. R. 4 Ex. 63; 19 L. T. 696.

The publication of the banns of marriage and the solemnisation of marriage are "ecclesiastical purposes" within the meaning of 19 & 20 Vict. 2. 104, s. 14, and, where a district becomes within this section a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes, the incumbent of such parish has the exclusive right of performing the office of marriage in the case of persons resident in his parish, and of receiving the fees for such marriages, and consequently the incumbent of the mother parish has no right to solemnise such marriages in the church of the mother parish or to receive the fees for the same. Fuller v. Alford, 52 L. J., Q. B. 265; 10 Q. B. D. 418; 48 L. T. 431; 31 W. R. 522; 47 J. P. 423. See also Fitzgerald v. Champueys, col. 1302.

Meaning of "Incumbent" under 19 & 20 Vict. c, 104, s, 12.1—By 19 & 20 Vict. c, 104, s, 12, the ecclesinstical dues arising within the limits of a new district shall belong to the original incumbent until the first avoidance of such incumbency, or the relinquishment by such incumbent ; then to the incombent of the new district :-Held, that in case of a consolidated chapelry created under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, the words "such incumbent" mean the incumbents of all the parishes out of which the chapelry has been formed. Janes v. Gaugh, 3 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 1; 11 Jnr. (N.S.) 251; 12 L. T. 31; 13 W. R. 509.

— Relinquishment of Fees, how made.]— The voluntary relinquishment of fees required by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 12, may be made without the execution of any written instrument.

Payable to Clerk and Sexton. |- In 1810 a chapel was purchased for the purpose of being consecrated as a chapel of ease in a parish. The chapel was consecrated under the provisions of a deed of the 25th August, 1810, by which the parish clerk and sexton were to be entitled to the fees for christenings, burials, and marriages in the chapel and cemetery, as if they had taken place in the mother church. By an order in sloners, it was provided that the stipend should council of the 2nd August, 1853, the chapel was be 550% and be paid quarterly, on the four most created a district chapelry, under 59 Geo. 8, council of the 2nd August, 1853, the chapel was

c. 134, s. 16. By s. 10, when any parish shall tion; and therefore a lay rector has not, as be divided under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, or 59 Geo. 3, against the vicar, any right to the possession or c. 134, all fees belonging to the parish clerk or sexton respectively of any such parish, which shall thereafter arise, "in any district or division of any parish divided" under 58 Gco. 3, c. 45, shall belong to and be recoverable by the clerks and sextons of each of the divisions of the parish to which they shall be assigned. The clerk and sexton of the parish having brought an action for money had and received against the clerk and sexton of the chapel, for the fees received by him for christenings, burials, and marriages in the chapel:—Held, first, that the action for money had and received would lie for these fees. Anthon v. Roberts, 2 H. & N. 432; 26 L. J., Ex. 380.

Held, secondly, that this being a district chapelry was not within the operation of 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 10, and therefore that the clerk and sexton of the parish was entitled to the fees arising at the chapel. Ib.

By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 41, s. 6, passed for sub-dividing the parish of Manchester, it was provided that there should be paid to the rectors of the new parishes for marriages, churchings, and burials, the fees usually payable at the parish church during the continuance in office of the chaplains, minor eanons, and clerks of the parish church then being in office, or any of them; and that the rectors should pay the same to one of the chaplains or minor canons, who should distribute them to the persons entitled. All the chaplains and minor canons had ceased to hold office :- Held, that the mode by which the fees received by the rectors were to be paid to the parties entitled was only machinery appointed by the act for the purpose, and, there being no chaplains or minor canons remaining through whom it could be carried out, the parish clerk was entitled to recover by action from the rector the amount due to him. Nichols v. Davis, 38 L. J., C. P. 127; L. R. 4 C. P. 80; 17 W. R. 291.

c. Rating.

Paving.]-A district church erected under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, is not exempt from being rated under 50 Geo. 3, c. clxix. and 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix. (St. Luke's, Middlesex, Paving Acts), and the churchwardens are liable to pay the rate, although they have no parochial funds for that purpose. Mills v. Rydon, 10 Ex. 67; 2 C. L. R. 1045; 23 L. J., Ex. 305.

Forming Street.]-A church, built on land conveyed to the commissioners for building additional churches, is not liable to be assessed to the expenses of forming a new street, either as house or land, under the Metropolis Management Acts. Angel v. Paddington Vestry, 9 B, & S. 496; 37 L. J., M. C. 171; L. R. 3 Q. B. 714: 16 W. R. 1167. See cases, ante, XV. 1, ool. 1296.

6. CHANCEL.

Grant of. ]-A grant of part of the chancel of a church, by a lay impropriator to A., his heirs and assigns, is not valid in law. Clifford v. Wicks, 1 B. & Ald. 498; 19 R. R. 364.

Freehold of. ]-The freehold of a church, ineluding the clamed and the churchyard, is in sper, 'que cancellus parcohistis rulgariter nun-the rector, but the right to the corporal possess- cupatur''; the corporation and the parish are son is in the spirtual incumbent after indue- soldly to repair the north transept and the whole against the vicar, any right to the possession or control of the chancel. Griffin v. Dighton, 5 B. & S. 93; 33 L. J., Q. B. 181; 10 L. T. 814; 12 W. R. 441-Ex. Ch.

Upon a bill filed in equity to establish a right to a chancel as part of a parish church, against the lord of a manor, who claimed it as appendant to the manor or manor-house, it appeared that the chancel was an ancient chapel, coeval with the church, and that it was a private chapel erected by the lord of the manor :- Held, that the immemorial use and occupation, coupled with reparation, entitled the lord of the manor by prescription to the perpetual and exclusive use of the chancel; and that this right might exist, notwithstanding that the freehold might not be in the person prescribing, and although the estate or house to which the chancel was appendant might not be situate in the parish. Churton v. Freucen, 35 L. J., Ch. 692; L. R. 2 Eq. 634; 12 Jnr. (x.s.) 879; 14 L. T. 846. A freehold interest in the soil of a lesser chancel or private chapel, forming part of a parish church, may exist in a private individual without being annexed to a messuage or manorhonse. Chapman v. Jones, 38 L. J., Ex. 169; L. R. 4 Ex. 273; 20 L. T. 811; 17 W. R. 920.

The existence of such freehold interest is sufficiently proved by evidence that a man's predeeessors in title have from time immemorial exclusively repaired the chapel, and kept a lock on the door of it, and that sittings in it have always been occupied by their family or tenants,

Chapel forming Chancel of Parochial Church, or belonging to Individual—Right to Access of Light.]—The monastic priory of Arundel was suppressed or dissolved in the reign of Richard II. (about the year 1380), and a college consisting of a master or warden and twelve seculars or chaplains was by the king's licence created in its stead. The instrument of foundation contained rules or statutes for the government of the members of the college, and for the services to be celebrated "in ecclesia prefata." The church of St. Nicholas, Arundel, which, architecturally considered, was one entire building, all apparently of the same date, was a "cross-church," with a nave and aisles; a central tower; transepts rather shorter than would be usual in a church of such proportions; and eastward of the central tower and transepts, a chapel (known as the Fitzalan Chapel) occupying the place commonly filled by the parish chancel; a north aisle called the Lady Chapel; and at the north-east corner a room originally a " sacristy," but which had for many years been used as a school-room, and as a place where the elections to offices in the corporation of Arundel were habitually held. In 1511, disputes having arisen between the college and the corporation of Arundel as to the repair of "ye crosse-partes" or transepts, the bell-tower of the church, the bells and bell-furniture therein, they were submitted for arbitration to the then Earl of Arundel and the then Bishop of Chichester. These "erossepartes" were described as going from south to north "inter chorum et navem ecclesiæ"; and the award of the earl and bishop was as follows: -The college are solely to repair the south tranof the nave and its aisles; and the expense of keeping up and repairing the bell-tower, bells, and bell-furniture is to be defrayed by the corporation and the parish on the one part, and the college on the other part, in equal moieties. In the 26th year of Henry VIII. (1544) the master or warden and chaplains of the college surrendered to the king "totum cantarium sive collegium nostrum prædictum; ac etiam totum scitum, fundum, circuitum, ambitum, vel procinctum, ac ecclesiam, campanile, et cimiterium ejusdem, cantariæ sive collegii, cum omnibus et omnimodis domibus, ædificiis, ortis, pomariis, gardinis, terrâ et solo infra dictum circuitum et procinctum cantariæ sive collegii prædicti," &c. In the same year the king, in almost the same words, granted the college and its possessions to Henry, Earl of Arundel, and his heirs, through whom the plaintiff claimed. Since the surrender and re-grant of 1544, no act of religious worship had taken place, nor had prayers been said within the walls of the Fitzalan Chapel, with the exception of reading the burial service of the Church of England over the bodies of members of the plaintiff's family which had been buried there; and during the whole of that time the plaintiff and his predecessors had claimed to exclude, and had in fact excluded, the vicar and parishioners of Arundel from the whole of the Fitzalan Chapel. An iron lattice-work or grille filling the arch which would be commonly called the "chancel-" and which apparently was as old as the Fitzalan Chapel itself, and divided it from the rest of the structure, was locked on the eastern side (there being no key-hole on the other side), and the key was always kept by the plaintiff and his predecessors in title. Vaults had been made and interments had taken place both in the Fitzalan Chapel and in the Lady Chapel, at their sole pleasure. No faculty had ever been applied for, nor had any fees been paid in respect of such vaults and interments. Against these acts of ownership exercised by the plaintiff's predecessors during more than three hundred years. there was not a single act of ownership proved on the part of either the vicar or the parishioners. The answers returned by successive church-wardens for a long series of years (from 1844 to 1875) to articles of visitation, episcopal and archidisconal, for the most part shewed that they assumed the south transept to be the chancel of the parochial clurch. In 1873 the plaintiff erceted a wall across the west end of the Fitzalan Chapel: in 1877 the defendant, who was vicar of Arundel, pulled down part of it. There had been some correspondence as to the respective rights of the parties; but the plaintiff declined nego-tion and claimed the Fitzalan Chapel as his property :- Held, that these facts above stated shewed that the building in question was not the chancel of the parochial church of St. Nicholas, Arandel, but had always remained the property of the Duke of Norfolk and his predecessors, and that a legal origin for the plaintiff's claim must be presumed. Norfalk (Duke) v. Arbuthnot, 49 L. J., C. P. 782; 5 C. P. D. 390; 43 L. T. 302; 44 J. P. 796—C. A.

Held, further, that the defendant could not justify the pulling down part of the wall on the ground that he was entitled to the access of light from the Fitzalan Chapel into the parochial church; for such a claim could not be justified either by prescription at common law, under the Prescription Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71), ss. 3, 4, or by virtue of a lost grant. Ib.

Criminal Suit promoted by Churchwardens against Lay Rector to compel Repair—Monition.]—The articles in a criminal suit promoted by the churchwardens of a parish against the lay rector of a parish church charged that the chancel of the church was in a very dilapidated condition, and that the respondent, though legally bound to repair it, had for four years refused and neglected to do so. On the respondent giving an affirmative issue to the articles and submitting to judgment, the ordinary pronounced that the respondent giving and adminished him to do the repair law, and admonished him to do the repair required. Morley v. Leaveroft, [1886] P. 92.

7. GIFTS FOR CHURCH BUILDING AND ENDOWMENT.

Exception to Mortmain Act.]—Exception to 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, in the case of a bequest of moneys to the extent of 500l. for building and endowing a church. Girdlestone v. Creed, 10 Hare, 480.

— 43 Geo. 3, c. 108.]—Testatrix bequeathed a sum of money to be applied as trustees should think fit in defraying expenses of building a church, if within seven years after her death such church should have been built by inhabitarts of parish and consecuted:—Held, that the bequest is good, at any rate, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, s. 1, if the amount of the bequest is quite 500L, and the testator sarvives the will three months. Discon v. Dutler, 3 Y. & C. 677.

Limit of £500.]—A bequest to a church diocean building society towards building and endowing a church, but without referring to an existing site or expressly excluding the application of the unempt to the acquisition of land, is void except to the extent of 5000l. Lev., In re, 27 L. T. 89. 21 W. R. 163.

Reduced to £500,]—A testator bequesthed, 5,0004, three per cent. cousols to be laid out in building a church. Upon the petition of his executors this bequest was reduced to 500%, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, and the expenses of the petition were directed to be paid out of the 5,000%. consols. Ireland's Will, In re, 12 L. J., Ch. 881.

Generality of ].—A duvise of houses or land to sodd, and the proceeds applied in furtherance of the several objects of the statute 33 Geo. 3, c. 108, cannot be supported under that act, and is void under the statute 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. Theoryported Ohurch Building Society v. Coles, 18 J. Morgan V. J. 145; 24 L. J., Ch. 103; 3 Eq. R. 176; 3 W. R. 101. Affirmed, 5 De G. M. & G. 324; 24 L. J., Ch. 178; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 761; 3 W. R. 396.

The legislature intended that each gift to be protected by the statute 48 Geo. 3, c. 103, should be for one church, chapel, or other building mentioned in the act, and not a vague and general gift, to be applied to the enlargement, building, or repairing of churches or chaptles generally. 1b.

Reservation.]—The power by the statute 43 Geo.. 3, c. 108, given to a testator to pass "all such his estate, interest, or property" in lands, as in the act mentioned, must be exercised without reserve, as is provided in similar cases by the statute 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. II.

The 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, authorise a donor to give land to trustees for the deed of gift, or by agreement with the trustees. Fisher v. Briveley, 29 L. J., Ch. 477; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 615; 8 W. R. 485.

Uncertainty. - A gift by a donor of a piece of land under these acts for the purposes of a church and school, without distinguishing which part should be for a church and which for a school, is not void for uncertainty. Ib.

Conditional.]—A bequest of 1,000l. to be applied towards building a church at Newark, near Northgate, in connection with the established church; but, if it should not be commenced during the testator's lifetime, or before two years after his death, or if not erected at Northgate, then the legacy not to be payable, and notice of the conditions to be given to the legatees, is void. Pratt v. Harrey, L. R. 12 Eq. 544; 25 L. T. 200 ; 19 W. R. 950.

To be valid, a charitable gift for building must refer to an existing site, or expressly exclude the application of the money in the purchase of land. Ib. But see Lee, In re, supra, Future Church.]—A gift for the endowment of a future church is not void under the Mortmain Act. Sinnett v. Herbert, 41 L. J., Ch. 388; L. R. 7 Ch. 232; 26 L. T. 7; 20 W. R. 270.

A testatrix gave the residue of her personal estate to trustees upon trust to be by them applied in aid of erecting or endowing an "additional church" at A. :-Held, that "additional church" was not limited to a church added between the dates of the will and the death of the testatrix. Ib.

Inquiry directed. -An inquiry was directed whether the residue could be laid out or employed in aid of creeting or of endowing an additional church at A. Ib.

Bequest of fund to be applied "in or about restoring, altering and enlarging and improving the church, parsonage-house and schools." inquiry was directed as to which of the three specified objects was erected on land already in mortmain, and as to the sums required. The Davy, 48 L. J., Ch. 268; 11 Ch. D. 949; 40 L. T. 189; 27 W. R. 390.

Pure and Impure Personalty.]-Under 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, the legacy was payable out of the impure personalty to the extent of 5001., in addition to the amount which, under the general law, would be attributable to it out of pure personalty. Ih.

Where pure and impure personalty is given to trustees to erect or endow a church they are entitled under 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, in addition to the pure personalty, to 500%. out of the impure personalty, which should be applied in the crection of the church. Sinnett v. Herbert, supra.

Repair and Decoration.]—One devises 500l. to the church of St. Helen's: this is good, and belongs to the churchwardens, and to be employed in repairing and adorning the church. Att.-Gen. v. Ruper, 2 P. W. 125.

purposes of building a church and school although of churches and chapels" is not within the a benefit may be reserved to him, either by the Statute of Mortmain. Endowment does not imply a direction to purchase land or to build, but is a gift in favour of something in existence. Hall v. Edwards, 4 W. R. 38.

> - Separate District. ]-A beynest of money upon trust, in case, at testator's death or within twenty-one years thereafter, B. should be constituted, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes, to transfer the same to the ecclesiastical commissioners for providing a church for such district and endowing and augmenting the income thereof :-Held, not to be world under the Mortmain Act. Baldwin v. Baldwin, 23 Beav. 419; 26 L. J., Ch. 121; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 773; 4 W. R. 744.

Parsonage-House.]—A legacy to build a parsonage-house is valid if there is globe land on which the house can be built. Sowell v. Crewe Read, 36 L. J., Ch. 136; L. R. 3 Eq. 60.

A testator bequeathed 1,000l. to be vested in trustees to be expended in building a parsonage in connection with Trinity Church, Brompton, In 1826 land was granted for ecclesiastical purposes to the church building commissioners, and on a portion of this land Trinity Church was built; the remainder of the land was consecrated as a burial-ground, but it had ever since its consecration been intended to reserve a portion as a site for a parsonage when funds for building could be obtained. The burial-ground had before the date of the will, been closed by act of parliament, and the portion intended as a site for the parsonage had been used by the incumbents of the church as a garden :- Held, that the bequest was good to the full extent, and not merely to the limit of 500l, allowed by 43 Geo. 3, c. 108. Cresswell v. Cresswell, 37
 L. J., Ch. 521; L. R. 6 Eq. 69; 18 L. T. 392;

8. Apportionment of Charitable Gifts.

Finality of Order.]—Where under the Church Building Acts district parishes have been severed from an original parish, and the income of a charity belonging to the original parish has been apportioned by an order of the court among such district parishes and the remainder of the original parish, such order is not final, and may be discharged or altered from time to time by the court when changes in the distribution of population or other circumstances shall make such alteration desirable. Cumpden Charities, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 780; 24 Ch. D. 213; 48 L. T. 521; 31 W. R. 741.

Practice under 8 & 9 Vict., c. 70.]—Applications, under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 22, for the apportionment of charitable gifts given to a parish, between a parish district formed out of it and the remainder of the parish, ought to be headed both in the matter of the 8 and 9 Vict. c. 70, and in the matter of the 52 Geo. 3, c. 101. In such applications it is not necessary to allege or prove any abuses in the past or existing management of the charities. West Hum Charities, In re, 2 De G. & Sm. 218; 17 L. J., Ch. 441; 12 Jur. 788.

Between Divisions of Parish. ]-The parish of Endowment — Meaning of — Mortmain.]—A W. H. was formerly divided into three divisions, gift of residue to trustees for "the endowment called S. P. and C. and charitable gifts had been made to the parish of W. H. for these treasurers, secretaries, and bankers, large sums divisions separately. A district parish was of money were raised by public subscription. formed out of the S. division, and another Ire first appeal stated that the committee district parish was made up of the P. division :-Held, that, under the two acts, the gifts given for the S. division might be apportioned between the district parish, forming part of the S. division, and the remaining part of the S. division, and that the gifts given for the P. division might be given to the new district parish made up of the P. division. Ib.

On what Principle.]—Two schemes being thereupon proposed, one of apportionment according to the gross population of the districts, the other according to the population, including only occupiers of houses of the annual value of 151, and under; the court adopted the apportionment according to the gross popula-

Parish divided into Districts. - In a parish divided into districts under the Church Building Acts there were certain charities distributable among the whole of the parishioners. They were vested in separate trustees, but were subject to the administration of the incumbent and churchwardens and inhabitants of the aucient parish in vestry assembled:—Held, upon an application made under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, that the charities were apportionable between the several district parishes and the remaining parts of the whole parish. Brompton (Incumbent), Ex parte, 5 De G. & Sm. 626; 22 L. J., Ch. 281.

- Principle of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70.]-The sound view of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, is that the court has a discretion, in exercising which it should be guided by the consideration whether the adminisstration of the charity is prejudicially affected by the division of the parish into districts. Ib.

District Parish. —A district parish carved out of the original parish, and forming a new ecclesiastical district, is not entitled to an apportionment of the income of a charity which was to be applied in the "reparation, ornament, and other necessary occasions of the parish church" of the original parish. Att.-Gen. v. Love, 23 Beav. 499; 26 L. J., Ch. 539; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 948.

A new church, substituted for the original church, is equally entitled to the exclusive benefit of the charity. Ib.

The gift of a piece of land, to apply the rents for the reparation, ornaments, and other necessary occasions of a parish church, is in its purpose indivisible. Ib.

Gift not apportionable. - When real estate has been from time immemorial vested in and applied by the churchwardens of a parish for the use and repair of the parish church :- Held, that such a charity is not a charitable devise, bequest or gift made or given for the use of the parish within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 22, and is therefore not apportionable on the parish being subdivided, and other churches crected, and new parishes constituted. Wandsworth Church Estate Charity, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 157; L. R. 6 Ch. 296; 24 L. T. 243; 19 W. R. 456.

In answer to three printed circulars or public appeals, headed "Deplorable spiritual destitu-tion" in a parish, the first two of which set mediately upon the building and occupation of a desired, in the first instance, to seek remedial measures for one section, viz., that of the north, or Pentonville, end of the parish : that the appeal was for the north, and that the objects were to defray the expense of a new parochial act, to compensate the incumbent for any loss which he might sustain by the severance of the chapel-ofease from the south end, to enlarge the chapel so as to supply, if possible, a number of free sittings, to provide an endowment fund, and to erect a parsonage-house and schools. The second appeal stated that the plans of the committee were so far altered that they sought funds for at least three new churches, with free sittings, an endowment fund, schools, and parsonage-houses; and the third appeal stated that the first object of the committee was the erection of three new churches, the first to be erected in Pentouville. Part of the moneys subscribed was expended in the crection of schools and establishing benefit societies; and the remainder was invested in the funds. A new church was in the course of erection in the north, or Pentonville, district, and another was proposed to be built in the south district of the parish. On an information at the relation of certain of the trustees :- Held, that the balance of the fund, after paying 130% to the incumbent, and the costs, ought not to be divided, but the whole applied towards the completion of the church in the Pentouville district. Att.-Gen. v. Pascall, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 818; 4 L. T. 394.

9. EASTER AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

Generally. - Oblations, obventions, and offerings are one and the same thing; though obvention is the largest word, and is in the nature of tithe. Offerings are reckoued among personal tithes, and such as arise from the labour and industry of the parishioner are payable by custom to the parson or viear, either occasionally at sacraments, marriages, burials, churching of women, &c., or at constant stated periods, as at Easter, &c. By statute 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13, they are to be paid to the parson of the parish where the party dwells. 2 Inst. 659, 661. Graunt's the party (wens, 2 thst, 695, 661. Gramma, Case, 11 Co. Rep. 16; Lawrence v. Jones, Bunbl. 173. S. C. 1 E. & Y. 801; Egerton v. Still, Bunb. 198; 2 Wood, 250; 1 E. & Y. 818; Carthew v. Edwards, Amb. 72.

Easter Offerings. ] - Easter offerings are due of common right, though demanded by custom, for they are a composition for common tithes. Ih.

- Custom excluding Common Law Right.] -Upon the question of the right of a vicar to Easter offerings, terriers in support of the claim were produced, dating from 1727 to 1825, all of which contained the following:—Easter offerings. Every communicant, 2d.; every cow, 2d.; every plough, 2d.; every foal, 1s.; every hive of bees, 1d.; every house, 3½d.:—Held, first, that the terriers were evidence of a custom so as to exclude the common-law right to Easter offerings. Reg. v. Hall, 7 B. & S. 642; 35 L. J., M. C. 251; L. R. 1 Q. B. 632; 12 Jur. (N.S.)

Held, secondly, that the custom attached imforth the names of trustees, of a committee, new house, and was not confined to houses in existence at the time of the making of the terrier. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the word communicant

Held, thirdly, that the word communicant must be held to apply only to such as actually communed. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the word communicant did not override the whole terms of the terrier, but that the fact of a person being a non-communicant, and as such exempt individually from the charge, did not exempt him from payment of the other items enumerated in the terrier. Ib.

Upon an appeal to quarter sessions, under the 7 & 8 Will, 3, e. 6, s. 7, against an order of justices, evidence in addition to that addited before the justices may be given. Ib.

— Custom disputed.]—An Easter offering of 64d. Irom housekeepers was elatined by enstom, and summary proceedings under 7 & 8 Will. 8, c. 6, s. 1, were faken to enforce payment :—Hold, that the justices, on the attorney for the party summoned stating before them that the enstom was boun fittle disputed (there being nothing to shew that it was not so), ought to have forborne to give any judgment in the matter; and that therefore an order made by them afterwards was bad. Reg. v. Kidd, 16 L. T. 203.

10. BELLS.

Control and Ownership.]—The control of the clurreh bells belongs to the incumbent, but, to constitute an ecclesisatical offence, it is not sufficient to allege that the ringing complained of took place without his consent; it must be against his wishes, expressed either in a general or particular prohibition. Daviat v. Crucker, 37 L. J., Ecc. 1, L. R. 2 Ecc. 41.

Unless the incumbent of the church consents, the parishioners cannot, except on the occasion of divine worship, procure the ringing of the church bells. Redhead v. Wait, 6 L. T. 580. S. P., Hurrison v. Eurobes, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1353.

Bell-ropes.]—The property of the bell-ropes of a parish church is vested in the church-wardens. Anchwan v. Adams, 2 Scott, 599; 2 Bing, (8.C.) 402; 1 Hodges, 339; 5 L. J., C. P. 79. See Harrison v. Raund, 2 H. & W. 18; 6 N. & M. 422; 4 A. & E. 799.

Interference with Ringing.]—In an action for placing lighted brimstone in a church tower, whereby the plantiff, who, with others, was ringing the bells, was annoyed by the fumes, the defendant pleaded the general issue, and that the plaintiff was wrongfully in the church tower making a disturbance, and that the rector requested him to depart, and that, as he would not, the defendant, by the command of the rector, placed and lighted the brimstone, to cause the plaintiff to depart.—Held, that to support the special plac evidence must be given of the request to depart, and also of the rector's authority to the defendant to put the brimstone. Ecans v. Lisic, 7 Car. & P. 562.

Held, also, that to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict, on the general issue, the jury must be satisfied that the plaintiff sustained some substantial damage from the fumes of the brimstone. Ib.

Injunction to Restrain Ringing. ]—An injunction was granted by a court of equity after a trial at law, to restrain the ringing of the bells of a Roman Catholic church, so as to occasion any nuisance, disturbance and annoyance to the plaintiff, who resided very near to the church. Soltan v. De Held, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 133; 21 L. J., Ch. 133; 16 Jur. 320.

11. KEYS.

Custody of ]—The lawful custody of the keys of the church belongs to the incumbent. Redherd v. Wait, 6 L. T. 580. And a mandamus lies to deliver up the keys of a church, Anon., 2 Chit, 255.

The rector has the freehold of the church, and the keys are his property. Ritchings v. Cording-ley, L. R. 3 Ecc. 113; 19 L. T. 26.

Possession of Ghapel by Delivery of.]—The delivery of the key of a chapel to the plaintiff for the purpose of preaching therein, which chapel the plaintiff and conveyed to the defendant by a deed of which the validity was questioned, was held not sufficient possession to enable the plaintiff to maintain trespass, where the defendant had made a foreible entry upon the plaintiff's subsequent refusal to re-deliver the key. Revett v. Browne, 5 Bing, 7; 2 M. & P. 12; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 194; 30 R. R. 524;

12. REGISTER BOOKS.

Custody, —Where a rectory is in fact void, although one has acted as rector and appointed an officiating chaplain, the court of queen's bench will not grant a mandamus, at the instance of one of the churchwarlens, to compel a wrongdoer to give up the register books of the purish to the churchwardens, as there is another-remedy. Holloway, Exp purte, Reg. v. Cumley, 3 W. E. 247.

When a benefice is full, the incumbent is the proper custodian of the parish books, and, semble, if void, the churchwardens, Ib.

XVI. DIVINE SERVICE.

1. GENERALLY.

What is Divino Service.]—Reading prayers or a sermon in a private family is not performing divine service. Divine service is an expression often used in acts of parliament which directs the reading of proclamations after divine service, Trebe v. Krith, 2 Att. 499.

Right to, in Parish Church.]—Parishioners have a right to demand that divine offices should be celebrated in their own parish church, unless such right has been limited by lawful authority. St. David's (Bishop) v. De Rutzen (Buron), 7 Jur. (N.S.) 884.

Accordingly, where a person dismantied, withnot legal authority, the church, which was very dilapidated, of one of three adjoining parishes (the greater part of which he owned), he was ordered, although there was a new church with sufficient accommodation for the three parishes built in one of the other parishes, and the three parishes were united by order in council for all ecclesiastical purposes, to restore the ancient church to the state it was in when he dismantled it, and to pay costs of suit. Ib. . Duty of Clergyman as to. ]-It is not competent to a clerk in holy orders, having two churches in one benefice, to perform divine service in one only at his own discretion : it is his duty to perform a service every Sunday in each church. Winchester (Bishop) v. Rugg, L. R. 2 A. & E. 247; 18 L. T. 486.

Refusal to admit to the Lord's Supper. ]-In an action against a Presbyterian minister for refusing to admit the plaintiff to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the plaint did not state facts to shew how it was the duty of the defendant to administer the sacrament to the plaintiff, or any contract by which he was bound to do so :- Held, that an averment that the plaintiff was "entitled to participate in the sacrament" was not a sufficient averment of duty on the part of the defendant to administer it to him; and that an averment that the defendant had acted maliciously could not assist the plaintiff to compel the defendant to do what he was not bound to do, or to perform what he had not promised. Laggard v. Stewart, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 222.

Omission to Perform Service-Power of Bishop.] -Seet, 109 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, does not apply to prevent the bishop instituting proceedings against a beneficed clergymun, under the Church Discipline Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 86), for omitting to perform, or provide for the performance of, divine service in a consecrated building within his parish; the provisions of s. 77 only applying to cases where the services of any benefice have inadequately performed, not where they have been omitted altogether. Winchester (Bishop) v. Rugg, 37 L. J., Eec. 11.

Right to Attend. ]-The statute of 5 & 6 Edw. 6. c. 1, s. 2, having imposed a general duty to go to church, which still is binding upon members of the Church of England, has conferred a correlative general right to go to church on those who are so obliged to go. Tuylor v. Timson, 57 L. J., Q. B. 216; 20 Q. B. D. 671; 52 J. P. 135.

Disturbing Congregation during.]-A constable may be justified in removing a person from a church for disturbing the congregation in time of divine service, although no part of such service was actually going on at the time; yet he has no right to detain such person in custody afterwards for the purpose of taking him before a magistrate. Williams v. Glenister, 4 D. & B. 217; 2 B. & C. 699; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 143.

2. PREACHING.

What.]-Preaching is not a "ministration" nor a "rite," nor does it form part of the adminis-tration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Rabinson, In re, Wright v. Tugwell, 66 L. J., Ch. 97; [1897] I Ch. 85; 76 L. T. 95; 45 W. R. 181; 61 J. P. 132—C. A.

In Black Gown.]—It is not illegal for a clergy-man of the Church of England to preach in a black gown, and therefore a condition that a black gown should be used in preaching, attached to a bequest for the endowment of a church, is not void for illegality. Ib.

Restraining Preaching.]—A clergyman in a pending action, in which many of the inhabiwas restrained from preaching a sermon upon In the right-hand compartment figures represent-the subject in his chapel in the town; also from issuing placards announcing his intention to preach the sermon. Macket v. Herne Bay Commissioners, 24 W. R. 845.

— Without Licence, ]—An inhibition, signed at the bishop's desire by a vicar-general of a diocese, and under the seal of the Consistorial Court, forbidding a strange clergyman to preach in the diocese, is, in fact, the inhibition of the bishop, and is not a judicial act requiring a previous citation. Down and Connor (Bishop) v. Miller, 11 Ir. Ch. R. (App.) i.-xliv.; 5 L. T. 30.

A bishop of one diocese has the power to inhibit, at his pleasure, and without cause assigned, a beneficed and licensed clergyman of another diocese from officiating or preaching in his diocese without his licence, though the clergyman has the leave of the incumbent to preach in his church. Ib. A licence to serve a care in one diocese determines by the curate giving up the cure, and leaving the diocese wherein he was residing. Ib. A usage of clergymen of different dioceses to assist occasionally one another, and preach without the bishop's licence, is of no avail against his inhibition. Ib. A parson can neither preach, administer the sacrament, nor celebrate marriage, without the bishop's licence, though such a licence is not necessary for every particular case; but a bishop may suspend a minister wholly, if he is irregular, till he submits to perform his duty properly. Ib.

3. REREDOS, COMMUNION-TABLE AND SER-VICE, ORNAMENTS AND VESTMENTS.

Reredos.]—A reredos, of which the central compartment consisted of a sculptured panel representing the crucifixion, having the figure of the Saviour on the Cross, and the figures of St. John and the three Marys on either side, all such figures being in high relief, was erected in a newly-built parish church. The bishop of the diocese refused to consecrate the church unless the central compartment of the reredos was removed, and it was accordingly removed, and the church was consecrated. Subsequently the churchwardens of the parish petitioned the ordinary for the grant of a faculty authorising the replacement of such central compartment in the church, and the ordinary sent the case by letters of request to the court of arches. The letters of request having been accepted, an appearance was entered for a parishioner, who opposed the grant of the faculty, on the ground that the central compartment of the reredos proposed to be replaced would, if so replaced, be either illegal or likely to receive superstitious reverence, and be abused or be inexpedient, and likely to cause scandal and offence:—The court ordered a faculty to issue for the restoration of the central compartment of the reredes. Hughes v. Edwards, 2 P. D. 361.

The incumbent of a parish church applied to the ordinary for a faculty authorising the decoration of the reredos of his parish church with a painted design, intended to represent the Adoration of Our Lord in Majesty by the Faithful, of which the following individual figures formed a part :- In the centre of the three compartments into which the reredos was divided, a figure tants of a town were to be examined as witnesses, intended to represent Our Lord seated as King.

Stephen and St. John ; the four last-mentioned figures being represented with their faces turned towards the centre compartment of the reredos. The grant of the faculty was not opposed:— Held, that there would be danger of the representation contained in the centre compartment of the reredos being abused by receiving "superstitious reverence," in the sense explained in Clifton v. Ridsdale (1 P. D., at pp. 352, et seq.); and that, therefore, the court ought, in its discretion, to refuse to sanction its introduc-tion into the church. St. Lawrence, Pittington, In re. 5 P. D. 131.

The chancellor of the diocese of Manchester decreed a faculty to issue for the erection in a parish church of that diocese of an oaken reredos about eight feet in height, in the form of a nion-table within the meaning of the laws, triptych with painted panels, of which panels the two side ones or wings, being hung to the centre panel by hinges, could be closed over it when divine service was not being performed; the centre panel to have painted thereon a representation of the Last Supper, and on the one wing to be represented in painting "The Agony in the Garden," and on the other" The Risen Christ with the Marys at the Tomb"; the reverse sides of the wings to be plain; the whole to be surmounted by a figure of Our Lord carved in plain oak eighteen inches high, between figures of Moses and Elias of the same height beneath pillared canopies connected by an arch of tracery work over the central figure, and flanked by angels. The faculty so decreed to be issued was required to contain a proviso that the triptych was always to remain open during the allowed. Ib. performance of Divine service. St. Pendlebury v. Parishioners, [1895] P. 178.

Upon a reredos creeted for purpose of decoration in Exeter Cathedral by the dean and chapter of Exeter were sculptured representations in high relief of the ascension, the transfiguration and the descent of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, with figures of the apostles delineated as forming part of the connected representation of the historical subject. On each side of the reredos, as finials to its architectural form, was a separate figure of an angel. The Bishon of Exeter, at a visitation of the cathedral of the dean and chapter, held the structure to be illegal, and ordered it to be removed :-Held, that although the bishop, as ordinary, in the exercise of his visitatorial power over the cathedral church of Exeter, cannot at his discretion order any alteration in its fabric, it was within his jurisdiction to find that the sculpture had been unlawfully erected, and on that definite legal ground to order its removal. Phillpotts v. Boyd, 44 L. J., Ecc. 44; L. R. 6 P. C. 435; 32 L. T. 73; 23 W. R. 491.

Held, also, that the structure was not illegal and that so much of the decree of the court of arches as reversed the order of the bishop directing its removal must be affirmed. Ib.

The 3 & 4 Edw. 6, c. 10, "for the abolishing and putting away divers books and images," remains unrepealed, but must be taken to apply only to images, &c., which have been abused, or are likely to be abused, by giving occasion to superstitious and idolatrons practices, not to such as are merely decorative. Ib.

ing St. Lawrence and the Blessed Virgin. In the parish church is a church ornament within the left-hand compartment figures representing St. meaning of the rubrics; but, it not being meaning of the rubrics; but, it not being prescribed by them, nor being in any way necessary or subsidiary to the performance of the services of the church, a faculty will not be granted for one. White v. Bowron, 43 L. J. Ecc. 7: L. R. 4 Ecc. 207.

> Stations of Cross. ]-Semble, that the set of delineations used in Roman Catholic churches, and commonly called "Stations of the Cross and Passion," are decorations forbidden by law in churches of the Church of England. Clifton v. Ridsdale, 1 P. D. 316; 35 L. T. 432.

Communion-table. ]-A stone structure of great weight, and firmly imbedded in the floor of the church, so as to be immovable, is not a commucanons, and constitutions ecclesiastical of the realm, neither do these laws authorise the crection of a credence-table. Faulhner v. Litchfield, 9 Jur. 234.

Communion-tables to be used in churches should be tables in the ordinary sense of the word, made of wood, flat and movable, and capable of being covered with a cloth, having no cross attached. Liddell v. Westerton, and Liddell v. Beal, 5 W. R. 470—P. C. On appeal from, 1b. 179—Arches Court (4 W. R. 167; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1178—Consistory Court). And see report, published separately, by E. F. Moore, 1857.

Credence-table, and altar cloths of various colours, allowed. Ib.

Linen cloth, with embroidered or lace border. at the administration of the sacrament, not

A parishioner brought in an act on petition to enforce a monition, alleging, that it was in great part uncomplied with; first, that a metal cross had been placed on the sill of the great eastern window of the church, above the communion-table; secondly, that the table which had been substituted for a stone altar was not a flat table, but had an elevation, or super-altar; thirdly, that the Ten Commandments were not set up on or against the east end of the church, over the communion-table, but were set up against the walls on each side of the chancel screen. In the answer it was alleged, that the monition had been obeyed; that the cross was disconnected with the communion-table; that the table was flat, the elevation being a movable ledge of wood at the back of the table, on which the candle-sticks were placed; and, lastly, that, on account of the structure of the church, the congregation would not be able to read the Commandments if they were placed over the communion-table :-Held, that the monition had been substantially complied with; first, as the metal cross was a legal ornament, and was not attached to the communion-table. Liddell v. Beal, 14 Moore, P. C. 7; 3 L. T. 218; 8 W. R. 569.

Held, secondly, that the wooden ledge on the communion-table was not a superstitious ornament, or contrary to law. Ib.

Eld, thirdly, that the placing of the Ten Commandments against the walls on each side of the chancel screen was, from the structure of the church, a substantial compliance with the monition, and was not an evasion. Ib.

Baldacehino.]—A baldacchino, or marbic church by the incumbent, cannot be lawfully canopy, erected over the communion-table in a removed, save under the sanction of the ordinary.

Ritchings v. Cordingley, L. R. 3 Ecc. 113; 19 | Clifton, 46 L. J., P. C. 27; 2 P. D. 276; 36 L. T. L. T. 26.

Cross or Crucifix.]—Crosses, as distinguished from crucifixes, when used as mere emblems of the Christian faith and not as objects of superstitions reverence, may lawfully be erected as architectural decorations of churches. Liddell v. Westertun, and Liddell v. Beat, 5 W. B. 470—P. C. On appeal from J. I. 170—Arches Court (1 Jun. (N.S.) 1187; 4 W. B. 167—Consistory Court).

A movable wooden cross, without the sanction of a faculty or the concurrence of the parishioners' churchwarden, but with the concurrence of the vicar's churchwarden, was, by the vicar's authority, placed on a retable or wooden ledge at the back of and immediately above the communion-table in a parish church, with the intention that it should remain there permanently. Two days afterwards the cross was removed by the parishioners' churchwarden, without the authority of a faculty, from the retable, and taken by him out of the church, and retained by him. In a criminal suit promoted by the vicar in the court of arches against him for having removed the same :—Held, that the cross, in the position which it occupied while in the church, is forbidden by law; but, as both parties were in the wrong in having acted without a faculty, the suit was dismissed without costs. Musters v. Durst, 45 L. J., P. C. 51; 1 P. D. 373; 35 L. T. 37; 24 W. R. 1019—P. C.

- Screen.]-On the top and in the centre of a screen, stretching across a church at the entrance to the chancel, was placed a figure of the Saviour on the Cross, in full relief, and about eighteen inches long, facing the congregation :-Held, that the faculty authorising the erection of the screen, having been granted without any knowledge that it was to be surmonnted by a crucifix, did not authorise the erection of the crucifix, which, therefore, in the absence of a proper faculty, had been unlawfully set up and retained. Ridsdale v. Clifton, 46 L. J., P. C. 27; 2 P. D. 276; 36 L. T. 865.

Held, that the ordinary ought not to grant a faculty for the crueifix, it being in danger of becoming the object of superstitious reverence.

Ib.

Holy Communion-Mixed Chalice. ]-In the celebration of the holy communion it is not an ecclesiastical offence to administer wine with which some water has been mixed beforehand, such mixing not taking place in or as part of the section. Helbert v. Purchas (L. R. 3 P. C. 605) disapproved on this point. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop), 62 L. J., P. C. 1, [1892] A. C. 644; 67 L. T. 128; 661 P. 735—P. C. S. P. Elphinstone v. Purchas, 39 L. J., Ecc. 28; L. B. 3 Ecc. 66.

The administration of wine mixed with water, instead of wine, to communicants at the communion is unlawful, although the mixing of water with the wine is done privately, before the service. Hebbert v. Purchas, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 468; 40 L. J., Ecc. 33; L. R. 3 P. C. 605;

19 W. R. 898.

Wafer Bread, ]—It is not unlawful for the minister to use in the administration of the communion bread made in the form of circular wafers, provided that the substance is bread such as is usual to be eaten, and not a composition of flour and water unleavened, such as is a ceremony additional to the ceremonies of the word "wafer" usually denotes. Ridsdale v. the church, and is unlawful. Ib.

The rubric directs that the bread used in the administration of the communion shall be broken by the priest during the course of the prayer of consecration, but it does not require that the bread so used should be of any particular shape. The bread may be wafer bread, or bread made in the special fashion and shape of circular wafers. Elphinstone v. Purchas, 39 L. J., Ecc. 28; L. R. 3 Écc. 66.

The administering wafer bread to communicants at the communion is unlawful. Hebbert v. Purchas, supra.

— Consuming Remnants. ]—To use excessive eare in reverently consuming the remnants of the consecrated elements in the church after the benediction and the conclusion of the service is not an ecclesiastical offence. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop), supra.

Agnus Dei. - Nor is the singing a hymn, consisting of words taken out of the Bible, before the reception of the elements, if the service is not delayed thereby. Ib,

It is unlawful for a minister of the Church of England to cause to be said or sung during the performance of the service for the administration of the communion, after the prayer of consecration, and before the reception of the elements by the communicants, the hymn or prayer known as the Agnus Dei. Martin v. Mackonochie, L. R. 4 Ecc. 279; 32 L. T. 568.

- Eastward Position. ]-The adoption of the "eastward position" during the earlier part of the service before the prayer of consceration explained. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop), supra.

A elergyman stood during the whole of the prayer of consecration in the communion service between the body of the people and the table, with his back to the people, so that the greater part of the people could not see the breaking of he bread or the act of taking of the cup into his hands, and the side of the table at which he so stood was not the north side :- Held, that such a position was unlawful. Hebbert v. Purchus,

It is not unlawful for the officiating minister. while saying the prayer of consecration in the communion service, to stand at the west side of the communion-table with his face to the east and his back to the people, provided that the communicants present, or the bulk of them, being properly placed, are able, if they wish it, to see him break the bread and take the cup in his hand. Ridsdale v. Clifton, 46 L. J., P. C. 27;

2 P. D. 276; 36 L. T. 865. Semble, that evidence that persons sitting immediately behind the officiating minister could not see him perform the manual acts mentioned is not sufficient to establish the charge of illegality. Ib.

- Manual Acts .- The manual acts must be performed so as to be visible to the communicants. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop), 64 L. T. 149; [1891] P. 9.

___ Sign of Cross.]_Making the sign of the cross during the absolution and the benediction,

- Lighted Candles. To take part without objection in the service while lights are burning on the holy table at a time when they are not there during the service, provided they are used required for the purpose of giving light is not an ecclesiastical offence. A clergyman who takes part in the service in a church in which unlawful ornaments are present does not necessarily use such ornaments as a matter of ceremony. Read π. Lincoln (Bishop), 62 L. J., P. C. 1; [1892] A. C. 644; 67 L. T. 128; 56 J. P. 725—P. C.

It is unlawful for a minister of the Church of England to use lighted candles on the communion-table, or on a ledge immediately above the table during the performance of morning prayer, when such candles are not wanted for the purpose of giving light. Martin v. Mac-

To cause lighted candles to be held one on each side of the minister when reading the gospel, such lighted candles not being required for the purpose of giving light, is unlawful. Sumner v. Wix, 39 L. J., Ecc. 25; L. R. 3 Ecc. 58 : 21 L. T. 766.

The ceremonial lighting and burning of candles, placed on a ledge or a shelf over the communiontable, and of candles placed on each side of the table is, during the communion service, unlawful. Ib.

 Incense.]—The ceremonial use of incense immediately before the celebration of the communion, so as to be preparatory or subsidiary to the celebration of the communion, is unlaw-Th

- Prostration and Elevation. - A clergyman having been admonished not to kneel or prostrate himself before the consecrated elements during the prayer of consecration in the communion service, and having afterwards been in the habit, during the prayer of consecration, of bowing down towards the communion-table after replacing the bread upon it, remaining some seconds in that position with his forehead so low that it almost touched the table, and having been in the habit of doing the same thing after replacing the cup :-Held, that the monition had been disobeyed in respect of prostration. Martin w. Machonochie, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 239: 40
 L. J., Ecc. 1; L. R. 3 P. C. 409: 24 L. T. 204; 19 W. R. 545. S. P., 39 L. J., Eec. 11; L. R. 3 P. C. 52; 18 W. R. 217.

A clergyman having been admonished to abstain from the elevation of the cup and paten above his head during the prayer of consecration in the communion service, and having afterwards been in the habit during the prayer of consecration of elevating above his head, not the paten, but the bread, the judicial committee decided, the accused admitting that the elevation of the bread was equivalent to the elevation of the paten and they being of that opinion, that the monition had been disobeyed in respect of the elevation of the paten. Ib.

The committee expressed an opinion that any elevation of the elements, as distinguished from the mere act of removing them from the table and taking them into the hand of the minister, is illegal.

- Adoration.]—The articles and formularies of the church forbid all acts of adoration of the elements in the communion, Sheppard v. Bennett, 41 L. J., Ecc. 1; L. R. 4 P. C. 350; 26 L. T. 923; 20 W. R. 804. - Flowers.]—It is lawful to place vases of flowers on the communion-table, and to keep them as decorations only. Elphinstone v. Purchas, 39 L. J., Ecc. 28; L. R. 3 Ecc. 66.

Vestments. ]-A clergyman of the Church of England wore on different days, while officiating in the celebration of the holy communion, a chasuble, a tunic and au alb :- Held, that each of these vestments was unlawful. Hebbert v. Purchas, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 468; 40 L. J., Ecc. 33; L. R. 3 P. C. 605; 19 W. R. 898.

It is not lawful for the officiating minister to wear during the service of the communion the vestments known as an alb and a chasuble. Ridsdale v. Clifton, 46 L. J., P. C. 27; 2 P. D. 276; 36 L. T. 865.

Advertisements of Queen Elizabeth, 1-The incumbent of a parish church was charged with wearing, when officiating in the communion service, vestments called a chasuble, alb, amice, maniple and stole. At the hearing of the suit, the charge was proved : but it was submitted on his behalf, that, as the promoter had not proved the advertisements of Queen Elizabeth, he had failed to establish that the vestments were illegal :--Held, that the court was bound to follow the rnling of the privy council in Ridsdale v. Clifton (2 P. D. 276), and that it was unnecessary for the promoter to prove the advertisement. Combe v. Edwards, 2 P. D. 354.

4. ALMS.

Right to. ]-The alms collected, whether at the offertory or during divine service, in a pro-prietary chapel, and having a district assigned to it, belong as of right to the rector of the parish in which the chapel is situate, to be disposed of as he and the churchwardens shall direct, and that notwithstanding 14 & 15 Vict. c. 72 (Ir.). Davidall v. Hewitt, 10 L. T. 823.

The court declined to order a decree or a citation in a criminal suit to issue against a clergyman officiating in a chapel to which no district was assigned, for refusing to pay over to the incumbent and churchwardens of the church of the district in which such chapel was situated the alms collected at the offertory in such chapel. there being no satisfactory evidence before the court that the district had become a separate parish. It ordered a citation to issue in a civil suit, calling upon the clergyman to shew cause why he should not pay over to the incumbent and churchwardens of the district church the moneys he had received at the offertory in his chapel. Liddell v. Rainsford, 37 L. J., Ecc. 83.

An unconsecrated chapel was locally situated within the district of a chapel of ease, with a chapelry district annexed: - Held, that the incumbent and churchwardens of the chapel of ease, notwithstanding that the incumbent had sole and exclusive cure of souls within the chapelry district, were not entitled to claim the sacramental alms collected at such unconsecrated chapel. Liddell v. Rainsford, 38 L. J., Ecc. 15.

Right of Collection, in whom. ]-Upon an information under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 32, s. 2, for unlawfully molesting an incumbent, whilst engaged in | even if the committee itself should be of opinion collecting the offertory during the reading of the offertory sentences by another elergyman :-Held, that the duty of collecting the offertory was a lay duty imposed by the rubric upon the "deacons, churchwardens or other fit person (of lower degree) "appointed for that purpose. Cope v. Barber, 41 L. J., M. C. 137; L. R. 7 C. P. 393; 26 L. T. 891; 20 W. R. 885.

Custody of . - Where collections for ordinary church expenses are made at the morning and evening services in parish churches, the churchwardens are the proper custodians of the moneys collected, and such moneys should be placed by them at a bank to an account in their joint names. Howell v. Holdroyd, [1897] P. 198.

Deviation from Usual Practice in Collecting, an Ecclesiastical Offence. —By the accustomed practice of a parish church, when collections from the congregation were made either at the morning or the evening service on Sundays, the collecting bags were brought after the collection up to the chancel steps and placed in the alms dish there held by the minister for the purpose of receiving the same and placing them on the communion-table. One of the churchwardens of the parish was charged in a criminal suit with having committed offences against ecclesiastical law in that, during the time he held office, he had at the morning service on one Sunday and the evening service on another Sunday vexatiously refused to place the bag, in which he had collected money from the congregation, in the alms dish in accordance with the above practice. At the hearing these charges were sufficiently proved :-Held, that, in so deviating from the practice in use in the matter, the respondent had offended against the laws ecclesiastical, and that he ought to follow such practice for the future unless otherwise ordered by the bishop. Ib.

XVII. ARTICLES OF RELIGION.

Doctrine Contradicting. —The 13 Eliz. c. 12, s. 2, is positive in its prohibition, and forbids the promulgation of any doctrine contradicting the articles by a beneficed clergyman. Heath v. Burder, 15 Moore, P. C. 1; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 597; 6 L. T. 562; 10 W. R. 673.

It is immaterial for the purposes of the statute whether the unsound doctrines are preached or published in a book. Ib.

The word "advisedly" in this statute is not limited in its operation to those who avowedly reject the articles, but is used simply to shew that the act complained of is the deliberate act of the accused, and not a casual expression dropped inadvertently. Ib.

It is not necessary, in order to bring a beneficed clergyman within the operation of the 13 Eliz. c. 12, that he should have propounded any intelligible heterodox doctrine: it is sufficient if what he has propounded is directly repugnant to the doctrine laid down in the articles. Ib.

Unless a clergyman convicted under the statute expressly and unreservedly revokes his errors, the court has no discretion, but must pronounce sentence of deprivation. Ib.

Heresy.]—In a charge of heresy the judicial committee is not compelled to affix a definite meaning to any given article of religion, the construction of which is fairly open to doubt.

that a particular construction is supported by the greater weight of reasoning, and the accused onght to be allowed a reasonable latitude of opinion with reference to conformity to the articles and formularies of the church. Joysey v. Nuble, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 167; 40 L. J., Ecc. 11; L. R. 3 P. C. 357; 25 L. T. 167; 19 W. R. 629.

It is not necessary to establish a charge of heresy that there should be a contradiction totidem verbis of some passages in the articles. The publication of opinions repugnant to, or inconsistent with, their clear construction is sufficient. Ib.

It is not competent for a clergyman of the Church of England of his own mere will, not founded upon any critical inquiry, but simply upon his own taste and indgment, to assert that whole passages of some canonical books are without authority, as being contrary to the teach-ing of Christ as contained in other canonical books. Ib.

A clergyman was charged with opposing "commonly-received doctrines," but the doctrines were not specified. The judicial committee rejected the charge, on the ground that the as those contained in the articles of religion or formularies of the church. Ib.

Heretical Doctrines. - Proceedings against a clerk in holy orders, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, for publishing heretical doctrines, in contravention and violation of the articles of religion and formularies of the Church of England, are of a criminal nature; and it is necessary that the accusation should be stated with precision and distinctness in the pleadings. Williams v. Stilishury (Bishop), 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 375; 3 N. R. 494; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 406; 9 L. T. 787; 12 W. R. 445.

With respect to the legal tests of doctrine of the Church of England, by the application of which the judicial committee, as the appellate court, is to try the soundness of the passages libelled, it is in the province of that court, on the one hand, to ascertain the true construction of the articles of religion and formularies referred to in each charge, according to the legal rules for the interpretation of statutes and written instruments; and, on the other hand, to ascertain the plain grammatical meaning of the passages which are charged as being contrary to, or inconsistent with, the doctrines of the church. Ib.

Matters of doctrine, in which the church has prescribed no rule, may be discussed without penal consequences; and no rule is to be ascribed to the church which is not found expressly and distinctly stated, or which is not plainly involved in, or to be collected from, the written law of the church. Ih.

In the 11th article of religion it is laid down that "We are accounted righteous before God only for the merits of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ by faith, and not for our own works or deservings":—Held, that, as the article was wholly silent as to the merits of Jesus Christ being transferred to us, and asserts only that we are instified for the merits of Jesus our Saviour by faith alone, it is not penal in a clergyman to speak of merit by transfer as a fiction, however unseemly that word may be when used in connection with such a subject. Ib.

In an article against a clergyman, it was charged that it was a contradiction of the Church The first state of the state of that any part of the canonical books of the Old or New Testament upon any subject whatever, however unconnected with religious faith or moral duty, was not written under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit :- Held, that the charge that every part of the Scriptures was written under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit was not established, as it was not to be found either in the 6th or 20th articles of religion, the formularies, the Service for the Ordering of Priests, or the the Nicene Creed. Ih.

It is not competent to a clergyman of the Church of England to teach or suggest that a hope may be entertained of a state of things contrary to what the church expressly teaches or declares will be the case. Ib.

But it is not penal for a clergyman to express a hope of the ultimate pardon of the wicked.

Visible Presence in Holy Communion.]-The Church of England does not by her articles or formularies affirm or require her clergy to accept any other presence in the communion, than a presence in the soul of the faithful receiver ; but the articles and formularies of the church do not exclude the maintaining a "real, actual objective" presence in that sacrament, inasmuch as a presence other than spiritual is not thereby affirmed. Sheppurd v. Bennett (2nd appeal), 41 L. J. Ecc. 1; L. R. 4 P. C. 371; 26 L. T. 923; 20 W. R. 894—P. C. On appeal from, L. R. A. & E. 167; 39 L. J., Ecc., 68; 23 L. T. 339.

It is not lawful for a clergyman to teach that the sacrifice or offering of Christ upon the cross or the redemption, propitiation or satisfaction wrought by it, is or can be repeated in the ordinance of the Lord's Supper; nor that in that ordinance there is or can be any sacrifice or offering of Christ which is efficacious in the sense in which Christ's death is efficacious, to procure the remission of the guilt or punishment of

The articles and formularies of the church forbid all acts of adoration of the consecrated elements in the communion. Ib.

The successive alterations and omissions in the Book of Common Prayer, by which words or passages inculcating particular doctrines or assuming a belief in them have been struck out, are evidence that the church has ceased to affirm those doctrines, but the effect of such changes, when they stand alone, is that it ceases to be unlawful to contradict such doctrines, and not that it becomes unlawful to maintain them. Ib.

Before an appeal is presented to the queen in council in respect of an order directing the reformation of articles of charge or other pleadings, the actual reformation which appears to the judge to be required should be made by him on the face of the order, so that on appeal the very passages omitted may be clearly brought under the judgment of the judicial committee. Ib.

XVIII. HOMILIES AND DOCTRINE.

Standard of Doctrine.]—Semble, the homilies are, under the 35th article of religion, a standard of doctrine applicable to the published opinions of the clergy of the Church of England. Salisbury (Bishop) v. Williams, 6 L. T. 726.

(Bishop), 14 Jur. 443 (see report, published separately, by E. F. Moore, 1852)—P. C.

Baptism.]-The doctrines that baptism is a sacrament generally necessary to salvation, but that the grace of regeneration does not so necessarily accompany the act of baptism that regeneration invariably takes place after baptism; that baptism is an effectual sign of grace, by which God works invisibly in us, but only in such as worthily receive it, in whom alone it has a wholesome effect; that, without reference to the qualification of the recipient, baptism is not in itself an effectual sign of grace; that infants baptised, and dving before actual sin, are certainly saved, but that in no case is regeneration in baptism preconditional, are not contrary or repugnant to the doctrines of the Church of England, Ib.

Impugning the Doctrine of the Trinity.]-Semble, the 53 Geo. 3, c. 160, does not alter the common law with respect to impugning the doctrine of the Trinity, but only removes the penalties imposed on persons denying such doctrine by 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 32, and extends to such persons the benefits conferred on all other Protestant dissenters by 1 Will. & M. sess. 1, c. 18. Rew v. Waddington, 1 B. & C. 26; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 37; 25 R. R. 288.

XIX. RUBRICS.

Baptism.]—The rubrics of the Common Prayer Books of 1603 and 1661, relating to private baptism, are cumulative, and not substitutionary of the rabric in force anterior to 1603, and do not affect the validity of lay baptism. Escott v. Martin, 4 Moore, P. C. 104; 6 Jur. 765.

A child baptised with water in the name of the Trinity by a layman (a Wesleyan Methodist), not anthorised to administer the right of baptism :-Held, not to be nubaptised, within the meaning of the rubric for the burial of the dead in the Common Prayer Book, as incorporated into the Uniformity Act, 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 4. 1b.

A child baptised with water, in the name of the Holy Trinity, by a person alleged to be in heresy or schism with the Church of England, is not unbaptised within the meaning of the rubric for the burial service in the Book of Common. Prayer. Titchmarsh v. Chapman, 3 Curt. 840; 8 Jur. 626.

Holy Communion. |-The rubric of the second year of the reign of King Edward VI., sanctioned by 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 1, regulates the ritual of the Church of England. Martin v. Machowchie, 38 L. J., Ecc. 1; L. R. 2 P. C. 365; 19 L. T. 508; 17 W. R. 187.

According to this rubric, the following practices are unlawful :- First, the elevation during or after the prayer of consecration of the paten and cnp. Secondly, kneeling or prostration before the consecrated elements. Thirdly, the use of lighted candles on the communion-table during the celebration of the holy communion, such candles not being wanted for giving light. Fourthly, using incense in the celebration of the holy communion. And fifthly, mixing water with the wine used in the administration of the holy communion. Ib.

"Minister." ]-The word "minister," in | contained the following direction : " Every the rubries relating to the administration of the holy communion, must be taken to include a bishop, and a bishop officiating as minister in the service of the holy communion is bound to celebrate it in the order and form prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop) (No. 2), 14 P. D. 148.

Covering of Holy Table. ]-It is contrary to the 82nd canon, and has no warranty in primitive use or custom, to leave the communion-table without any decent covering during divine service. even though there should be no administration of the communion. Elphinstone v. Purchas, 39 L. J., Ecc. 28: L. R. 3 Ecc. 66.

Position of Minister. |-- It is contrary to the rabric, viz., that which precedes the Lord's Prayer at the beginning of the communion service for the minister to read the collects next before the epistle for the day in the communion service, standing in front of the table, with his back to the people, or, while reading the collects following the creed, to stand in front of the middle of the table at the foot of the steps leading up to the same, with his back to the people; and though, perhaps, not governed by any positive order in a rubric, it is contrary to the intent of the prayerbook for the minister to read the epistle in the communion service with his back to the people, the epistle not being a prayer addressed to God, but a portion of the scripture read to the people. Ib.

Notices. - The minister has no warranty in the prayer-book for announcing the celebration of the communion as a "high celebration of the Holy Eucharist," or for giving notice of holy days other than those which the church has directed to be observed, and which are to be found after the preface of the prayer-book, under the head of "A Table of all the Feasts that are to be observed in the Church of England throughout the Year." Ib.

____ Vestments.] — The ornaments of the minister to which the rubric refers are those mentioned in the prayer-book of Edward VI., and no ecclesiastical censure can attach for their use in the prescribed manner in the performance of divine service. Elphinstone v. Purchus, 39 L. J., Ecc. 28; L. B. 3 Ecc. 66.

They are, for ministers below the order of bishops, and when officiating at the communion service, cope, vestment or chasuble, surplice, alb and tunicle; in all other services the surplice only, except that in cathedral churches and colleges the academical hood may be also worn. The cap called a "biretta," though not mentioned may be worn by the minister as a decent protection to the head when needed. Ib.

By the first book of Edward VI. (1549) the minister is directed, while celebrating the communion, to wear a white alb, plain with a "vest-ment" (chasuble) "or cope." By I Eliz. c. 2, 2.5, it was enacted that "Such ornaments of the church, and of the ministers thereof, shall be retained and be in use, as was in this Church of England by authority of parliament in the second year of Edward VI. (1549), until other order shall therein be taken by the authority of the Queen's majesty, with the advice of her commissioners, appointed under the greal seal of England for causes ecclesiastical, or of the metropolitan of this realm." In 1566, advertisements were issued minister saying any public prayer, or ministering the sacraments or other rights of the church. shall wear a comely surplice with sleeves, to be provided at the charge of the parish." The rubric of the present prayer-book (1662) directs that "such ornaments of the church, and of the ministers thereof, at all times of their ministration, shall be retained and be in use as were in this Church of England, by the authority of parliament, in the second year of the reign of Edward VI." (1549):—Held, that the ornaments rubric of 1662 does not repeal all legislation on the question subsequently to 1549, but must be read as subject to any further order taken under 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 25; that the advertisements of Elizabeth were a "taking other order," within the act, by the Queen, with the advice of the metropolitan; and that, as the advertisements enjoined the use of the surplice at the administration of the communion, they rendered the use of albs and chasubles, at that administration, unlawful. Ridsdalev. Clifton, 46 L. J., P. C. 27; 2 P. D. 276; 36 L. T. 865,

See also col. 1322.

- Number of Persons to Communicate. ]-In a proceeding under the Public Worship Regnlation Act, 1874, it was proved that the incum-bent of a parish church had, at the celebration of the communion, consecrated and received the elements when only one person communicated with him. It was also proved that a like infringement of the rubric had taken place on several previous occasions during his incumbency, and that no steps had been taken by him to prevent its recurrence:—Held, that he must be admonished to obey the rubric. Clifton v. Ridsdale, 1 P. D. 316; 35 L. T. 432. Affirmed on this point, S. C., supra.

- Refusal to Administer.]—The 1 Edw. 6, c. 1, s. 8, provides "that the priest shall not, without lawful cause, deny the communion to any person that shall demand and humbly desire it." The 27th canon (1603) provides that "no minister, when he celebrateth the communion, shall wittingly administer the same to any that are common and notorious depravers of the Book of Common Prayer." J. having published a volume of "Selections from the Old and New Testaments," omitting chapters and parts of chapters, and being requested by his minister to explain such omissions, wrote a private letter stating—"The parts I have omitted are quite incompatible with religion or decency": -- Held, that he was not a common and notorious deprayer of the Book of Common Prayer, within the meaning of the canon. Jenkins v. Cook, 45 L. J., P. C. 1; 1 P. D. 80; 34 L. T. 1; 24 W. R. 439.

The "canse" which under the words of the rubric, defining a cause for repulsion, is sufficient to warrant a minister of his own authority in repelling a parishioner from the communion, is that he is "an open and notorious evil liver," who thereby gives offence to the congregation; the term "evil liver" being limited to moral conduct as distinguished from belief. Ib.

XX. FACULTIES. 1. GENERALLY.

Injunction to Restrain Persons from acting this realm," In 1566, advertisements were issued under Faculty if Granted.]—It is an abuse of by the metropolitan and other prelates, which the process of the court to ask for an injunction to restrain the vicar and churchwardens of a i not yet been granted by an ecclesiastical court.

L. T. 664; 42 W. R. 102. Affirming 57 J. P. 533.

Practice.]—The vicar and one of the church-wardens, and the parishioners and inhabitants of a parish, were cited in the consistory court of Lichfield, to shew cause why a faculty should not be granted for the removal of certain additions and articles alleged to have been placed in the church without a faculty. An appearance was entered on behalf of the vicar and the churchwardens. They brought in an act on petition which concluded with a prayer to the judge to direct the issue of a faculty confirming the placing of the additions and articles in the church. The judge directed this prayer to be struck out of the act on petition :-Heid, on appeal, that the prayer ought not to have been struck out, and that the vicar and churchwardens were entitled to pray for a confirmatory faculty without the issue of a fresh citation. Gardner v. Ellis, L. R. 4 Ecc. 265.

Right to sue-St. Margaret's, Westminster. ]-A member of the commons house of parliament has a sufficient interest to institute a faculty suit in respect of alterations in or additions to the parish church of St. Margaret's, Westminster. Vincent v. Eyton, [1897] P. 1.

Faculty derogating from previous Faculty. ]-See St. Galriel, Fenchurch Street v. City of London Real Property Co., [1896] P. 95.

2. AS TO CATHEDRALS.

Fabric. ]-Semble, that a faculty is not necessary for an alteration in the fabric of a cathedral church. Phillpotts v. Boyd., 14 L. J., Ecc. 41; L. R. 6 P. C. 485; 32 L. T. 78; 28 W. R. 491.

3. AS TO CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

Alterations in Churches without Legal Authority. |-- Articles having been filed against a clergyman for making alterations in his church without having first obtained a legal sanction to them, he gave an affirmative issue thereto. The court then requested the archdeacon of the inspect such alterations, and to report to it as to their nature and propriety, which he did:—Held, that the court will adopt the recommendation of such a report, unless it contains some grievous misstatement of fact, or erroneous conclusion of law. Siereking v. Kingsford, 36 L. J., Ecc. Cas. 1: 15 L. T. 300.

- Removing Ornaments placed without Faculty-Rector's Right.]-The rector of a parish church has no legal right without the sanction of a faculty to remove out of the chancel church ornaments, such as military colours, placed there without a faculty in a permanent position with the concurrence of cumbent and churchwardens, with the approval a former rector and former churchwardens. of the vestry, apply for a faculty for alterations in Vincení v. Eyton, [1897] P. 1.

To remove things introduced without a parish from acting under a faculty which has Faculty. |-The ordinary decided that it was competent for a churchwarden to promote a suit for a faculty to remove things introduced into the church without a faculty in opposition to his co-churchwarden. Amongst the things for the removal of which a faculty was ordered to issue were the following :- 1. A chancel-screen with gates, the screen made of oak, about thirteen feet in height, with close panels up to the height of two feet six inches from the ground, and open tracery above, and surmounted with a cross over the centre opening. 2. Three additional steps, on which the communion table was raised above the floor of the chancel. 3. A wooden screen separating the south transept from the rest of the church. Against the decree of the ordinary. so far as it authorised the removal of the things last above mentioned, one of the opponents appealed to the court, and, by leave of the court and consent of all parties, two of the parishioners who had not appeared in the court below were allowed to intervene in the appeal, and prayed that a confirmatory faculty authorising the retention of the things forming the subjectmatter of the appeal might issue :- The court directed that a confirmatory faculty should issue to the interveners authorising the retention in the church of the chancel sercen, without the gates and with the panels in decent form, but in all other material respects confirmed the decree of the ordinary. Bradford v. Fry, 4 P. D. 93.

> Considerations for granting.]—On an applica-tion for a faculty, to authorise alterations in a parish church, made on behalf of the vicar, and one of the churchwardens of the parish, it appeared that, although the major part of those parishioners who were members of the Church of England was in favour of the application, the majority of the vestry, composed principally of parishioners not members of the Church of England, was opposed to it. The court, in granting a faculty to authorise some of the proposed alterations, held that, although it might be fairly influenced by the vote of the vestry in relation to alterations likely to affect the architectural appearance of the church or the convenience of the public, yet it was bound in matters connected with the comfort and convenience of those who attended the church to give greater weight to the opinion of the majority of those parishioners who were members of the Church of England, Tottenham (Vicar) v. Venn, L. R. 4 Ecc. 221.

The rector of a parish church applied for a faculty to make certain alterations, at his own expense, in the furniture and fittings of the church, which were not in a dilapidated state. The churchwardens, acting on behalf of the parishioners, opposed the grant of the faculty. The applicant having failed to shew either that the existing arrangements in the fittings of the church were so inconvenient and uncomfortable as to deter the parishioners from attending divine service, or that the proposed alterations were so clearly for the increased comfort and advantage of the parishioners as to induce the court to overrule their opposition, the faculty was refused. Evans v. Slach, 38 L. J., Ecc. 38.

- Opinion of Parishioners. ] - Where the in-cumbent and churchwardens, with the approval their parish church, and the grant or the refusal of the faculty is merely a matter for the discreption of the ordinary, the faculty ought not to be Sepulchre Vivar v. St. Sepulchre Churchwargranted unless it is proved to the satisfaction of the ordinary that if the proposed alterations are carried out, the church will be thereby rendered of the parishioners who worship there, more suitable, more appropriate or more adequate to its purposes, or that there exists either on the part of the parishioners generally or of the parishioners actually attending the church, a general desire in favour of the faculty being granted. Peek v. Trower, 7 P. D. 21; 45 J. P. 797. Explained in Nickalls v. Briscoe; see col. 1333.

Against wish of Vestry. ]-At the time of the erection of a new church, which on consecration became the parish church of A., the foundations were laid, and the designs prepared for a stone pulpit, but, from want of funds at the time, a temporary wooden pulpit was placed in the church. Some years afterwards, certain persons connected with the parish gave directions for the execution of the new pulpit, and, having raised a portion of the estimated cost of it by voluntary contributions, and given security for the rest, so that the parish could not incur any liability in the matter, they applied to the proper court for leave to fix it in the church. The defendants, acting on a resolution of the vestry of the parish, refused to consent to the erection of the new pulpit until the debt for the building of the church itself had been paid off. No objection was made to the character or ornamentation of the proposed new pulpit:-Held, that, as the parish had already provided a substantial pulpit, which continued in good order and was in no way dilapidated, the court could not, against the expressed objection of the vestry, order the removal of such temporary pulpit, and that it should be replaced by a new one; but it might allow a faculty to issue on the terms proposed by the vestry. Jackson v. Singer, 37 L. J., Ecc. 9.

To whom Faculty should Issue-Parish with two sets of Churchwardens. ]-The parish church of St. Sepulchre is within the city of London, but the parish of St. Sepulchre is situate partly within the city of London and partly in the county of Middlesex, and five churchwardens of the parish church are annually elected, three by the vestry of the portion of the parish within the city of London, and two by the vestry of the portion of the parish in the county of Middlesex. The vicar and the churchwardens elected by the city portion of the parish having petitioned the ordinary for a faculty to authorise certain repairs in the parish church, the churchwardens elected by the Middlesex portion of the parish appeared as opponents in the cause, and prayed the court to direct the faculty, if granted, to issue to them jointly with the petitioners, and to declare what were the rights of the respective parties to the suit with respect to church management. It was admitted that the churchwardens elected by the city portion of the parish had for a long series of years had the sole control of a certain trust fund available for payment of the costs of the proposed alterations :—Held, that the churchwardens elected by each portion of the parish were equally officers of the ordinary in all mat-dens. 5 P. D. 64.

For Appropriation of Vault. ]-The grant of a more convenient, more fit for the accommodation faculty for the appropriation of a vault in a church or a chapel is entirely within the discretion of the ordinary. The ecclesiastical law requires, before such faculty is decreed, that all persons interested in opposing the grant should be heard before the ordinary. The vicar or perpetual curate of a church, though entitled to officiate in and have free access to the chancel has no right to fees for the erection of monumental tablets, or for the construction of vaults in the chancel. A faculty for that purpose may be legally granted without his consent; but he has a persona standi, by reason of his position as a persona stand, by reason of an postuon as incumbent, to oppose the grant of such a faculty. Rugg v. Kingsmill, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 79; 37 L. J., Ecc. 13; L. R. 2 P. C. 59; 18 L. T. 94.

> - Discretion, how to be exercised. ]-Where a faculty was granted by the ordinary (confirmed by the arches court), for the appropriation of a family vault under the chancel of a district church, though objected to by the vicar of the parish because, among other reasons, the access to it, being only from the exterior and no churchyard or burial-ground attached, there was no consecrated ground outside the church on which any part of the burial service could be performed:—Held (by the judicial committee), that, though the granting of such a faculty was entirely within the discretion of the ordinary, yet such discretion ought to be exercised so as to prevent the possibility of a misuse by the grantee : and that, in the circumstances, the grant ought only to issue on condition that the grantee (who was owner of the land adjacent to the church) appropriated, and consented to the consecration of, a sufficient piece of ground near the opening of the vault, to be so consecrated for the sole and special purpose of burials in the vault ; and such faculty decreed accordingly. Ib.

For Window - Inscription - Discretion of Ordinary.]—An application was made to the consistory court of Chester to authorise by faculty the erection in a parish church in the diocese of Chester of a stained glass memorial window, having placed below it an inscription in Latin, the translation of a portion of which was as follows :- " Of your charity pray for the soul of H. F. . . . deceased . . . and for the sonl of J. H. C. . . . deceased":—Held, that the ordinary ought not in his discretion to sauction the introduction into the church of any inscription of which the above words would form part, and that so much of the application as prayed that a faculty might be granted for placing such words beneath the proposed window must be rejected. Breeks v. Woolfrey (1 Curt. 880) discussed. Eyerton v. All Saints, Odd Rode, [1894] P. 15.

For affixing Military Colours to Walls of Chancel of Parish Church. ]-The ordinary has jurisdiction to authorise by faculty the affixing of military colours as church ornaments to the walls of the chancel of a parish church where it appears that a former rector of the church has ters relating to the management of the parish approved of their being placed in the chancel, church, and that the faculty must issue to the Vincent v. Euton. [1897] P. 1.

For Movable Seats in Chancel ]-Where the placed thereon, holding that such loft and such chancellor of the diocese had decreed a faculty for placing two movable benches in the chancel for the use of the vicar and his family, the Court of Arches held, on appeal, that such a decree would not be disturbed unless it were plainly shewn that a clear violation of a private right was involved, or that such decree would give rise, actually or probably, to a considerable the chancel sercen without the loft surmounting degree of general inconvenience. Eld v. Perry, 11 Jur. (N.s.) 228,

- Removable at Discretion of Ordinary. A faculty to place in the chancel movable seats, which may be removed at the discretion of the voluntary subscriptions, and that the organ and ordinary, is valid. Ib.

For Stained Glass Window in Chancel Opposition of Majority of Parishioners — Discretion of Ordinary. —The discretion of the ordinary as to granting or refusing a faculty for placing a stained glass window in the chancel is the same as if it is proposed to place the window in any other part of the church; and the wish of the majority of the parishioners that an existing window shall not be replaced by a stained glass window in nowise fetters the ordinary in exercising such discretion. Peek v. Trancer (7 P. D. 21) explained. Nichalls v. Briscoe, [1892] P. 269.

Memorials not Admissible in Evidence.]-Decision by the consistory court of Rochester that in a contested cause of faculty memorials signed by parishioners, asking that the faculty prayed for be not granted, are inadmissible as evidence. Ih.

For Rood-Loft and Rood-Chancel Screen and Gates. |-The vicar and churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of Norwich petitioned the ordinary to authorise by faculty the retention in the church of the following works introduced into the church since its consecration and without the sanction of the faculty :-- A chancel screen without gates, but surmounted by a loft resting on the top of the screen, four feet wide, and with sides three feet high, to which access was obtained by the old rood-loft stairs. A beam extending across the west end of the chancel at a height of four feet above the chancel screen, and placed upon such beam a figure of Our Lord upon the Cross, and on one side a figure of the Virgin Mary, and on the other side a figure of St. John ; all such figures being graven in wood and of about life-size. -And the erection of the following new works:—The placing upon the above-neu-tioned beam of two other figures, one to represent Mary Magdalenc, and the other a Centurion together with the figure of a Cherub at each end of the beam, the erection of gates to the chancel screen, of screens across the aisles, and of choir stalls with screens behind them. It appeared that a dedication service had been held in the church on the occasion when the figures on the beam across the chancel had been put up, and that every year on Palm Sunday members of the church choir went into the loft above the chancel screen and sang there. The chancellor of the diocese of Norwich refused to grant a faculty for the retention in the church of the on the ordinary being satisfied that the figures loft over the chancel screen or of the figures placed on the beam above the same-in his ration only, and that there was no ground for figures so placed were unlawful within the ruling of Lord Penzance in Clifton v. Ridsdale (1 P. D. 316), and matters as to which in the discretion of the court a faculty ought not to be granted, there being danger of "superstitious reverence" being paid to the rood. Further, the chancellor decreed a faculty to issue for it; for the addition of gates to such screen, for the screens across the aisles with gates attached, and for the choir stalls and screens ; evidence being before him that the expense of the works yet to be done would be met by other property in the chancel and aisles required protection. St. John the Baptist, Timberhill v. Rectors of same, [1895] P. 71.

Retention on Chancel Screen of Carved Figures -Historical Scene.]-A figure of Our Lord upon the Cross was in 1880 placed in a parish church above, and on the centre of the screen separating the chancel from the nave; and in 1893 there were placed on one side thereof a figure of the Virgin Mary, and on the other side thereof a figure of St. John. All the figures were carved in wood, were about two feet nine inches in height, the central figure being rather higher than the two others, and all had been placed in the church without the sanction of the faculty. There was not in the church anything of the nature of a rood-loft or rood-stairs, and no candles were round or in front of the figures. In 1896 the rector and churchwardens of the parish instituted a cause of faculty praying the ordinary to authorise by faculty the retention of the three figures on the screen, and filed affidavits stating that the services of the church had been conducted in accordance with the directions of the Book of Common Prayer, and that there was not and had not been anything in the said services or in the attitude of those attending the services to indicate or suggest any probability of worship, adoration, or any superstitious reverence being adoration, or any superstations reverence being paid to the figures on the screen. No person appeared to oppose the grant of the faculty. The faculty ordered to issue as prayed. Bursham (Rector) v. Parishioners, [1896] P. 256.

Restoration of Chancel Screen-Figures of Our Lord upon the Cross, St. Mary, and St. John.]-A crucifix with the accompanying figures of the Virgin Mary and St. John is not forbidden by law to be erected on a chancel screen, but may be placed in that position in a parish church under a faculty where the ordinary is satisfied that it is not likely to be abused by superstitions reverence being paid to it. faculty authorising the restoration in a parish church of a stone chancel screen or interior chancel arch of pre-Reformation date by placing on three existing pedestals springing from ornamental tracery in the upper parts of such screen interior arch three stone figures without gilding or painting, each two feet three inches high —one, the central figure, representing Our Lord upon the Cross, and the other two representing respectively the Virgin Mary and St. John—was granted by the consistory court of St. Albans would be for the purpose of architectural decoopinion a rood-loft and rood—or for the erce-ronsonable apprehension that they would be tion of the additional figures proposed to be abused or made the subject of superstitious tants, [1897] P. 185.

- Dispensing with Resolution of Select Vestry.]—A petition by the vicar and church-wardens of the parish church of R., and the chapelwardens of a chapel of case in the parish of R., asking for a faculty to authorise the erection in the chapel of a chancel screen with grates, and with a cruefit and figures of the Virgin Mary and St. John placed on the top of the screen, was supported by a resolution of a meeting of the pew-renters of the chapel. The vestry for ecclesiastical purposes of the parochial area in which both the parish church and the chapel of ease were situate was a select vestry of the whole civil parish of R., which comprised a larger area than the parochial area above mentioned, and the vestry had passed no resolution either in favour of or against the grant of the faculty:—Held, (i.) That a resolution of the select vestry might be dispensed with. (ii.) That a faculty for chancel screen gates ought not to be granted. (iii.) That a faculty for a crucifix with or without figures on either side placed on a chancel screen ought not to be granted, Richmond (Vicar) v. Inhabitants, [1897] P. 70.

For Chancel Gates.]-A faculty for chancel gates was granted, it being shewn that the chancel, from its richness, required protection. St. Agnes, In re. 11 P. D. 1.

A faculty for the erection of chancel screen gates in a parish church was granted by the consistory court of London, on that the court being satisfied in its discretion that the erection would be of utility. St. James, Norland v. Parishioners, [1894] P. 256.

The rector and churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of St. Albans petitioned the ordinary for a faculty to anthorise the erection in the church of a chancel screen with gates in the centre, by the closing of which access to the chancel from the nave of the church would be wholly cut off, and at the hearing of the suit it appeared that, if the faculty were granted and the screen erected as proposed, the gates to it would be kept open during the performance of divine service, but would be fastened at other times when the church was open, and, being so fastened, would afford protection against the contents of the chancel and vestries being injured or stolen. The chancellor of the diocese of St. Albans being of opinion that the grant of a faculty, authorising the creetion of the gates, would be an exercise of his discretion in opposition to the decision of the court of arches in Bradford v. Fry (4 P. D. 93), refused the faculty as prayed, but intimated that, if the petitioners desired, the court would decree a faculty to issue for the crection of the chancel screen without any gates to it. St. Andrew, Romford v. Parishioners, [1894] P. 220.

For Communion Table in Side Chapel.]-The court, on the ground of convenience and saving of expense, decreed a faculty for the erection of a communion table in a side chapel of a church in which there was already a communion table. Holy Trinity Church, Stroud Green, In re, 12 P. D. 199; 36 W. R. 288.

4. AS TO CHURCHYARDS.

Altering or Building on Part of. ]-No judge has power to grant a faculty to convert a part of a churchyard into a highway requiring to be widened for the public benefit, though consent is given by all persons interested. St. John's, Walbrook v. Parishioners, 2 Rob. Ec. Rep 515; 16 Jur. 645.

No judge has power to grant a faculty to sanction the use of consecrated ground for secular purposes; but, as a vestry room is employed for ecclesiastical as well as secular uses, a faculty, after some hesitation, was granted for the erection of a vestry room on consecrated ground.

Campbell v. Paddington Parishioners, 2 Rob.

Ec. Rep. 558; 16 Jur. 646.

The churchwardens of a parish, with the sanction and approval of the vicar, the rural dean of the district, and the bishop of the diocese, but without any legal authority, permitted a portion of the churchyard to be separated from the remainder, and to be taken into and to form part of a public road :- Held, that it is not in the power of any ecclesiastical court whatever to allow any portion of consecrated ground to be devoted to secular uses, or to grant a faculty to confirm such an appropriation, Harper v. Forbes, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 275.

Consecrated Ground-Want of Jurisdiction to sanction Conversion to Secular Use. ]-The vicar and churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of Rochester petitioned the ordinary to decree a faculty to authorise a strip of consecrated ground, added to the churchyard under the Burial Act, 1852, but in which burials were prohibited by secretary of state's order, being taken therefrom and made part of an adjoining public highway for the purpose of widening the same. In their petition they alleged (inter alia) that no interments had ever been made within the portion of the churchyard proposed to be so dealt with by the faculty; that inconvenience was caused to persons attending the church from there being no pathway on the side of the highway adjacent to the churchyard; and that the proposed widening would enable such a pathway to be made, and would greatly conduce to the convenience of those attending the church as well as of the general public. The citation to lead the faculty was by order moved for in court. On the hearing of the motion the chancellor of the diocese of Rochester, being of opinion that by granting the faculty prayed for he would be authorising the approoriation of consecrated ground to secular uses, thus entertaining a cause beyond the jurisdiction of the court, refused the motion. If the commissioners do anything improper, the court of king's bench will grant a mandamus. Ib.

The commissioners are, by the acts, directed to account before the auditors of the treasury and, if there be any grievance, the relief is by Nothing can issue by order of the treasurer without a previous one from the commissioners.

The commissioners should have been parties only, and not the treasurer, for it is absurd to make a person who acts ministerially the sole party. Ib.

- Authority of Ecclesiastical Court. ]-The ecclesiastical court has no authority to examine the validity of an order under seal made by the ecclesiastical commissioners under the provisions of an act of parliament. It is bound to obey the directions it contains, although it may be satisfied that there was an irregularity in procuring it. White v. Steele, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 805.

Authority of Vestry to pull down Portions of Churches under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 100, s. 90.]— The expressions contained in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 100, 8, 90, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, s. 3, do not exempt the ecclesiastical commissioners acting under the church building acts, from the provisions of the first-mentioned act, and vestries have, under it, authority to pull down such portions of churches, as well as of other buildings, as or characters, as wen as order similaries, as transgress the provisions of that act. Ecclesi-astical Commissioners v. Clerkenwell Vestry, 3 De G. F. & J. 688; 30 L. J., Ch. 454; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 810; 4 L. T. 599; 9 W. R. 681.

Church Patronage and Appointments.]--By 4 & 5 Anne, c. xxii., a rectory was united and annexed to a deanery, and the dean was to be instituted without presentation; by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 50, all the estate and interest of any holder of any deanery in any lands, tithes and other hereditaments or endowments whatsoever, annexed or belonging to, or usually held or enjoyed with, such deanery (except any right of patronage), or whereof the rents and profits had been usually taken and enjoyed by the holder of such deanery, as such holder, separately and in addition to his share of the corporate revenues of the chapter, were vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners; and by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 19, no spiritual person appointed to a deanery of a cathedral may accept, to take and hold therewith, any benefice unless in the cathedral city, and not exceeding 500% a year in value. Jurisdiction.1—The creation of a church is an affair of the church, so as to be within the exception of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 118, s. 5a, did not apply to the church control of the church so as to be within the exception of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 118, s. 3a, and is, therefore, commissioners the whole rectory, involving the patronage, cure of souls, and temporalities, and a clear intention was shewn, on looking to the whole statute, not to pass to them patronage or anything involving the cure of souls, nor to interfere when such matters were involved, without express mention and proper provisions respecting them; that 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 19, also did not apply, as the dean had no option as to accepting the rectory; and that therefore the statute of Anne was not affected and the dean was entitled to the rectory. Reg. v. Champaeys, 40 L. J., C. P. 95; L. R. 6 C. P. 384; 24 L. T. 181; 19 W. R. 386.

> Commonable Lands.]—The 51 Geo. 3, c. 115, does not empower the ecclesiastical commissioners as lords of the manor to discharge commonable lands from common or customary rights not strictly manorial-as, e.g. the right of parishioners to their village green. Forbes, v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 42 L. J., Ch. 97; L. R. 15 Eq. 51; 27 L. T. 511; 21 W. R. 169.

Application of Purchase-Money of Lands, not used under Church Building Acts, compulsorily sold.]—The ecclesiastical commissioners may, in exercise of the powers given to them by the Church Building Acts, 1822 (s. 34) and 1840 (s. 19), apply part of the purchase money of land conveyed to them, but not used for the purposes of those acts (which has been taken from them by a public body under the powers of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845), in paying off a charge upon the living for money borrowed from Queen Anne's Bounty and in structural repairs to the church. These powers may be exercised. although the land has, by reason of the consecration of the church, vested in the vicar. Christ. Church, East. Greenwich (Ficar), Every parte, 65 L. J., Ch. 331; [1896] 1 Ch. 520; 74 L. T. 18; 44 W. R. 520.

Statute of Limitations.]-In 1854, the ecclesiastical commissioners succeeded to the estates of the dean of A., and in 1877 they brought an action to recover part of those estates which had been possessed adversely to them and their predecessors, the deans, for more than twenty, but less than sixty, years :-Held (dissentiente Lord) Blackburn), that, under the words of the 57th section of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, the commissioners. had the same time within which to enforce their claim to the property that the dean would have had under the 29th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c, 27. mat unter the zant section of 3 & 4 with 3, 6, 2 J., Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. the 57th section of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, which as to time render the 29th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, applicable to the commissioners.

Ib. Held, also, that the right of action to recover the land accrued at the surrender of the lease current when the allotment was made. Ib.

Power to Sell Site with all Essements.] Under the statute 23 & 24 Vict. c. 142, and an of London was vested in the ecclesiastical com- | which had been bought under the power thereby missioners, upon trust to pull down the building, dispose of the materials, and sell the site. They pulled down the church, and the site was still vacant. The defendant who had become the owner of land, formerly part of the glebe of the church, on which some low buildings had stood, commenced the erection of buildings which, if completed, would have materially obstructed the access of light to windows occupying the same position as those of the late church :-Held, that the ecclesiastical commissioners had power to sell the site, with all the easements which had been enjoyed by the church, so that, if the church had ancient lights, the purchaser would have the benefit of them. Ecclesiastical Commissioners V. Kino, 49 L. J., Ch. 529; 14 Ch. D. 213; 42 L. T. 201; 28 W. R. 544—C. A.

Consent to use of Parish Land for Cemetery.] -A proposal for the making over to the burial board of a place, of a piece of land belonging to the parish to be used as a cemetery, will not be sanctioned by the court without the previous approbation of the application by the charity commissioners. Watford Burial Board, Ex parte, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1045.

Glebe Lands-Drainage and Improvement Company.]-A rent-charge for a certain period of time, in arrear, charged by an order made by the inclosure commissioners upon the inheritance of glebe lands of a rectory, under the provisions of the General Land Drainage and Improvement Company's Act of 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 91), was, under the provisions of the same act, ordered to be raised by a sale of the glebe lands. In an action by the owners of a rent-charge, in arrear, charged on glebe lands, for a declaration that they were entitled under the order made by the inclosure commissioners to a charge on the lands for the sums due and to become due of the rent-charge, and asking for a sale of the lands, the ecclesiastical commissioners were made defendants:—Held, on demurrer, that they were not necessary parties. Soutish Widows' Fund v. Craig. 51 L. J., Ch. 363; 20 Ch. D. 208; 30 W. R. 463.

Site for Church—Vesting in Incumbent— Liability for Paving.]—Land having been conveyed under the church building acts to the ecclesiastical commissioners as a site for a church, a church was afterwards erected on a part of the land, and the church and part only of the land were consecrated :- Held, that, upon such consecration, the whole of the land so conveyed to the commissioners vested in the incumbent under s. 13 of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70 (Church Building Acts Amendment Act); that the commissioners ceased to be the owners of it, and were therefore not liable under the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 and 1862, to contribute in respect of it towards the cost of paving a new street. Plumstead Board of Works v. Eccle-siastical Commissioners, [1891] 2 Q. B. 361; 64 L. T. 830; 39 W. R. 700; 55 J. P. 791.

Site of Parsonage-house-Power of Re-sale.] —Under the powers contained in s. 9 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, land was purchased by the commissioners; but, such land not being required conferred into the same category as land which had been bought under the powers of 58 Geo. 3, c. 45; and that therefore the commissioners could make a good title. Semble that 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 25, might also enable the commissioners, in a case like the present, to make a good title. Evelesiastical Commissioners and King, In re, 62 L. T. 535; 38 W. R. 473.

- 58 Geo. 3, c. 45-Petition-Costs.]-Where a sum of money, applicable to the purposes of a vicarage, had been paid into court under the Church Building Act, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and a petition was presented by the vicar for payment of the fund to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, who were contributing to the erection of a new vicarage-house, the ecclesiastical commissioners, as representing the church building commissioners, had to pay the cost of the peti-tion, excepting the costs of the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, which had to be paid by the petitioner. Margate (Vicar), Ex parte, 12

On a petition for the transfer of purchase-money paid into court by the ecclesiastical commissioners, the court ordered the costs of all parties to be paid by the commissioners. Clarke v. Johnson, Cosmi Truppo, In re, 22 L. T. 570; 18 W. R. 800.

XXII, CHURCHWARDENS.

See Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73).

1, ELECTION AND APPOINTMENT.

Mandamus to compel Inhabitants to elect. 7-The court will grant a mandamus to the inhabitants of a parish liable to contribute to the church-rate, to meet and assemble together, with the minister, to elect churchwardens. Rew v. Wia, 2 B. & Ad. 197; 1 L. J., M. C. 36,

Custom.]-The return to such mandamus stated an immemorial custom in the parish to have no churchwarden, and that the duties appertaining by law to the office of churchwardens had been, from time out of mind, discharged by the over-seers of the poor :—Held, that, masmuch as overseers had not existed time out of mind, and as there were necessary duties appertaining to churchwardens, and there must have been some persons bound by law to discharge those duties, the custom set out in the return was bad. Ib.

Where, by a custom in a parish, the rector nominates one churchwarden, and the parishioners the other, and the rector nominated as churchwarden a person who was not resident, nor the occupier of any house or land in the parish, and the person so appointed was afterwards sworn into office; and it was desired to question the validity of the appointment, on the ground that the person appointed was not legally qualified:—Held, that an application for a mandamus to the rector to nominate a churchwarden was a proper course for that purpose, and the court made absolute a rule for such a mandamus. Barlow, In re, 30 L. J., Q. B. 271; 5 L. T. 289.

A custom in a parish was that two churchwardens should be chosen annually by a select musicines; out, such that no being requires for the purpose of asite for a residence, they had contracted to sell the same:—Held, that the centracted to sell the same:—Held, that the diffect of a 90 of the latter act was to bring land to the office of churchwarden, or had served such records of the parish it appeared that, from their commencement in 1648 to 1734 (with the exception of an interval after the great fire of London in 1666), one fresh churchwarden was chosen annually from the parishioners at large, who was elected to the office of junior churchwarden for one year, and who was elected to the office of senior churchwarden for the next. From 1734 to 1775 there were no records, but from 1775 to 1824 the same course was pursued, except in four instances; and shortly after the great fire of London, in 1666, two persons acted as junior and senior churchwardens respectively, for the space of five years :- Held, that it was part of the enstom, by which the number of the select vestry was regulated, that a new person should be elected every year to the office of junior church-warden, who should serve the office, and the following year should succeed to the office of senior churchwarden. Gibbs v. Flight, 3 C. B. 581; 16 L. J., M. C. 73: 11 Jur. 19.

A parish consisted of six townships; in five of them the parishioners in each township had been in the habit of selecting two persons, one of whom was appointed churchwarden by the rector, and in the sixth township, the outgoing churchwardens nominated two, of whom the rector appointed one. In 1848, by order in conneil under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, one of the townships was constituted a separate parish :-Held, that the custom was a good custom, and that the separation of one township did not That the separation of new towns and not are affect it in the remaining five. Bremner v. Hull, 35 L. J., C. P. 332; L. R. 1 C. P. 748; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 15 L. T. 352; 14 W. R. 964.

James, Westminster, was created by dividing a district from the parish of St. Martin; and it was enacted, that the inhabitants of St. James's shall be from time to time subject to the laws and statutes now in force, or hereafter to be made for the choice of churchwardens, and such other like parish officers, and other parochial duties within the parish in like manner as the inhabitants of the parish of St. Martin's are or might be subject and liable unto." St. Martin's had been governed by a select vestry, and provision was made for continuing such a vestry in St. James's. Before 1685, the practice in St. Martin's, on the election of the two churchwardens, had been that the vestry chose them by seoring certain prepared lists (the greatest number of scores carrying the election); but, by usage, the junior churchwarden of the preceding year was re-elected of course. It did not appear how or when this practice originated, power of the select vestry to choose the churchwardens was often disputed in St. Martin's after 1685; and for the last two years the elections by them were discontinued, and the officers chosen according to 58 Geo. 3, c. 69. No alteration was made in St. James's :- Held, that the mode of election, practised in 1685, was one of the laws then in force, by which, under I Jac. 2, c. 22, the parish of St. James's was to be governed; and that the abandonment of the custom by St. Martin's did not oblige St. James's to discontinue it also. Rew v. St. Jumes's, Westminster, Churchwardens, 5 A. & E. 391; 2 H. & W. 253.

office, or had paid a fine for not doing so. By the any vestry holden by virtue of any special act, or of any usage or custom. A local act for Paddington enacted that the election of churchwardens should be conducted, from year to year, in such manner as had been usual in the same parish. It was proved that the mode of electing churchwardens had been by a shew of hands, no poll ever having been demanded:-Held, that this was no evidence of a eastom to exclude the granting of a poll when properly demanded. Campbell v. Maund, 5 A. & E. 865; 1 N. & P. 558; 2 H. & W. 457; 6 L. J., M. C. 145.

> Election of Person claiming Exemption-Confirmation of Appointment.] — The election by parishioners of a churchwarden, who claims exemption from, and refuses, the office, caunot be revived by a vestry meeting after the due election of another person, although the latter resigns on condition that the former will accept the office, and neither of them has been admitted by the archdeacon. Reg. v. Freeman, 18 L. T.

> Where Perpetual Curate. ]—A perpetual curate is the minister of a parish within the general custom, by which (in conformity with cauon 89) the churchwardens are chosen by the joint consent of the minister and parishioners, and, if they cannot agree, the minister chooses one and the Q. B. 37; L. R. 8 Q. B. 69; 27 L. T. 707; 21 W. R. 190.

And a perpetual curate has, therefore, a right to take part in the election of churchwardens, in the absence of proof of any other custom. Ib.

On Formation of New Parishes.]—The parish of D. consisted of four townships, D., W., B., and M. The parish church was in D., and churchwardens were appointed at D. in the usual manner, who acted for the whole parish except M., where there was a chapel, and a special custom that the parishioners should elect two churchwardens to act for the hamlet of M. private act was passed to divide the parish into three, D, and W, to be one parish, B, another, and M. a third. The act contained a provision that after the contemplated division had taken effect, two persons should be chosen churchwardens for each of the new parishes, "in the same manner as churchwardens are now chosen and appointed for the parish of D." :- Held, that, the object of the act being to create three entirely new parishes for ecclesiastical purposes, formed upon the model of the mother parish of D., the previous right of the parishioners of M. to elect both churchwardens was taken away. Green v.

Reg., 1 App. Cas. 518; 35 L. T. 495.

A district which, by order in council, under 59 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 16, is assigned to a chapel in a parish, becomes a separate parish for all ecclesiastical purposes, but continues a part of the parish for other parochial purposes, and therefore the inhabitants of the district are entitled to vote in the election of churchwardens for the parish. Reg. v. Stevens, 3 B. & S. 333; 32 L. J., Q. B. 90; 11 W. R. 262.

So the ratepayers of a district parish established under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, have a right to vote at elections of churchwardens for the original or mother parish. Reg. v. Exeter (Archdeacon), 11 W. R. 262.

trying the right of naming a churchwarden in the court Christian. Williams v. Vaughan, 1

Demanding a Poll.]-The right to demand a poll is by law incidental to the election of a parish officer by shew of hands, where there is no special custom to exclude it. Campbell v. Maund, 5 A, & E, 865; 1 N. & P, 558; 2 H. & W. 457; 6 L. J., M. C. 145.

A poll, at an election, need not be demanded until after the decision of the chairman upon a shew of hands. Ib.

Where a poll has been demanded to be held according to a particular mode, and has been held accordingly, without any objection being made, any irregularity in the mode demanded is waived. Ib.

A candidate for the office of churchwarden having been named, a shew of hands was demanded, and refused by the rector, on the ground that the election was to be decided by a majority of votes. The polling books remained open, and then the rector ordered the poll to be closed, contrary to general expectation, and declared the candidate elected. A mandamus issued, commanding the rector and churchwarden to elect a churchwarden. Rex v. Birmingham (Rector), 7 A. & E. 254; 1 Jur. 754.

At an election of churchwardens in open vestry a poll of the parishioners was demanded, under Sturges Bourne's Act, 58 Geo. 3, c. 69 :- Held. that this was a legal demand, and meant a poll of such parishioners as were entitled to vote, and Into to fall the parishioners. Reg. v. 8t. Mary's, Lambeth, Churchwardens, 3 N. & P. 416; 8 A. & E. 356; 1 W. W. & H. 398; 2 Jur. 566.

Every rated inhabitant, whether previously present at the vestry or not, has a right to come in and vote; and the closing of the vestry doors during the poll, so as to exclude voters, is illegal.

Upon the poll being demanded, it was resolved that it should be confined to the persons who were present at the show of hands which had already been made, and not to be extended to the other parishioners who were entitled to vote: - Held, that this, though illegal, could only render the election void in case persons entitled to vote were prevented from voting; and, that not being shewn, the election with locked doors was a valid election. Ib.

Closing of Poll. -On the Friday after Easter a vestry meeting of a parish, of which meeting notice had been posted on the church door on Easter Sunday, was held for the election of churchwardens. The rector nominated one churchwarden, and there were two candidates for the office of parishioners' churchwarden, one being the existing churchwarden, and the other a candidate put forward by a party dissatisfied with the administration of the parish charities. The shew of hands was in favour of the last-named candidate. The poll was closed by the rector at five o'clock on the day of the election. when there appeared a majority of votes for the existing churchwarden. The validity of the election was questioned by a rule, made on the 5th July, for a mandamus to the rector and churchwardens to hold a new election. The court discharged the rule on the ground that the Right of Naming.]-A prohibition lies for unreasonably exercised; that it had not been shewn that had the poll been kept open the result of the election would have been different; and that there had been too great delay in questioning the election. Reg. v. Handborough Churchwardens, 37 L. T. 400.

The chairman of a vestry meeting, held for the purpose of taking a poll for the election of a churchwarden, has no power to close the poll on account of disturbance. Reg. v. Grahum, 9 W. R. 738.

The validity of a resolution of a vestry to close the poll for the election of churchwardens at a particular hour, is a fit question to be tried upon a mandamus. Rev v. Winchester (Bishop), 7 East, 573.

Adjournment of Meeting. - Where a meeting for the election of churchwardens takes place in the parish church, in pursuance of a notice that such meeting would be held at the parish church, and that in ease a poll should be demanded, the meeting would be immediately adjourned to the town-hall, the chairman may, upon a poll being demanded, adjourn the meeting to the town-hall. although a majority of the voters present object to such adjournment. Rev v. Chester (Arch-deucon), 3 N. & M. 413.

Validity of Election. ]-On the 6th of April, notice was posted on the church door for a vestry meeting to appoint churchwardens on the 10th of April, which was Easter Tuesday. On that day A. and B. were elected churchwardens. Doubts having arisen as to the sufficiency of the notice, it not having been published in church on the Sunday, another notice was duly given and read during service on the following Sunday that a vestry meeting would be held to elect churchwardens on the ensuing Thursday, on which day A, and B, were again elected :- Held. that A. and B. were duly elected churchwardens, as one or the other of the two elections was valid. St. Faith Churchwardens, In re, 25 L. J., Q. B. 168; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 212; 4 W. R. 267, Presumption that Election was Lawful . ]-Proof that a party holds the office of church-warden is prima facie evidence of his having been lawfully appointed, even where the question turns on his title to the possession of land in his capacity of churchwarden. Ganvill v. Utting. 9 Jur. 1081.

Improper Rejection of Votes. ]-Where, upon an election of a churchwarden, the chairman of the vestry meeting had rejected votes which were alleged to be admissible, but it did not appear that the rejection had caused any difference in the result, the court refused to grant a mandamus ordering a fresh election, though the persons whose votes had been rejected were parties to the application. Mawby or Juyee, Exparte, 3 El. & Bl. 718; 23 L. J., M. C. 153; 18 Jur. 906; 2 W. R. 473,

Refusal to take Shew of Hands.]—Where the chairman refused to take a shew of hands, but proceeded to write down the names of the ratepayers present and the number of votes they were entitled to, and then declared one of two candidates elected, the proceedings were pro-tested against and a poll was demanded, but was closing of the poll was a matter in the discretion refused by the chairman. The court refused to of the rector, which had not been shown to be grant a mandamns commanding a new election, it not appearing that anyone had been by the irregularity of the proceedings prevented from voting, or that any practical injustice had resulted from it. Reg. v. Goole, 4 L. T. 322.

Refusal to put Amendment.]—At a meeting of the vestry to elect churchwardens, D. was proposed to be re-elected, when parisioners moved an amendment that before electing a churchwarden a certain correspondence between the charity commissioners and the churchwardens as to some parish charity fund should be produced. The view refused to put the amendment, and declared D. duly elected:—Held, on a rule for a mandamus, that the view was wrong in refusing to put the amendment, and that he was wrong in not putting to the needing whether D. should be elected. Reg. v. Hagbaurne (Vinney), 51.4, P. 276.

2. Legal Position.

Qualification.]—In order that a person may be qualified to be elected a churchwarden of a district church under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 28 s. 16, he must reside within the parish.

— Declaration.]—A churchwarden, who has made the declaration in a preceding year and continues in office without renewing the declaration, though compellable to do so, may do declaration, though compellable to do so, may do legal acts by virtue of his office, which will be binding on himself and parishioners. Edney v. Smallbanes, 21 L. T. 506.

Ceasing to reside in Parish.]—Semble, that a churchwarden, who, during the continuance of his office, ceases to reside in the parish, does not ipso facto cease to be churchwarden, although it is a good ground for appointing another in his place. Ganvill v. Uting, 9 Jun. 1081.

Usurping Office of.]—A quo warranto does not lie for usurping the office of churchwarden. Barlow, In re. 30 L. J., Q. B. 271; 5 L. T. 289, S. P., Rev v. Shephard, 4 Term Rep. 381; 2 R. R. 416.

Authority.] - A ledge or a super-altar was placed on the communion table in a church by the incumbent without obtaining the formal or informal consent of the ordinary. Nearly two years afterwards, the church wardens were directed by a resolution of the vestry to remove it. One of the churchwardens therenpon had the lock of the church door picked, and violently removed the super-altar. The incumbent refused to give up the custody of the keys of the church, but offered access to the churchwarden at reasonable times. The incumbent having instituted criminal proceedings against the churchwarden :- Held, that the vestry had no power to authorise the churchwardens to do these acts; that the churchwardens are the officers of the ordinary and the parish, and their authority, even in matters most within their special eognisauce, must be exercised under the control of the ordinary, and without reference to extreme and exceptional cases.

Ritchings v. Cardingley, L. R. 3 Ecc. 113; 19 L. T. 26.

Held, also, that even had the proceedings been otherwise legal, one churchwarden could not have so acted without the concurrence of the other, and the court admonished the defendant it not appearing that anyone had been by the to abstain from such conduct in future, and conirregularity of the proceedings prevented from demned him in certain costs. Ib.

Parties to Suits.]—Where there is more than one churchwarden, one churchwarden cannot maintain a suit in his own name alone without that of his co-churchwarden. Fry v. Treasure, 2 Moore P. C. (x.s.) 539: 11 Jur. (x.s.) 205; 11 L. T. 753; 13 W. R. 476; 5 N. R. 383.

Oue churchwarden has no implied authority to give a proxy for the other, or to join him in a suit. Nor can the court compel or dispense with the joinder of the nuwilling churchwarden. Ib.

A churchwarden, chosen after the commencement of a suit, is cutified whits in office to join himself as co-plaintiff in a supplemental bill with the former churchwarden, for the purpose of putting in issue facts that have arisen since the illing of the original bill, he having an interest in the proceedings, and in the decree to be made at the hearing. Marriattv. Turplen, 9 Sim. 279; 7 L. J., Ch. 245; z Jur., 464.

No power is given to the court by the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, to substitute succeeding churchwardens for a churchwarden who has instituted a suit under s. 8 of the act for acts committed during the time that he was churchwarden, but has ceased to be so before the termination of the suit, and in such a case the succeeding churchwardens have no interest time matter which cattlets them to intervene in the suit. **Marrie v. Property of Bell-ropes.]—The property of the bell-ropes of a parish church is in the churchwardens of the parish. Jackson v. Adams, 2 Scott, 599; 2 Bing. (N.c.) 402; 1 Hodges, 339; 5 L. J., C. P. 79. See Harrison v. Round, 2 H. & W. 18; 6 N. & M. 422; 4 A. & E. 799.

Custody of Keys of Church. ]-Churchwardens have a right of access to the church at proper seasons, but they are not entitled to the custody of the keys of the church. Ritchings v. Cordingley, L. R. 3 Ecc. 113; 19 L. T. 26.

Property in Military Colours. ]-Semble, the churchwardens of a parish church to which military colours, no longer required for use in her Majesty's service, have been presented, have vested in them the legal property in the colonrs for the purpose of safe custody in all cases where the colours are not affixed to the freehold. Vincent v. Eyton, [1897] P. 1.

3. SWEARING IN.

Duties commenced by.]—A churchwarden remains in office, and is liable for the nonperformance of the duties, until his successor has made and subscribed the declaration required under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 9. Bray v. Somer, under 5 & 5 Wil. 4, C. 62, S. 9. Bray V. Somer, 2 B, & S, 374; 31 L. J., M. C. 135; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 716; 6 L. T. 49; 10 W. R. 854. S. P., Breumer v. Hull, 1 H. & R. 800; 35 L. J., C. P. 332; L. B. 1 C. P. 748; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 15 L. T. 352; 14 W. R. 964.

Duty of Ordinary.]—The court will grant a mandamus by rule absolute in the first instance, to compel the official to administer the declaration to a party claiming to have been elected as chapelwarden of a chapel (under a local act, conferring upon the officer elected the power of a churchwarden for the purposes of the chapel), though other parties claim to have been elected. Duffield, Ew parte, 6 N. & M. 865; 3 A. & E.

Where two sets of persons have each a colourable title to the office of churchwarden, both ought to be sworn in. The ordinary is bound to swear in churchwardens elect immediately upon their applying to be sworn in, notwithstanding a usage not to swear in until the first visitation after Easter. Rex v. # 4. DUTIES, RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES.

Duties-To call Meeting. ]-Where the inhabitants of part of a parish, being an ecclesiastical district, and having churchwardens under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, are desirous of adopting the Lighting and Watching Act, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, the proper officers to call the meeting for that purpose are the churchwardens of the whole parish, and not the churchwardens of the district, because the latter are not persons "usually calling any meeting on parochial business" within s. 77. Reg. v. Kingswinford Overseers, 2 El. & Bl. 689; 23 L. J., M. C. 172; 18 Jur. 1073; 2 W. R. 453.

- To supply Estimates of Rates required. -Churchwardens are bound to supply estimates to the parishioners in vestry of the probable amount required for church rates. Reg. v. St. Margaret's, Leicester, 2 P. & D. 510; 10 A. & E.

- Provision for Divine Service during Vacancy. ]-It is no part of the office of a churchwarden, as such, to perform or provide for the service of a church during a vacancy in the incumbency. Att. Gen. v. St. Cross Hospital, 8 De G. M. & G. 88; 25 L. J., Ch. 202; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 336; 4 W. R. 310.

The course to be pursued is for the churchwarden to act under a sequestration to provide for the services, and in so doing he acts as officer of the bishop and not as churchwarden.

- Interference with Divine Service. - After a receiver of charity property had been appointed.
W. H., the alleged churchwarden of St. F., insisting that the chapel within the hospital was the parish church of St. F., and in order, as he alleged, to try the right, forcibly prevented the chaplain performing divine service therein, as he had usually been accustomed. The court re-strained W. H. from interrupting or interfering with the performance of divine worship in the chapel. S. C., 18 Beav. 601; 24 L. J., Ch. 148.

· Preserving Order in Church. ]-A parish clerk having been dismissed from his office by though irregularly, and another the rector, appointed, the former entered the church before divine service had commenced, and took posses-sion of the clerk's seat :-Held, that the churchwardens were justified in removing him from the clerk's desk, and also out of the church, if they had reasonable grounds for believing that he would offer interruption during the celebration of divine service. Burton v. Henson, 10 M. & W. 105; 11 L. J., Ex. 848.

Quære, whether a churchwarden can justify turning out of a church a party who commits a trespass there on a week-day, when divine service is not going on, or whether he ought not to And on an affidavit of due election, demand justify under the rector, and aver a request to the party to leave the church. Worth v. Terrington, 13 M. & W. 781; 14 L. J., Ex. 133.

— Distribution of Seats.]—Churchwardens of a church with free seats have authority to direct, for the maintenance of order and decorane, in which of those seats certain classes of the congregation may and others may not sit. A person may be convicted by justices, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 32, s. 2, of violent behaviour in a church, although such behaviour was in assertion of a bond idee claim of right. Asher v. Culcryff, 56 L. T. 49, L. J., M. C. 67; 18 Q. B. D. 607; 56 L. T. 49, 55 W. R. 61; 51 J. F. 598.

— Preventing Inhabitant from attending Service,]—There is no right on the part of a churchwarden forcibly to prevent an inhabitant of a parish or district from entering the church for the purpose of attending service, even though the churchwarden may be of opinion that he cannot be conveniently accommodated. The temporal courts have jurisdiction over an action against a churchwarden for forcibly preventing an inhabitant from entering the church for the purpose of attending divine service. Taylor v. Timson, 57 L. J., Q. B. 216; 20 Q. B. D. 671; 52 J. P. 135.

Rights-Action against Vestry Clerk for misapplying Rate. ]—The vestry elerk of a parish upon his appointment to the office was told that it would be part of his duty to collect the churchrate and poor-rate, and to apply them as his predecessor had done. In pursuance of these instructions, and in accordance with a practice which had prevailed in the parish for fifty or sixty years. the vestry clerk applied a portion of the money arising from a church-rate made in the plaintiff year of office as churchwarden to the payment of parochial charges not legally payable out of the church-rate :- Held, that, juasmuch as one of the churchwardens was aware of the manner in which the money was about to be disposed of, he having previously filled the office of overseer, and also of auditor of the parish accounts, and did not object, the two were precluded from sning the vestry clerk for this misapplication of the rate. Cooper v. Law, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 502; 28 L. J., C. P. 282; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1268.

— Evidence of Parish Book.]—Held, also, that (one of the plaintiffs being a vestryman) the parish books were admissible to shew the asage of the parish as to the appropriation of the rates. Th.

— Action by Order of Parish.]—Where clurchwardens, by order of the parish, commence a suit, the consent of the parish shall bind it; and the vestry book shall be allowed as evidence of the consent. Radnor Parish Cuse, 4 Vin. Abr., 259, pl. 10.

Action against former Churchwarden. — Churchwardens de facto may maintain an action against a former churchwarden for money received by him for the use of the parish, though the validity of their election to the office is doubtful, and though they are not the immediate successors of the defendant. Turner v. Baynes, 2 H. Bl. 559; 3 R. R. 506.

A parish may have two divisions, with churchwardens, keeping separate accounts, for each division : therefore, where, in a parish consisting of a township and several hamlets, two churchwardens were appointed by the township, and two others by the rest of the parish, who made separate rates for their own divisions respectively :- Held, that the acting churchwardens appointed for the township might maintain an action against their predecessors in office, to recover a balance remaining in their hands, without joining the other churchwardens, either as plaintiffs or defendants, and without proving that their appointment had been strictly legal. Astle v. Thomas, 3 D. & R. 492; 2 B. & C. 271; 1 C. & P. 103; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 8; 26 R. R. 348. And see Rea v. Gordon, 1 B. & Ald. 524; 19 R. R. 376.

Where in an ancient chapelry, divided into three districts by order in council nuder 18 & 14 Vict. c. 41, one district represents the ancient parish, the churchwardens appointed for the district may maintain an action of detinue against the late churchwardens of the ancient chapelry, to recover the church books; and the late churchwardens have no lien upon them for any expenses they may have interred by virtue of their late office. Moss v. Thereneley, 4 W. R. 514, — Reimbursement.]—Bill by the executrix of a late churchwarden against unnety parishtoners, to be reimbursed what her testator had advanced for parish:—Held, that defendants should reimburse plaintiff with costs, and that the money should be raised by a parish rate. Nicolson v. Masters, 4 Vin. 529, pl. 9.

Bill by a former churchwarden (trustee for an estate of the poor of the parish and forty-five inhabitants) against the parish officers to be reimbursed money laid ont on account of the trust under an order of vestry, his accounts being passed and ordered to be paid on demand; Lowd Chancellor expressed a strong inclination against the bill, and, it not being signed by comisel, it was taken off the file. Plaintiff to pay costs. French v. Deur. 5 Ves. 547.

— Contribution.]—Persons being church-wardens, overseers, and trustees of the poor, directed, in consequence of a resolution of the vestry, a presention to be instituted against certain persons accused of having concerned in the insapplication of parochial moneys: one of them, having been compelled to pay the bill of costs of the attorney employed in the presention is entitled to contribution from the others. Wrightstow v. Masterman, 5 L. J. (0.8.) Ch. 14, — Opposing Charity Scheme — Newlyappointed Churchwarden. — On an application for the confirmation of a report approxing a scheme for the administration of a charity estate, of which the churchwardens and overseers of the parish were the trustees (one of the purposes of which scheme was to provide for the repair of the church); it was held that a churchwarden who had been newly appointed, and had not been served with the proceedings, was at liberty to present a cross-petition for the purpose of opposing the confirmation of the report, upon grounds not appearing upon the report nor brought before the master. Lappington Parish, In re, 8 Hare, 198.

— Restraining Trespass.]—The court has purisdiction to restrain at the suit of the churchwardens any trespass committed on the churchyard, though in assertion of an allegad right of way, because, though the churchwardens might not be able to maintain an action at law for such trespass, they might, after the injury was done, have redress in the Ecclesiastical Court. Murriett v. Terplen, 9 Sim. 279; 7 L. J., Ch. 24. J.

— Proprietary Chapel in Parish.]—A churchwarden, as such has no rights over a proprietary-chapel in the parish devoted to the performance of divine service according to the rites of the established church. Bosanquet v. Heath, 3 L. T. 290; 9 W. R. 35.

Liabilities—Action against Churchwarden.]—Where an ecclesiastical offence is alleged against a parishioner who is also churchwarden, it is not necessary to make his co-churchwarden a codefordant, although, from the tenor of the charge, it appears that the alleged offence was committed in his official capacity. Addian v. Culthours, 36 L. J., Ecc. 14; 15 L. T. Csi.

An information was filed against A, and B, by name, they being churchwarlens of a certain parish; the object of the information was for inquiries into the application of the rents and profits of the property of the parish, and for a scheme for the future unangement of the estate. The court made the order, notwithstanding that the churchwarlens were not parties in their official character. Lett.-eten.v. Notbeld, 16 Beav. 554; 22 L. J., 05, 174; 17 Jur. 173.

An action does not liengainst a churchwarden, presiding (under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120) at the election of vestrymen and auditors, for refusing the vote of a party entitled to vote for vestrymen and auditors, or for refusing to allow as a candidate a party cutified to be candidate, unless malice is alleged and proved. There v. Child, 7 El. & Bl. 377; 26 L. J., Q. B. 151; 3 Jur. (x.8, 774; 5 W.R. 287—Ex. Ch.

— Reclesiastical Offence.]—One of the churchwardens of a parish, accompanied by another parishioner, acting upon a resolution of the vestry, but against the express prohibition of the rector, and without any lawful authority from the bishop, broke open the principal door of the church and proceeded, with the assistance of workmen, to alter the position of the pulpit and to pull down and re-arrange certain of the seats of the church:—Held, that all who took part in these proceedings were guilty of an ecclesiastical offence. Devriney v. Gond, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 637.

The offenders were ordered to restore that which had been altered, and to pny the costs of suit, and the churchwarden was further ordered to give up to the rector a new key he had fitted to the door of the church. Ib.

To pay Persons employed by them.]—A churchwarden was held individually liable to a person whom he had employed to draw plans of a church for the inspection of the parliamentary commissioners for building new churches. Brook v. Guest. 3 Bing. 481, note c.

- A churchwarden has no authority to pledge the credit of his co-churchwardens for repairs to the church. If he orders such repairs without the knowledge of the other churchwardens, he is liable individually. Northwedte v. Bennett, 2 C. & M. 316; 4 Tr., 236; 3 L. J., M. C. 31.

By indenture between the plaintiff of the first part, two sureties of the second part, and the defendants of the third part, the plaintiff undertook to do certain repairs to a parish church, and in consideration of the covenants and agreements on his part, the defendants, churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish, for themselves and for their successors, churchwardens and overseers of the parish, and their assigns, did thereby covenant and promise with and to the plaintiff, that they the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, their successors or assigns, should and would well and truly pay, or cause to be paid unto the plaintiff, the sum agreed upon, by instalments. The indenture contained upon, by instalments. a proviso, that "nothing in those presents contained should extend or be deemed, adjudged, construed, or taken to extend to any personal covenant of or obligation upon the several persons, parties thereto of the third part, or in anywise personally affect them, any or either of them, their or any or either of their executors, administrators, goods, effects or estates, in their private capacity: but should be, and was-intended to be, binding and obligatory upon churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish, and their successors for the time being, as such churchwardens and overseers of the poor, but not further or otherwise":-Held, that the original covenant was a personal covenant by the defendants to pay the money; and that the proviso was repugnant thereto and inconsistent therewith, and therefore void. Furnicall v. Combes, 5 Man. & G. 736: 6 Scott (N.R.) 522: 12 L. J., C. P. 265,

To Contribute — Fraud of Officers of Union.]—Climerhwardens of a parish in a union are Hable, under the head of extraordinary charges, to contribute to the deficiency occasioned by the frauds of the collector of certain other parishes within the union, and of the deputy clerk to the guardians of the union. Waddington v. City of London Guardians, 6. W. R. 599.

For Rates.]—Under a local act for purposes of lighting and paving, which empowers to make rates and assessments in respect of any cathedral, church, chapel, &c., and under which the rates and assessments were to be paid by the churchwardens, chapelwardens, trustees, or owners or propietors:—Held, that the churchwardens were personally liable to the commissioners for the rates, and the want of parechial funds did not exempt them from that liability. Hopkinson v. Puncher, 3 Ex. 95; 18 L. J., Ex. 6.

— For Archdeacon's Visitation Fees.]—lly immeunorial custom, churchwardens may be bound to pay visitation fees to the registrans of the archdeacons. Shepherd v. Payne, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 132; 33 L. J.. C. P. 158; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 40; 12 W. R. 581—Ex. Ch.

Churchwardens who are without funds or the means of obtaining funds for the expenses ineidental to their office are not personally liable to pay visitation fees to the registrars of archdeaconty courts, as the services in respect of which the fees are payable are rendered to the by the parishioners and the rector, after the parish and not to the churchwandens. Feley v. union an appointment by the rector alone is Perture. 39 D. J., Q. B. 195; L. R. 5 Q. B. 573; M. & Sc. 230; 5 Car. & P. 441; 2 L. J., C. P. 141.

— To account.]—The spiritual court may compel the churchwardens to deliver in their account, but cannot decide on the propriety of the charges. Leman v. Goulty, 3 Term Rep. 3; I R. R. 624.

The Ecclesiastical Court has power to compel churchwardens to deliver in their accounts, but has no jurisdiction to examine them. Hooper v. Leach, 3 Dougl. 435.

The spiritual court shall not proceed against a chnrehwarden, to account on oath, after his accounts are allowed by the vestry. Nuthins v. Robinson, Bunb. 247; Snowden v. Herring, id.

If a governor of a colony has the anthority of the ordinary, he has no power to commit a churchwarden who refuses to account : he ought to proceed upon a citation, and must excommunicate. Basham v. Lumley, 3 Car. & P. 489.

- Refusing to sign Cheques. ]-Semble, for unreasonably refusing to sign a joint cheque, on account of moneys on which it is properly drawn, for the payment of proper church expenses, a churchwarden is liable to be articled in a criminal suit in the Ecclesiastical Court. Howell v. Holdroyd, [1897] P. 198.

Right of Parishioners to inspect Books. —There is no general right in parishioners to inspect the churchwardens' books. Reg. v. Durentry Churchwardens, 5 Jnr. (N.S.) 940 : 7 W. R. 445.

Alleged Nuisance. -A bill was filed by a single parishioner against some of the churchwardens of the parish, alleging an intention on the part of the defendants to execute works in the church which would be injurious to himself, and praying an injunction. The plaintiff did not allege any right of property in a particular pew, but did allege that he was a parishioner, and that he was in the habit of attending divine service in the parish church. follow me in funerals and marriages" :- Held, Quere, whether this is a private unisance, and whether such a bill can be sustained. Woodman v. Robinson, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 204.

- For acting as Vestryman after Bankruptoy. —A churchwarden of a parish named in schedule B of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, is a member of the vestry of that parish within the meaning of s. 54, and is liable to a penalty if, after becoming bankrupt, he acts as a member of such vestry. Leftly v. Monning-ton, 48 L. J., Ex. 543; 4 Ex. D. 307; 40 L. T. 850 ; 27 W. R. 787.

XXIII, PARISH CLERKS.

Nature of Office. ]-The office of parish clerk is a temporal and not a spiritual office. Lawrence v. Edwards (No. 1), 60 L. J., Ch. 336; [1891] 1 Ch. 144; 64 L. T. 77; 39 W. R. 411.

Appointment of-By whom, |-A mandamus lies to a rector to appoint a parish clerk. Rew v. St. Ann's, Soho, 3 Burr. 1877.

Two parishes having been united, in which, before the union, the parish clerk was appointed granted.

Under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 29, the appointment of elerk to a district chapel is in the incumbent of the chapel. The possession of the vestry-room is in him, and he may turn out of it a clerk who has been prohibited from entering it, though he has not been legally dismissed from his office. Jackson v. Courtenay, 8 El. & Bl. 8; 27 L. J.; Q. B. 37; 3 Jur. (N.s.) 889; 5 W. R. 752. By the 91st of the canons of 1603, the parish clerk is to be appointed by the parson or vicar, or where there is no parson or vicar, by the minister of the place for the time being. Accordingly, during the suspension of a vicar, the minister licensed and authorised by the bishop to perform the office of stipendiary curate in the parish has the right, in the event of the office of parish clerk falling vacant, to appoint a parish clerk to hold office during the suspension. Pindar v. Barr, 4 El. & Bl. 105; 2 C. L. R. 1613; 24 L. J., Q. B. 30; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 205; 2 W. R.

- During Sequestration of Benefice. ]-Sequestration, unless accompanied by suspension or inhibition, does not deprive a parson of his right to appoint the parish clerk. Leuerence v. Edwards (No. 1), 60 L. J., Ch. 336; [1891] 1 Ch. 144; 64 L. T. 77; 39 W. R. 411.

A vacancy having occurred in the office of parish clerk during a sequestration of the profits of the benefice, the court, at the instance of the incumbent, granted an injunction restraining a person appointed by the curate-in-charge from acting as and receiving the fees and emoluments of parish clerk. Lawrence v. Edwards (No. 2), 60 L. J., Ch. 336; [1891] 2 Ch. 72; 64 L. T. 343.

- Validity.] - A panper was appointed parish clerk by a rector of a parish, in the following manner:—The rector sent for the panper on a Sunday, and requested him to perform duty on that day; and, on coming out of the desk, the rector said to the pauper, "I shall appoint you my regular clerk and sexton, and to that this was a proper appointment of the panper as parish clerk. Rev v. Bobbing, 1 N. & P. 166; 5 A. & E. 682; 6 L. J., M. C. 13.

The appointment of a parish clerk need not be by deed. Roberts v. Drewitt, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 48; 1 H. & P. 132.

Restoration of ]—A mandamus will lie to restore a parish clerk. Rev v. Wurren, Cown. 370. S. P., Anon., 2 Chit. 254.

But not to restore one to the office of deputy parish elerk. Anon., Lofft, 434.

If a parish clerk has been deprived of his office, the mandamus to restore him must be directed to the incumbent and not to the churchwardens. Cirketh, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 327.

Where a vicar, after summons to the parish clerk to attend and answer a charge of intoxication, removes him upon insufficient evidence of the intoxication, the court will issue a mandamus requiring the vicar to restore the clerk. Rew v. Neule, 4 N. & M. 868. And see Bowles v. Neale, 7 Car. & P. 262.

A prohibition to the spiritual court to stay proceedings for restoring a parish clerk was granted. Turrant v. Haxby, 1 Burr. 367. of parish clerk. Return, that A, had on several the clerk had a freehold interest in his share, in occasions misconducted himself by designedly respect of which he was cutilled to be registered. irreverent and ridiculous behaviour in the performance of his duty, by appearing in the church drunk, so as to be incapable of performing it. and by indecently disturbing the congregation during the administration of the sacrament. The return stated that the alleged acts were done in the view and presence of the vicar, and after repeated reproof; wherenpon he removed him from his office of clerk. Plea, that A. had not been summoned to answer for his conduct before his removal :- Held, that the return was bad for not shewing such summons. Reg. v. Smith, 5 Q. B. 614; D. & M. 564; 13 L. J., Q. B. 166; 8 Jur. 599. See Newman, Ex parte, 9 Jur. 959.

Dispute as to Title—Jurisdiction of County Court.]—The office of parish clerk is a hereditament within the meaning of that word as used in 9 & 10 Viet, c. 95, s, 58, and a county court has not jurisdiction to try a plaint in which title to that office comes in question. Stephenson v. Raine, 2 El. & Bl. 744; 2 C. L. R. 234; 23 L. J., Q. B. 62; 18 Jur. 176; 2 W. R. 77.

Office cannot be assigned.]—The office of parish clerk cannot be assigned. Nichols v. Davis, 38 L. J., C. P. 127; L. R. 4 C. P. 80; 17 W R 291

A., who, in 1818, had been appointed for life to the office of parish clerk of the eathedral and parish church of M., with power to nominate a deputy, executed a deed in 1833 by which he purported to assign such office to B., and after that time he ceased to act as such parish clerk. In 1850 an act was passed for the division into districts of the parish of M., by which it was provided that, during the continuance in office of the chaplains or minor canons and clerks then holding office in the cathedral and parish church of M., the fees for marriages, &c., at such church were to be paid to the district rector, who was to pay them to the chaplains or minor canons, to be by them paid to the persons entitled thereto: -Held, that the deed executed by A. in 1833 could not by law operate as an assignment of his office, and therefore he still continued to be the parish clerk of the church. Ib.

Right to sue for Fees. - Held, also, that A. had a right to sue the district rector for the marriage fees due to him as parish clerk, notwithstanding s. 6 of the statute, and notwithstanding that the chaplains and minor canons, to whom the rector was by that section to pay such fees, had eeased to exist, inasmuch as such clause was only to provide a machinery for the distribution of the fees, and did not affect the rights of A. Ib.

Right to vote.]-A parish clerk, receiving more than 40s. a year from parcchial burial fees, is not entitled to vote for a county, either as holding a freehold office, or as having an interest in freehold land by virtue of his receipt of such Hereact and by virtue of an accept to soon fees, Bushell v. Eusten, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 106; K. & G. 484; 31 L. J., C. P. 44; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 645; 5 L. T. 491; 10 W. R. 158.

A parish clerk, by virtue of his appointment, was entitled to a twelfth share of twenty-six acres of freehold land in the parish (of sufficient value to confer a vote for the county) so long as Mandamus to a vicar to restore A to the office, office had always enjoyed the same :- Held, that Roberts v. Drewitt, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 48; 1 H. & P.

> Acquirement of Settlement in Township. ]-A curate of a district church in a township established under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, dismissed the clerk of the district church and appointed A. in his stead. A. continued to act as such clerk for eight years, with the full knowledge of the vicar, who, during that time, held the cure of the parish in which the district lay; at the time of the appointment the vicar denied the power of the curate to appoint, but he took no further or subsequent objection :-Held, that the office was a public armual office, within 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 11, s. 6, and that A. acquired a settlement in the township. Reg. v. Ossett, 16 Q. B. 975.

XXIV. ORGANIST.

Organist — Election of ]—A mandamus will not lie to compel the vicar, churchwardens and parishioners of a parish to meet for the purpose of electing an organist to the parish church : although within the time of living memory there has always been an organist, who has been paid a stipend out of the church rates. Le Creek, Exparte, 2 D. & L. 571; 9 Jur. 255.

Cannot play contrary to Incumbent's Orders.]—The organist of a parish church, although appointed and paid by the vestry, is guilty of an ecclesiastical offence if he plays on the organ immediately before, or during, or immediately after divine service, contrary to the directions of the incumbent. Wyndham v. Colv. 1 P. D. 130.

Lien for Price of Organ. |-A. agreed to build an organ for B. and fix it in the parish church for a sum to be paid by yearly instalments. The agreement provided that, on default of payment of the instalments, the whole sum should become payable, and A. should have, until payment, a lien on the organ for the amount unpaid, and might dispose of or remove the organ as he should think proper. The instalments being unpaid, A. demanded the organ of the vicar and the churchwardens. The vicar kept the church door locked, and refused to allow the organ to be removed, claiming a lien upon it. churchwardens did nothing:-Held, that the vicar was liable in trover, and not the churchwardens. Walker v. Clyde, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 381.

XXV. SEXTON.

Appointment. ]—The appointment to the office of sexton prima facie is not vested in the inhabitants of a parish at large. Conspield v. Blenkinsop, 4 Ex. 284; 18 L. J., Ex. 361.

Where the duties of that office consisted in the care of the sacred vestments and vessels, in the care of the church by keeping it clean, in ringing the bells, and in opening and closing the doors for divine service, the presumption is that the churchwardens have the right of appointment, and, where the duties are confined to the churchhe continued clerk, and his predecessors in the yard in digging graves, &c., the presumption is that the appointment is in the incumbent; and parish. Lousley v. Hayacard, 1 Y. & J. 583; 30 where the office embraces both the above- R. R. 533. S. P., Davis v. Witts, Forrest, 14; 5 mentioned duttes, the presumption is that his R. R. 798. appointment is vested in the churchwardens and incumbent jointly. Ib.

Right to Fees.]—See cases post, XXXI., BURIAL, 6, col. 1452.

XXVI. PEWS.

Regulation of ]—Churchwardens have a dis-cretionary power to appropriate the pews in the church amongst the parishioners, and may remove persons intruding on seats already appro-Remolds v. Monkton, 2 M. & Rob.

The churchwardens alone have the regulation of the pews in a parish church, even if it also is a cathedral, subject to the control of the ordinary. St. Columb, Londonderry, In re, S L. T. 861.

Right to. - Every parishioner has a right to be scatted, but not to a pew. Ib.

Rights to pews annexed to messuages by prescription cannot be severed from the occupancy of the messnages. Ib.

In a cathedral, not being a parish church, semble, there can be no allocation of seats unless by the bishop. Ih.

Persons not parishioners have no right to a pew or a sitting. Ib.

An ecclesiastical court cannot entertain a suit as to the allotment of seats in a place for divine worship, muless such place is a legally-conscerated building, Battiscombe v. Ecc. 9 Jur. (N.S.) 210 ;

- In Chancel.]-A pew in a chancel may legally belong to a party in respect of the owner-ship of a house. Purker v. Leach, 4 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 180; 36 L. J., P. C. 26; L. R. 1 P. C. 312; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 911; 15 L. T. 870; 15 W. B. 204

A mere temporary intermission of the user of the right to sit in a part of the chancel, anaecompanied by any intention to renonnce the right, does not amount to an abandonment of the right. The lay rector's right in respect of chancel seats discussed. Stileman-Gibbard v. Wilkinson, 66 L. J., Q. B. 215; [1897] 1 Q. B. 749; 76 L. T. 90 ; 61 J. P. 214.

By Faculty or Prescription. ]--A right to a pew in a church can only exist by faculty or by prescription. Where, however, the prescription is interrupted, the jury is not bound to presume a faculty from long undisturbed possession. Morgan v. Curtis, 3 M. & Ry. 389. A faculty to a man and his heirs is not good.

Stocks v. Booth, 1 Term Rep. 432; 1 R. R. 244. Possession for thirty-six years of a pew, claimed by the plaintiff as appurtenant to a messuage, and acquiesced in by the defendant, is good presumptive evidence of a faculty. Rogers v.

Brooks, 1 Term Rep. 431, n. See 1 R. R. 245, n. Uninterrupted possession of a pew in the chancel of a church for thirty years, is pre- 637. Affirmed sub non. Phillips v. Halbids, sumptive evidence of a prescriptive right to the 61 L J., Q. B. 210; [1891] A. C. 228; 64 L. T. pew in an action against a wrongdoer; but that 743; 55 J. P. 741—H. L. (B.) presumption may be rebutted by proof that the pew had no existence thirty years ago. Griffith v. Matthews, 5 Term Rep. 296; 2 R. R. 598.

A pew in the body of a church may be prescribed for as appurtenant to a house out of the possession must be proved against the ordinary.

A non-parishioner, whether extra-parochial or residing in another parish, can have no right to a pew in the body of a parish church, except by prescription. Byerley v. Windus, 7 D. & R. 564; 5 B. & C. 1; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 102; 29 R. R. 167.

Prohibition lies to restrain the spiritual court from proceeding in a suit brought by an extraparochial person for a pew in the body of a parish church; also, where a pew is claimed by any other title than prescription; or if it is claimed by that title, and the prescription is denied by the defendant. Ib.

Semble, that s. 2 of the Prescription Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71) does not apply to a claim by prescription to a pew in the nave of a parish church. Crisp v. Martin, 2 P. D. 15.

Long User-Exclusive Possession.]-In 1782 a subscription was raised by the inhabitants of a parish for the purpose of providing more church accommodation, and leave was obtained to use a room in a school for service. The school was pulled down and a new chapel was erected on the site, and duly consecrated in 1848. Those persons who had been holders of pews in the old room had pews allotted to them in the new chapel in substitution therefor. These pews, and others which were substituted for them upon the repewing and repairing of the chapel under a faculty granted in 1867, were exclusively used by the persons to whom they were allotted and their successors in title down to the commencement of the action, and were dealt with by them by way of assignment and devise. There was no evidence of the pews having ever been repaired by the plaintiff or his predecessors in title :- Held, that on the consceration of the chapel the jurisdiction to dispose of the seats accured to the ordinary; and that the plaintiff, not having established anything beyond exclusive possession of the pews, failed to shew any title which could prevail against the general jurisdiction of the ordinary. Provid v. Price, S. L. J., Q. B. 61; 9 R. 40; 69 L. T. 664; 42 W R. 102-C, A.

___ Right appurtenant to House __ Long User and Acts of Ownership.]__A pew may be annexed to a dwelling-house in a parish by a faculty, and a faculty may be presumed upon evidence of exclusive possession and repair. for a long period. Where the successive owners, of a house have had a long-continued enjoyment of a pew in a parish church, and have done a number of acts with regard to it incousistent with mere possession by permission of the churchwardens, the grant of a faculty at some time should be presumed, although no evidence is given of such grant, and although there may be evidence that the pew was originally acquired under circumstances that would not confer a legal right. Halliday v. Philipps, 58 L. J., Q. B. 404; 23 Q. B. D. 48; 37 W. R. 776; 53 J. P.

In order to support a claim by prescription, in respect of ownership and occupancy of an ancient house, to a freehold interest in the site of an ancient pew, something beyond mere undisturbed proprietary right, and, if he can do so, then some rightful origin of the undisturbed enjoyment ought to be presumed against the ordinary and his officers. In other words, a lost faculty ought to be presumed whereby the occupiers of the particular messuage have had the pew or pews granted to them upon condition of their undertaking, in relief of the parish, the burden of repair. Proof of repair is, however, not essential where repair has not been necessary, and other acts are proved to have been done with regard to the new inconsistent with mere possession by the permission of the churchwardens. Stilement-Gibbard v. Wilkinson, 66 L. J., Q. B. 215; [1897] 1 Q. B. 749; 76 L. T. 90; 61 J. P. 214.

As entitling Owner to County Vote.]-By a statute trustees were empowered to take down and rebuild a chapel, and to appropriate the pews to persons who had subscribed to the building, and such persons were to be deemed proprietors, and the pews or scats were vested in them and their heirs for ever. It did not appear in whom was the freehold of the land upon which the chapel was built:-Held, that the proprietors of the pews had not such a freehold interest in any portion of the soil of the chapel, or in any profit arising thereout, as to entitle them to votes for the county. Granuay v. Hackin, 39 L. J., C. P. 103; L. R. 5 C. P. 235; 22 L. T. 804; 1 Hopw. & C. 403.

A person claimed a vote for the county in respect of a freehold pew in a church. A private act recited that the subscribers and promoters of the church had purchased the freehold reversion and inheritance in fee of the said church, and trustees were empowered to convey the unappropriated pews for the purpose of attending divine service. By a subsequent private act the fee-simple of the pews was rested in the subscribers or the proprietors, for the time being, their heirs and assigns for ever, and they were anthorised to sell and convey the fee-simple of the same. A pew was conveyed to H. by deed subsequently to the last statute, and by him to the claimant and his heirs, with the sole right of using the same during service and at other reasonable times :-Held, that he took an interest in the nature of an easement only, and not a freehold interest in the Land. Brunfitt v. Roberts, 39 L. J., C. P. 95; L. R. 5 C. P. 224; 22 L. T. 301; 18 W. R. 678; 1 Hopw. & C. 387.

By an act of parliament, trustees were appointed for the purpose of pulling down and rebuilding a parochial church, the materials of which, and those required for rebuilding it, were vested in them. The act empowered them to sell the fee-simple and inheritance of the pews to inhabitants or residents, such pews to be vested in the purchaser, his heirs and assigns for ever, with power to sell to any other person being an inhabitant or a resident. The form of conveyance specified in the act purported to grant the specified in the act purported to grant the pew to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns, and all the right, title, and interest of the trustees to and in the same, to hold to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns for ever; and it was declared that such conveyance should be good to all intents and purposes, and against all persons. An inhabitant bought a pew under the act, and let it for more than 40s, a year :- Held, old, was in the rector for the time being, and tion was bad, because it professed to divide the had not passed to the trustees; and that the plea, and was replied to part only of the plea,

The claimant must shew some acts of user or person, by purchasing a pew, only acquired a proprietary right, and, if he can do so, then some right to use it for attending divine service, and did not acquire any freehold land or tenement so as to entitle him to be on the register of county voters. Hinde v. Chorlton, 36 L. J., C. P. 79; L. B. 2 C. P. 104; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1008; 15 L. T. 472; 15 W. R. 226.

> Disturbance of Possession, ]-Churchwardens are not justified in dispossessing anyone of a sitting which he has enjoyed for a time, without giving notice of their intention and offering an opportunity for objection and explanation, Horsfull v. Holland, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 278.

> Where, in a suit for disturbance of the plaintiff in the occupation of a pew appurtenant to a messuage, the sole title set up and disputed in the libel and responsive allegation was by prescription, which was not proved by the evidence, the court held that the question whether the plaintiff had any title on the ground of mere possession could not be inquired into. Ib.

> An action cannot be maintained for disturbing another in the possession or enjoyment of a pew, unless it is annexed to a house, or some other messuage in the parish. Mainwaring v. Giles, 5 B. & Ald. 356; 24 R. R. 417.

Possession for above sixty years of a pow in a church is not a sufficient title to maintain an action for disturbance in the enjoyment of it; but the plaintiff must prove a prescriptive right, or a faculty, and should claim it in his declaration as apportenant to a messnage in the parish. Stocks v. Booth, 1 Term Rep. 428; 1 R. R. 244.

Upon a libel in the consistorial court for disturbance of the plaintiff's right to a pew, the court adjudged the right to be in the plaintiff, and admonished the defendant not to sit in the pew; the Court of Arches reversed the sentence, but admonished the defendant not to use the pew again : these sentences were held not conclusive evidence of the plaintiff's right in an action for a disturbance between the same parties, Cross v. Salter, 3 Term Rep. 639.

In an action against a stranger for disturbing the plaintiff in his pew, he need not allege or prove that he repaired it : otherwise in a dispute with the ordinary. Kenrick v. Taylor, 1 Wils, 326.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff was possessed of a messuage in a parish, and by reason thereof had the use of a pew in the parish church; and that the defendant disturbed the plaintiff in the enjoyment thereof. Plea, that the pew was larger than was required for the accommodation of the plaintiff, and the rest of the church was too small to contain the other parishioners; and that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the churchwardens, that they should erect a partition across the pew, and divide the same into two small pews, and that in consideration thereof the churchwardens for the time being should have licence from the plaintiff to enter, and cause other persons being parishioners resident in the parish, to enter and continue in one of the smaller pews during divine service; and justified under the agreement and licence. Replication. as to the grievances before a certain day. that there was no such agreement as alleged, and as to the residue of the grievances, that before they were committed the plaintiff revoked the licence :- Held, that the plea was indivisible, that the freehold of the new church, as of the and, therefore, that the first part of the replica-whereas, if true, it was an answer to the whole; the period of anyone living. Knapp v. St. Mary, and that the latter part of the replication was | Willesden, 2 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 358; 15 Jur. 473. had, as a replication for the same reason, and as a new assignment for informality. Adams v. Andrews, 15 Q. B. 284; 20 L. J., Q. B. 33; 15 Jur. 149.

Held, also, that the plaintiff had a right to revoke the licence or agreement, not withstanding the expense incurred by the defendant. 1b.

A prohibition was awarded in a spiritual suit for a disturbance of a seat in a church, where it appeared that the temporal right was in question. Witcher v. Cheslam, 1 Wils. 17.

- Action for Assault and False Imprison--A. entered a church during divine service and, though offered a seat by the churchwarden, went into another which was allotted to a parishioner and refused to leave it notwithstanding the churchwarden's remonstrances. The defendant, who was a magistrate present, thereupon took him into custody until the clergyman and churchwarden should swear an information against him (which they did) and, on his not getting two sureties as provided by 6 (ico. 1, c. 5 (Irish), committed him to gaol :- Held, in an action by A. for assault and false imprisonment, that the above facts pleaded in defence must, on demirrer, be set aside as not justifying the assault or even the false imprisonment, as defendant had not brought the offence charged against plaintiff within the provisions of the act. King v. Poe, 15 L. T. 37.

Authority of Perpetual Curate as to.]-A chapelwarden of a parochial chapelry has not, by virtue of his office, any authority to enter the chapel and remove the pews without the consent of the perpetual curate. Jones v. Ellis, 2 Y. & J. 265; 31 R. R. 589.

The perpetual curate of an augmented parochial chapelry has a sufficient possession whereon to maintain an action for breaking and entering the chapel and destroying the pews, even against the chapelwarden. Ib.

Grant of Faculty to appropriate. ]-The grant of a faculty to appropriate certain parts of a parish church, is within the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court; and the Conrt of Queen's Bench will not presume that that jurisdiction will be improperly exercised, and therefore will not prohibit the ecclesiastical court from proceeding to judgment, although the faculty prayed for is larger than that court has power to grant. Hal-lack v. Cumbridge University, 1 G. & D. 100; 9 D. P. C. 583; I Q. B. 593; 10 L. J., Q. B. 206; 6 Jur. 10.

Apportionment of Right to.]—The right to sit in a pew may be apportioned; and therefore where, by a faculty reciting "that A. had applied to have a pew appropriated to him in the parish church in respect of his dwelling-house," a pew was granted to him and his family for ever and the owners and occupiers of the dwelling-house ; and the dwelling-house was afterwards divided into two :- Held, that the occupier of one of the two (constituting a very small part of the original messuage) had some right to the pew, and in virtue thereof might maintain an action against a wrongdoer. Harris v. Drewe, 2 B. & Ad. 164,

Evidence.] - Evidence of repair to a pew claimed by prescription is not absolutely neces- the parishioners in vestry assembled, and, if the sary, as no repair may have been made within majority should refuse to make a rate for the

It is necessary, in a claim of prescriptive right to a pew, to allege and prove reparation. Churtan v. Frewen, 35 L. J., Ch. 692; L. R. 2 Eq. 634; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 879; 14 L. T. 846.

A parishioner who claims a legal right by prescription to a pew in the nave of his parish church must, in order to displace the general right of the ordinary, not only shew that the pew has been occupied by him or his predecessors in title in respect of an ancient house in the parish for a period more or less extended, but must also prove, if any alteration or repair of the pew has been necessary, that such repairs or alterations were executed at the expense of those who at the time claimed the prescriptive right to it. Crisp v. Martin, 2 P. D. 15.

A pew in a parish church was claimed in respect of an ancient messuage; and it was proved, that, so far as living memory extended, the pew in question had been one of three pews adjoining each other, used under one and the same claim of right, viz. in respect of the ancient messuage :- Held, that proof of repairs done to one of the pews, not that in question, was evidence as to all, and, therefore, as to that in question. Popper v. Barnard, 12 L. J., Q. B. 361; 7 Jur. 1128.

The amount of evidence of possession and use necessary to establish a claim to a seat or a pow in a church varies in each particular case. Ib.

Grant of .]-A grant of part of the chancel of a church, by a lay impropriator, to A., his heirs and assigns, is not valid in law, and therefore such grantee, or those claiming under him, cannot maintain an action for pulling down pews there erected. Clifford v. Wicks, I B. & Ald, 498; 19

Repair of ]—Where the members of a corpora-tion have, as such, occupied a particular pew in the parish church, the repairs of it may be properly charged on the borough fund. Reg. v. Warwick Corporation, 15 L. J., O. B. 306; 10

Pew-door.]-The door of a pew in a church hung upon hinges, removable without interfering with the staple, is a chattel, and not part of the freehold. Mant v. Collins, 10 Jur. 390.

Pew Rents, Mortgage of.]-Pew rents of a district church, constituted nuder the church building acts, are livings appointed for eccle-siastical ministers within 13 Eliz. c. 20, and a mortgage of them is therefore void. Lereson, In re, Arrowsmith, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Bk. 46; 8 Ch. D. 96; 38 L. T. 547; 26 W. R. 600—C. A.

In Roman Catholic Churches. ]-Bare possession, without title of a pew in a Roman Catholic church, justifies the occupier in defending by force the possession against the entry of a person having no title. Brett v. Mullarkey, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 120.

XXVII. CHURCH AND CHAPEL RATES. 1. MAKING.

a. Generally.

By whom. ]-A valid church-rate can only be made by an actual or a constructive majority of fabric of the parish church, such refusal would not 589. entitle the minority to make the rate. Gosling v. Veley, 4 H. L. Cas. 679; 1 C. L. R. 950; 17

Jur. 939.

Where parties are unduly elected churchwardens, but are admitted, and sworn in and act, they may convene a vestry for making a church-rate; and a rate made at such a vestry is valid. Reg. v. St. Clements, 12 A. & E. 177; 3 P. & D. 481; 4 Jur. 1059.

Validity.]-A rate to reimburse churchwardens such sums as they had expended, or might thereafter expend on the parish church, would be bad on the face of it, as in part retrospective. Rex v. Haworth, 12 East, 556.

Court will not decree rate to be paid to reimburse a former churchwarden moueys laid out whilst in office, in parsuance of a vestry order. Lanchester v. Thompson, 5 Madd. 4.

A church-rate made avowedly larger than was necessary for the current year, for the purpose of enabling the churchwardens to liquidate a debt incurred in former years, is excessive and there-Farlar v. Chesterton, 2 Moore, fore illegal.

A church-rate, made pursuant to a resolution of a vestry, was stated in the heading of the rate to be made "for and towards the repairs of the church, and other incidental charges of the parish":-Held, that the rate was bad, because it appeared to be made not exclusively to defray expenses to which a church-rate is applicable. Reg. v. Byron, 3 New Sess. Cas. 180; 12 Q. B. 321; 17 L. J., M. C. 134; 12 Jur. 479.

Where the resolution of the vestry granting a church-rate and the rate are both good, a defective title of the rate may be amended.

Items.]—Charges for "sidesmen, their salary and gowns," for ringers, and for insurance, are admissible items, in a church-rate, if the vestry assents to the estimate which includes them at the time the rate is granted. Rand v. Green, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 303.

A charge for the attendance of a legal adviser at the taking a poll, for legal assistance in making a church-rate, or for the salary of an organist in a wealthy town parish, if such charges have been sauctioned by the vestry, may be lawfully paid out of a church-rate, and a rate made to cover them will not be excessive. Tiarks v. Hutton, 85 L. J., Ecc. 11; L. R. 1 Ecc. 270; 12 Jur.

(N.S.) 1013.

Where a vestry meeting is held for the purpose of passing a church-rate, and the churchwardens produce an estimate containing items alleged to be illegal, such as an item for warming the church, the chairman ought to allow the question of these items, and of the quantum of the rate, to be first disposed of before the motion for a churchrate is put. Richards v. Birley, 10 L. T. 142-PC

b. Under Local or Particular Statutes.

Assessment.] - Where churchwardens were required by a local act to levy a rate for the repair of a church "on the full annual rent or value" of all houses in the parish ratable for the relief of the poor of the parish, the rate must be made on the ratable value of the premises and not on the gross estimated rental. Rose v. Watson, 63 L. J., M. C. 108; [1894] 2 Q. B. 90; houses, . . . tenements and hereditaments within purpose of discharging the duty of repairing the | 10 R. 255; 70 L. T. 906; 42 W. R. 523; 58 J. P.

Trustees for building Church-Production of Accounts. |-The trustees appointed under local acts for building a church, and authorised to levy rates upon the inhabitants of the parish, whose accounts were directed to be andited and allowed by the quarter sessions, are nevertheless compellable, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, s, 34, toproduce their accounts for the last half-year before the auditors of the parish accounts, appointed under and in consequence of the adoption by the parish of the last-mentioned act. Rew v. St. Paneras Church Trustees, 1 N. & P. 507 ; 6 A. & E. 314.

Amount required.]-Where an act required a select vestry from time to time, as often as occasion required, to make rates for the relief of the poor, and the repair of churches and highways in the parish :- Held, that they were not com-pellable to make a church-rate upon demand, while the churchwardens refused to state the necessary amount, or to furnish any estimate of it, or to give to the vestry any information whereby they might ascertain it. Reg. v. 8t. Margaret's, Leicester, 10 A. & E. 730; 2 P. & D.

Alteration of Parish. |-By a local act the parish of St. Giles, Camberwell, is empowered to make a church-rate, and an appeal is given to persons aggrieved to the quarter sessions. that time certain districts of the parish have become separate and distinct parishes for all ecclesiastical purposes under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, and are not included in the church-rates for the parish of St. Giles, Camberwell:—Held, that the local act continued in force, and regulated church-rates for the part of the parish of St. Giles, Camberwell, not within such districts and new parishes. Reg. v. Surrey J.J., 32 L. J., M. C. 158; 7 L. T. 822; 11 W. R. 362.

Jurisdiction of Justices to inquire into Validity of. ]-By a local act the vestry of a parish was empowered to make rates for the maintenance of the church, and an appeal to the quarter sessions was given against any rate. By an amending act every rate was to be enforced by summons before justices, and, if the person summoned should not prove to the justice that he was not chargeable with or liable to pay such rate, he should pay it. A person summoned for nonpayment of a church-rate proposed to give evidence to show that the rate had not been duly made; which evidence the justices declined to hear :-Held, that they had no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the rate. May, Ex parte, 2 B. & S. 426; 31 L. J., M. C. 161.

For Ecclesiastical and Non-Ecclesiastical Purposes. ]—In the year 1817, by a local act (57 Geo 3, c. xxxiv.), the hamlet of P. was taken from the parish of S. and formed into a separate parish, with a separate church and incumbent, and by s, 12 the inhabitants of the parish of P. were discharged and exempt from the payment of small tithes, and the rector ceased to have the cure of souls over the new parish. By s. 61 of the local act it was provided that for the purposes of the act it should be lawful for the vestry to make a rate upon the occupiers of all lands.

the parish. There was also a clause in the act by applicable to ecclesiastical purposes could legally which the rate was to be applicable to other par-poses besides the payment of the incumbent, namely, purposes connected with the repair of the church and the celebration of divine service. The vestry of P. made a rate which they applied to eighteen different purposes, of which four were non-ecclesiastical, and fourteen were corlesiastical, purposes within the meaning of the Compulsory Church Rates Abolition Act, 1868, s. 10 :-Held, that the rate was not made in lieu or in consideration of the extinguishment or abolition of tithes, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Compulsory Church Rates Abolition Act, 1868, and therefore, that it came within s. 2: and that the rate might be treated as a valid rate only as a separate rate, and not as a church-rate, and it was consequently good for non-ecclesiastical parposes but bad for ecclesiastical purposes, and could not be enforced in respect of the latter. Watson v. All Saints, Poplar, 46 L. T. 201 : 46 J. P. 454

An arrangement embodied in a private local act, and which is based on good and valuable consideration, and provides for the levying of church-rates, though not in the strict form of an agreement between the parties affected is a "contract" within 31 & 32 Vict. c. 109, s. 5. and protects the rate levied in pursuance of it for ecclesiastical purposes. Watson v. All Saints, Poplar (supra) distinguished. Bell v. Bassett, 52 L. J., O. B. 22: 47 L. T. 19.

In consideration of Extinguished Tithes.]— The hamlet of Bethnal Green was made a separate parish by 16 Geo. 2, c. 28. By s. 35 of that act all garden pennies and small tithes arising within the hamlet were made payable to the churchwardens of the new parish to be applied for the maintenance and support of the rector "and such other uses as were thereby directed." In no part of the act was there any direction as to the purposes for which so much of the garden pennies and small titles as were not paid to the rector were to be applied, but by s. 25 the rector, churchwardens, and overseers, &c., were to be vestrymen, and were to meet from time to time, and appoint a lecturer, churchwardens, sidesnien, parish elerk, and other officers for the new parish. There never was any surplus of the garden pennies and small tithes after paying the stipend of the rector. By a subsequent local act the garden pennies, &c., were extinguished, and the churchwardens were required to make a composition rate on property within the parish to pay the rector's stipend and any deficiency in the rates and daties applicable towards maintaining divine service in the parish church, and repairing the church :- Held, that church, and repairing the church:—Held, that the effect of 16 (deo. 2, c. 28, was to direct and authorise the balance of the garden pennics and small tithes, &c. (after payment of the rector's stipend) to be employed in payment of the parish officers elected pursuant to s. 25; that such balance, although, in fact, it had never been so applied, was appropriated by law (within the meaning of s. 5 of the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act. s. 68) to the payment of ecclesiastical purposes; that the whole of the garden treal purposes; that the whole of the garden pennies, &c. (not only the part applicable to the rector's stipend), being extinguished, the compo-sition rate was levied in consideration of such extinguishment; and that, therefore, not only such part of the composition rate as was required to pay the rector's stipend, but also the part appriatore to eccessistical purposes could legally be raised. 8t. Matthew's, Bethnal Green v. Perkins, 53 L. T. 634—H. L. (B.). Affirming S. C., sub nom. Reg. v. St. Matthew's, Bethnal Green, 50 L. T. 65; 48 J. P. 340.

Contract or Consideration - Abolition Act. 1868.]—In order to preserve a church-rate from abolition under the Compulsory Church Rates Abolition Act. 1868, on the ground that it is levied on the authority of a private act of parlia-ment on a contract made or for good or valuable consideration, the contract or consideration relied upon must be found in or gathered from the private act of parliament alone. Reg. v. St. Marylebone Vestry, 64 L. J., Q. B. 622; [1895] 1 Q. B. 771; 14 R. 172; 72 L. T. 11—C. A.

c. Under Church Building Acts.

To repay Loan for building Church.] -Wherethe inhabitants of a parish have made an application to the commissioners for building new charches, conformably to 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 14, and 59 & 60 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 24, and have in consequence obtained a loan for the purpose of bnikling churches within the parish, the churchwardens may make a rate for repaying the interest and principal, without any further, consent of the parishoners to such rate. Rew v. St. Mary, Lumbeth, 3 B. & Ad. 651: 1 L. J., M. C. 93.

For Expenses of Church.] - In a district constituted under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and assigned to a church built under that act, it is competent to the churchwardens and inhabitants to make a rate not merely for the repair of the edifice, but also for the expenses necessary for the performand the expenses necessary for the performance of divine service therein. Bealt, En parte, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 220; 31 L. J., C. P. 237; 10 W. R. 524. S. P., Adams v. Bealt, 2 B. & S. 339; 31 L. J., Q. B. 106; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1131; 5 L. T. 795; 10 W. R. 343.

Refusal to take Poll at Vestry.]-Under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 25, and B Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 26, if a parish wishes for an extension to be made to its churchyard, it is directed to express its desire to the ecclesiastical commissioners who may, upon the same being notified to them, authorise the parish to purchase the land by means of rates. to defray the expenses :- Held, that a resolution passed at a vestry meeting convened for the purpose, but which resolution had been passed by a majority of the meeting, when a poll, which had been demanded by a dissentient minority, was refused, did not legally express the desire of the parish; and that the order of the commissioners founded thereou, and all that had been done under that order, including a church-rate which had been laid in pursuance of it, was illegal and void. White v. Sleele, 12 C. B. (x.s.) 383; 31 L. J., C. P. 265; 8 Jnr. (x.s.) 1177; 6 L. T. 686.

Parish subdivided. - A parish had been subdivided into several new parishes, churches were erected within each new parish, and the incumbents were duly authorised to publish banns of matrimony, and to solemnise marriages, churchings, baptisms, and burials in their respective churches. They were also authorised, either by the order in council which constituted the new parishes, or by the voluntary concession of the the performance of such offices. All these new hes had been separated from the original parish after 19 & 20 Viet. c. 104. The churchwardens of the original parish made an ordinary church-rate on all the inhabitants of the parish, and on others ratable in respect of properties within the parish, but exclusive of the properties and inhabitants of the several new parishes :-Held, that the rate was properly made. Gough v. Jones, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 82; 7 L. T. 566; 11 W. R.

When a separate district has been constituted by an order in council in any parish, and a church consecrated therein, in which service is performed, and the incumbent receives the fees for his own benefit, such district becomes, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes, amongst which is the making of church-rates, Ib.

d. Notice of holding Vestry to make.

Sufficiency of . ]-A notice of a vestry meeting affixed on a parish church door, and addressed "to the churchwardens, overseers and principal inhabitants of this parish," is a valid notice, though it does not name the parish, and although it is addressed to the principal inhabitants. Rand v. Green, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 470; 30 L. J., C. P. 80; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 126; 3 L. T. 298; 9 W. R. 54. S. C. in Q. B., 3 L. T. 29.

Where a notice of vestry was for the purpose of granting a church-rate for and towards the repairs and expenses of the parish church, and the chief item in the estimate, 1001, nearly twothirds of the whole rate, was for the completion of windows already begun, the notice was held to be sufficient. Grough v. Jones, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 82; 7 L. T. 566; 11 W. R. 107.

It is essential to the validity of a church-rate that the notice required by the 58 (teo. 3, c, 69, s. 1, summoning the parishioners together, should clearly apprise them of the special purpose for which the vestry meeting is to be called. Smith v. Deighton, 8 Moore, P. C. 179.

e. Voting at Vestry.

Who entitled to Vote. ]-A church-rate carried by a majority of one was questioned on the ground that the vicar and occupiers of the church lands were not cutitled to vote, as they are not liable to pay church-rate :- Held, that a vicar and occupiers of church lands are entitled to vote, and that there was nothing in this objection. Ranson v. Campkin, 1 Rob. Ecc. Rep.

In respect of what Property.]—In a parish in which 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, had been adopted, and certain owners of small tenements had been rated to the poor-rate, instead of occupiers, a poll was taken on a proposed church-rate. In favour of the rate certain ratepayers claimed to vote (and their votes were admitted and recorded), not only according to the value of the property in their own occupation in respect of which they were assessed under the provisions of 58 Geo. 3. c. 69, but in addition and separately in respect of incumbent of the mother church, to receive for recorded erroneously and illegally. Lambe v. their own use and benefit the fees arising from | Grieres, 8 Jnr. (N.S.) 288.

What a sufficient Quorum.]—The commissioners for building and enlarging churches having, pursuant to 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 30, appointed twenty-six persons to be a select vestry, for the care and management of a church, and all matters relating thereto :-Held, that in order to constitute a good assembly of the select vestry so appointed there must be present a majority of the number (viz. fourteen) named in the appointment; and therefore that a rate for the repair of the church made at a meeting where there was not such a majority was illegal, and that payment of such a rate could not be enforced in the Ecclesiastical Court. Blackett v. Blizard, 9 B. & C. 851; 4 M. & Ry. 641; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 103.

Proposal of Amendment at Adjourned Meeting to take Poll. |-The churchwardens of a parish gave notice that a vestry would be held on, &c., to make a rate for the purpose of repairing the fabric of the parish church; that a shew of hands would be taken upon each proposition and amendment which might be submitted to the meeting; that, if the poll should be demanded. the meeting would be adjourned to the 8th of July, when the poll would be taken on all the propositions and amendments made at such meeting at one and the same time, that the poll should be kept open till, &c., when the poll should close, and the result should be final and conclu-At the first meeting a rate of 2d, in the pound was proposed, and an amendment was moved that no rate should be granted; the majority was in favour of the amendment; and on a poll being demanded the meeting was adjourned and the poll taken upon the day named, upon the motion and the amendment. At the close of the poll, the chairman declared that there was a majority in favour of the motion, whereupon a voter proposed to move another amendment, but was not allowed to do so :- Held, that the amendment being, in fact, a negative of the original motion, there was no occasion to put the motion separately to the meeting, and that the proceedings were regular and the rate good. Rey. v. Roberts, 3 B, & S. 495; 32 L. J., M. C. 153; 7 L. T. 822; 11 W, R.

Irregularity.]—At a vestry meeting, a motion having been made and seconded that a rate be made, an amendment was proposed, that it was not legal or expedient to make a churchrate for the district. The amendment and, afterwards, the original question were put to the meeting; the first was negatived and the latter A poll was demanded on the aniendcarried. ment only, and the vestry was adjourned for that purpose. On the day to which the vestry had been adjourned, the chairman declared the state of the poll under the headings-the number for the amendment and against the rate-the number against the amendment and for the rate; and then dissolved the meeting without having put the original motion a second time :-Held, that the proceedings, though irregular, were not sufficiently so to vitiate the rute. Tiarks v. Hutton, 35 L. J., Ecc. 11; L. R. 1 Ecc. 270; 12 Jur. (N.s.) 1013,

At a vestry meeting, a majority, after a poll, was declared in favour of a church-rate for the aska hyperty to which they were assessed under purpose of defraying the expense of fencing in a 3 & 14 Vict. c. 99:—Held, that such votes were piece of land, purchased as an additional burialground for the parish; irregularities were alleged to have taken place in the proceedings which would render the rate void. The court nevertheless refused to grant a mandatus to the churchwardens to convene a vestry for the purpose of considering the propriety of making such a rate. St. John's. Cardiff, Churchwardens, In rg., 16 L. J., M. C. 54; 11 Jur. 183.

Refusal to accept Vote—Rates not paid by Voter himself.]—It is no legal ground for refusing a vote tendered at the poll that the voter's rates had been paid not by himself but by other persons in order to enable him to vote: but, in order to vitiate the vote on that ground, the rejected voter ought to have tendered his vote. Richards v. Eirley, 10 L. T. 142—P. C.

Refusal to grant Poll—Invalidity,]—Where, upon an amendment to a proposal for a church-rate being negatived on a shew of hands, a poll was demanded but was refused by the chairman and the original proposal was then put and carried, both on a shew of hands and on a poll:—Held, that all the proceedings subsequent to the refusal to grant a poll on the amendment were null, and that the original proposal was not validly carried. St. Michael, Oxford v. Laff, 7 W. R. 20.

f. Refusal to make.

What is.]—A citation against a parishioner, charging him, that he wilfully and contamu-ciously obstructed, or at least refused to make, or join, or coneur in the making of a sufficient rate for providing funds to defray the expense of the necessary repairs of the parish church, 'does not contain a sufficient allegation of an offence cognizable by an ecclesiastical court. Francis v. Steward, D. & M. 748; 5 Q. B. 984; 8 Jur. 1066.

When the making a church-rate is enjoined on a special vestry by act of parliament, a colourable adjournment for the purpose of delay is equivalent to a distinct refusal. Reg. v. St. Marguret's, Leicester, S. A. & E. SS9; 1 P. & D. 115.

Mandamus to make Rate.]—Tames L granted a rectory to a corporation in trust to pay stipous, and to bear all the charges issuing out of the rectory. The 22 & 32 Car. 2 absolved the parisioners from payment of tithe, and enacted that a rate should be made yearly by the parish officers for the payment of stipends, and for church repairs. The 56 Geo. 8, c. 55, enacted, that it might be lawful for the wardens, overseers and inhabitants in vestry, to make a rate (to a large moont) for the payment of stipends, and for church repairs. On a vestry refusing to make a rate for the above purposes, the court issued a mandamus to them to call a vestry, and make a rate. They N.S. Where a township, being part of a parish, is called upon by mandamus to pay a definite customary proportion of a church-rate made for the whole parish, it must appear that the inhabitaris were summoned to consider the rate; for, if the custom requires such summons, fulfilment of that requisite is essential; and, if it does not, it is a bad custom. Reg. v. Dutby, 3 Q, B, 602. S. C. nom. Reg. v. Forston, 7 Jur. 13.

Where a majority at a meeting, held in pursannee of a monition from the Consistory Court, to take steps for repairing a church, refused to make any church-rate, and thereupon the church-wardens and the minority made a rate, the court refused a mandanus to the chapelwardens of a township in the parish, to compel them to raise their customary proportion of the rate. **Deg, v. Thomas, 3 G. & D. 485; 3 Q. B. 589; 6 Jnr. 1122.

A mandamus will not lie to churchwardens to make a church-rate, Rew v. Wilson, 5 D. & R. 602.

Because it is a subject of ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Rev v. St. Peter's, Thetford, 5 Term Rep. 364

Although a mandamns does not lie to the churchwardens to make a church-rate, yet it lies to the churchwardens of two united parishes, under 10 Anne, c. 11, to assemble a meeting for the purpose of agreeing upon and ascertaining the moneys and rates to be assessed for the repair of the church of one of those parishes. Rev. St. Margaret and St. John, Westminster, 4 M. & S. 250.

Where an act directs a body, created by the act, to levy church-rates, the count will compel them by mandamus to levy the rate, and will not confine the writ to ordering the body to assemble for the purpose of determining whether they will levy the rate or not. Rey. v. N. Marguret, Leiester, S. A. & E. 889; J. P. & D. 116.

Forfeiture and Penalty for not making Rate.]—By an old local act for a parish the vestry are to make a rate on the parish called a pound rate, for raising a sum of money for the payment in the manner therein mentioned of the rector's stipend, and in default to forfeit and pay to the rector a certain sum for every offence, recoverable in the manner in the said act mentioned. By the same act the vestry are empowered. if they think fit, out of the moneys so raised, to erect a suitable house within the parish for the rector's residence, the cost of which is not to exceed a certain sum; and, until they erect the same, they are to pay the rector a certain sum a year out of the moneys so raised :- Held, that the power of making the rate was, by the Metropolis Local Munagement Acts (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 90, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, s. 3), transferred to the vestry elected under those acts, and that a prerogative writ of nundamus. lies against such vestry to compel them to make the rate for the purposes aforesaid, nothwith-standing the provision for the forfeiture and penalty above mentioned. Refusal of Vestry—Subsequent making:]—

A resolution passed by the majority in vestry to declare that no church-rate is necessary, and to refuse any such rate, does not disentitle the persons composing that majority to vote upon. on it, such rate will be bad. Gasling v. Veley, 4 H. L. Cas. 679; 1 C. L. R. 950; 17 Jur. 989.

At a vestry meeting assembled under a monition from the Ecclesiastical Court, to consider of and make a rate for the repairs of the parish church, au estimate was produced by the churchwardens, and a rate of 2s. in the pound proposed by them ; no objection was made to the estimate, but an amendment was passed by the majority that church-rates were bad in principle and ought to be refused, and the vestry did refuse to make a rate accordingly. The vicar, church-wardens and certain others of the vestry, without taking any vote on the question, did afterwards produce and sign a rate of 2s. in the pound : Held, that the rate thus agreed to was invalid. Ib.

Refusal by Churchwardens. ] - Bill against churchwardens because they refused to make a rate for reimbursing the plaintiff according to a vote and order of vestry. They being out of their office, the decree was made against them and their successors. Battily v. Cooke, 2 Vern. 262 : Pre. Ch. 42.

g. Chapel Rates.

When leviable.]-An inhabitant of a parish was libelled for nonpayment of rates imposed for the repair of the parish church, and of certain chapels built within the parish, under certain chapes built within the parish, under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45; 59 Geo. 3, c. 134; and 3 Geo. 4, c. 72. He declared in prohibition, alleging that the rate was improperly levied on a part of the parish only, excluding the township of H. Plea, that the chapels were built in aid of the parish church: that there has immemorially been a chapel in H., at which the inhabitants of H. have received all divine rites and services; that the costs of repairing the chapel have been immemorially defrayed by the inhabitants of H., and no others; that no rate for repairing the parish church has been laid on any person in H.; and that the inhabitants of H. have from time immemorial been exempt from contributing to the repairs of the parish church. A verdict having been given for the defendant :- Held, that the court must, after verdict, intend the chapel to have been coeval with the church, although that fact was not pleaded; and that, the chapel and church being coeval, and the inhabitants having always been exempt from the church-rate, no rate for repaircream rom the conditions of the imposed upon them. Cracen v. Sanderson, 7 A. & E. 880; 2 N. & P. 641; W. W. & D. 694; 7 L. J., Q. B. 81.

Held, also, that under 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 20, which directs that chapels built under the two first-mentioned acts, or that act, shall be repaired by the parishes or places at large to which they belong, the new chapels were repairable by the district which repaired the church; viz. the parish of W., minus the township of H. Ib.

Held, also, that the mere fact of a district in a parish having kept up a chapel of its own, without coming on the parish rates, did not show a custom in such district to maintain its chapel by rates levied on its own inhabitants. Ib.

the question of any particular proposal for a rate; the holders and occupiers of mills and houses: made by any of the minority; and, if a rate —Held, that an occupier of land within the should be made by the minority alone, the votes chapelry, who did not object to the rate before of the other persons present not having been taken the justices when smunoned for nonpayment, could not question its validity in replevin, after distress on his goods under the justices' warrant. Ramsbottom v. Duckworth, 1 Ex. 506; 19 L. J., M. C. 74.

A chapel-rate, duly made, but objected to from extrinsic circumstances, can only be questioned in the Ecclesiastical Court. Ih.

2. PUBLICATION OF.

Sufficiency of. ]-Under 7 Will, 4 & 1 Vict, c. 45, it is a sufficient publication of a rate if a copy of it is affixed, before divine service on the Sunday next after its allowance, on the principal or most usual door of all the churches and chapels of the established church within the parish, in which divine service is performed. It is not necessary to publish it on all the doors of any church or chapel, nor on the door of a church or a chapel in which divine service had ceased to be performed; nor on the door of any building not . being a church or a chapel in which divine service is performed. Ormerod v. Chadwick, 16 M. & W. 367; 16 L. J., M. C. 143.

3. PROPERTY RATABLE.

What. ]-Where a local act empowered the trustees therein named to raise a sum of money for rebuilding a parish church, and to make a rate for defraying the principal and interest of the sum borrowed on the "houses, warehouses, shops, buildings, lands, tenements and heredita-ments, rated or ratable to the poor":—Held, that titles were ratable under these worls. Rea v. Buckinghamskire JJ., 1 N. & P. 503; 6 A. & E. 388; W., W. & D. 162; 6 L. J., M. C. 89.

The London Missionary Society occupied a house under a lease for religious and charitable purposes. The treasurer attended at the house one day in the week to superintend the society's affairs, but no person ever slept there. The treasurer received no remuneration for his services, and neither he, nor any other person connected with the society, derived any profit from the occupation of the premises :- Held, that the treasurer was properly assessed to a charelirate, under an act extinguishing tithes in the parish, and authorising a yearly church-rate to be made, in order to raise money for the purpose of compensation to the parson in lieu of tithes, and for the repairs of the church, upon all inhabitants and occupiers, because beneficial occupation was not material in this case. Reg. v. Wilson, 12 A. & E. 94; 4 P. & D. 180; 9 L. J., M. C. 102; 4 Jur. 1128.

At common law, impropriate tithes (now represented by titlie rent-charge) are not ratable to ordinary church-rates, and this exemption must hold also with regard to rates made, under 5 Geo. c. 36, to repay mouey advanced by the commissioners of public works. Edney v. Small-bones, 21 L. T. 506.

Rights of common connected with possession are liable to be rated, as also is a towing-path, for the profits derived therefrom, and earned within the parish, although no tolls be taken there. Medland v. Paine, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1283; 7 W. R. 357.

Questioning.]—A chapel-rate was laid on the Mode of assessing Property.]—Land must be landholders of the chapelry only, exclusively of rated according to the rent it could reasonably Mode of assessing Property. ]-Land must be be let for, and other property according to the dismissal of a suit for subtraction of church-rate, of rating. Ib.

Though a church-rate is often made according to the assessment for the poor-rate, it acquires no validity from that circumstance, and the poorrate may be void, and yet the church-rate good. A church-rate does not require to be upon the full ratable value, it merely requires to be just and equal. Yet the acquiescence of a parish in a poor-rate is presumptive evidence that a churchrate made upon the same basis is just and equal. The substantial inequality which will render a church-rate invalid may be either the omission of property that ought to be rated, or the underrating some and the overrating other property. Attenbarough v. Kemp, 14 Moore, P. C. 7 Jur. (N.S.) 665; 5 L. T. 67; 9 W. R. 771.

A church-rate differs from a poor-rate in three things; it need not be upon the net annual value; if just and equal, it cannot be compounded for ; and the landlords of small tenements cannot be rated for part thereof in lieu of the occupiers. Ib.

Churchwardens in making a church-rate need not follow the poor-rate, and should not do so unless satisfied it is just and equal; and to make it a mere copy of the poor-rate may make the rate bad. 1b.

In making a church-rate the parishioners are not bound to adopt the valuation made by an assessment committee under 25 & 26 Viet. c. 103. Barnes v. Grant, 35 L. J., Ecc. 9; L. R. 1 A. & E.

37; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 168; 13 L. T. 688.
Where a church-rate was made upon the basis of an old valuation, originally made for the purposes of a poor-rate, and in accordance with 6 & 7 Will, 4, c, 96, s, 1, and which had been since from time to time corrected, and acted upon and acquiesced in for a great number of years, the court refused to disturb the rate, merely on the ground that a new valuation, made under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, differed from the old one. Ib. S. P., Edwards v. Hatton, infra.

Assessment founded on Rent. ] - The rent paid for lands is not a conclusive test of their value; and an assessment under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, founded chiefly on the basis of the actual rent, and not the rent at which the property might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, according to 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, is erroneous. Elwards v. Hatton, 35 L. J., Ecc. 1; L. R. 1 Ecc. 21; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 144; 13 L. T. 689.

_____Inequality.]—A defendant in a snit for subtraction of church-rate, may by his allegation, averring inequality of assessment, plead that he is himself assessed at too low a rate, and is not bound to aver or shew that he himself is injured by the imaguality of assessment of which he complains, Th.

Where, upon an assessment for church-rate based upon a valuation for poor-rate made more than twenty years previously (in 1838), nearly half the lands in the parish were underrated. The rate was unequal and therefore invalid. Morton v. Tabiner, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 682.

For Repairs to Church-Future Expenses only. ]-The 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 14, which authorises churchwardens to borrow money upon the credit of the church-rates for defraying the expenses of repairs to the church, contemplates future expenses only, and not such as have already been incurred; therefore churchwardens cannot raise a loan to the credit of the churchrates, to pay a debt for repairs incurred in the Dust year. Rew v. Dursley Charchwardens, 5 A. & E. 10; 2 H. & W. 9; 6 N. & M. 333; 5 L. J., M. C. 137. 8, P. Pigott v. Bearblock, 4 Moore, P. C. 499; 8 Jur. 479.

The loan ought to be raised at the time when the repairs are done, and the levying of rates for the repayment should commence immediately. and be continued, so as to pay off the debt by net annual instalments.

What constitutes a Borrowing-Liability of Ratepayers. |-On 22nd June, 1826, a vestry passed a resolution to enlarge the parish church, to approve the estimate of the contractors for 2,390L, and to borrow the money necessary for the plan, beyond the sum already raised, upon bonds of 50% cach, bearing 5 per cent, interest. On 7th December, 1826, the vestry passed another resolution, anthorising the church-wardens, with the assistance of a committee, to borrow at interest any sum or sums of money, not exceeding 2,000% for the payment of such expenses. The resolution declared that, in order to seeme the repayment of such money so borrowed, the churchwardens for the time being should, from time to time, make such rates as should be necessary for payment of interest on such debt, and not less than 5 per cent. to accumulate as a sinking fund. The consent of the bishop of the diocese, and of the incumbent, was given to this resolution. The work was done by the contractors between 29th June, 1826, and 29th March, 1830. A sum of 4001, then remained due to the contractors, and the then churchwardens agreed that this sum should be treated as a loan from the contractors to the parish; and they executed four deeds of charge upon the rates of the parish for 50%, each, at 5 per cent, interest, payable on the 31st March, 1831, and expressed to be in part liquidation of the debt. Interest was gratially paid on the bonds until after March, 1850, but no demand was ever made by or on behalf of the obligees, that any fund should be provided for the payment of the principal, nor had any such fund been provided. On a mandamus to the churchwardens for the time being to make rates for the purpose of paying to the executors of the obligees the principal and the arrears of interest upon the bonds :- Held, first, that the consent of the committee to the borrowing or quasi bor-Ground of, in Suit for Subtraction. ] - The rowing of the 4001, if essential to the validity of judicial committee will not entertain an appeal the bonds, might be presumed, although it did solely on the ground of the refusal of the court not appear upon the face of the instruments. below to allow the defendant costs on the Reg. v. St. Michael's, Southampton, Church-

Jur. (N.S.) 1090; 4 W. R. 741.

Held, secondly, that the transaction amounted to a borrowing within 58 Geo. 3; c. 45, s. 59, and that the bonds were to be considered as given to secure, not a past debt, but a present loan. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the liability of the ratepavers, under the bonds, was not destroyed by the obligees having failed, during twenty years, to demand that they should provide a fund for payment of the principal. Ib.

Who can borrow.]-The township of B. had had immemorially chapelwardens and a chapel. the expense of repairing which had always been defrayed by a rate on the inhabitants of the township. For many years, commencing in 1727, there had been a burial-ground attached to the chapel, as the burial-ground of the township; and the sucraments of the church had also, for many years, been administered in the chanel. But the township was locally situated within the parish of W., and from 1727 to 1740, burial fees were paid for every burial in B., by the clergy of the chapel at B. to the clergy of the parish church of W., and also a fee upon the churching of women; and, although marriages were solemnised in the chapel at B, both by bains and licence, from 1695 to 1754, yet such solemnisations totally ceased from that time until 1843, when the chanci was licensed for the solemnisation of marriages under the act for the registration of births, deaths and marriages. In 1825, it was resolved, by a majority of two-thirds of the vestry of B., convened by a notice, to consider whether an offer by the society for promoting the enlargement and building of churches and chapels should be accepted, and the church enlarged, and whether a sum to make up any deficiency should be raised upon the rates, that 5501, offered by the society, should be accepted, and that the chapel should be enlarged, and that any deficiency in the expense should be made up by the sale of forty private pews, and by rates under the act of parliament. Afterwards, in 1827, chapelwardens of B. executed a deed, charging the chapel-rates of the township with the repayment of 600%, and interest, which sum of money the deed recited was borrowed, under the resolution of the vestry, for enlarging and rebuilding the chapel:-Held, first, that the township of B. was not a parish within 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 59, so as to authorise the chapelwardens, with the consent of the vestry, to borrow money on the rates. Reg. v. Bilston Churchwardons, 16 Q. B. I: 20 L. J., M. C. 68: 15 Jur. 506.

Consent of Vestry. ]-Held, secondly, that even if it was, no sufficient consent by the vestry was shewn, since no consent was shewn to borrow the specific sum which had been borrowed, in the manner in which it had been borrowed; and that, consequently, a mandamus under 58 Geo. 3, e. 45, to compel the churchwardens to pay off the 600l. out of the rates, could not be supported.

Payment of Sum borrowed. ]-A rate may be made under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 59, 60, to pay the principal and interest of money borrowed in the manner provided by that statute, at a meeting of which the notice required by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 25, has not been given, the latter statute not repealing the former, but merely Suit to enforce Debentures-Parties. |-- In a suit against commissioners, to enforce debentures on parish rates (imposed for church building purposes), it was insisted that the ratepayers were necessary parties because they ought to be present at the taking of the accounts. The objection was overruled, on the ground that the ratepayers would be sufficiently represented, in taking the accounts, by the commissioners who were defendants. Fletcher v. Gibbon, 23 Beav. 212.

Some only of many commissioners, appointed under an act of parliament, to raise money on the rates, for parish purposes, were made defendants to a suit in equity, by a bondholder to enforce payment. It was objected that all the commissioners ought to be parties. The objection was removed by the court ordering the decree to be served on the absent commissioners, with notice that they might attend the taking of the accounts. 1h.

6 How ENFORCED

a. In Ecclesiastical Court.

Jurisdiction.]-Ecclesiastical Court has jurisdiction as to church-rates. Court of Chancery not auxiliary thereto. Anon., 2 Ves. 451.

The 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 7, which gives power to a justice to enforce the payment of a sum under 101. due upon a church-rate, where the validity of the rate has not been questioned, nor the liability of the party, takes away the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Court in such cases. But, if the validity or liability is in question, the ecclesiastical courts have jurisdiction, though the party has not been summoned before a justice. Ricketts v. Bodenham, 4 A. & E. 433; 6 N. & M. 171; 1 H. & W. 753; 5 D. P. C. 120; 5 L. J., K. B. 102. But quere as to first point. See Baines, In re. Cr. & Ph. 31: 10 L. J., Ch. 108: 4 Jur. 1194.

As the ecclesiastical courts have general jurisdiction in matters of church-rate, it is unnecessary, notwithstanding the 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, that it should appear from the proceeding, in a subtraction of church-rate cause, either that the amount of the rate exceeded 10L, or that its validity was disputed. Reg. v. Thorogood, 3 P. & D. 629; 12; A. & E. 183; 9 L. J., Q. B. 211; 4 Jur. 987.

A prohibition will go to the Ecclesiastical Court in a suit to enforce the payment of a sum under 101., due upon a church-rate, where neither the validity thereof, nor the liability of the party topay it is disputed. Richards v. Dyke, 2 G. & D. 493; 3 Q. B. 256; 11 L. J., Q. B. 275; 6 Jur. 1036.

The churchyard of a parish having been closed under an order in council, the parishioners in vestry assembled authorised the churchwardens to borrow, according to the provisions of 3 Geo. 4. c. 72, on the security of the rates, a sum sufficient providing a further mode of raising the necessary to purchase a portion of ground adjoining the churchyard and to convert it into a burial-place, I was assessed in the amended rate and assessment At that meeting an adjournment was moved, put to the vestry, and rejected; a poll was demanded, and refused. Subsequently the ecclesiastical commissioners, under their seal, signified their approval of the intended purchase of land, of the amount to be borrowed, and of the arrangement for raising and paying off the loan. The money was borrowed accordingly, the purchase com-pleted, the land conveyed to the ecclesiastical commissioners, and the churchwardens levied a rate of 4d. in the pound on the assessable property in the parish, to repay the first instalment of the The appellant refused to pay :- Held. that, although the making of a rate to discharge a debt incurred under the provisions of an act is not a matter of ecclesiastical cognisance, the enforcing of it is. The Ecclesiastical Contraction and in such a case inquire whether the purpose of paying off the debt and interest was a legal purpose, or whether the loan was necessary or not, but in other respects its jurisdiction remains intact. White v. Steele, 7 Jur. (N.S.)

— Res judicata.]—A parishioner having been summoned before the magistrates of his parish under 53 Geo, 3, c. 127, for nonpayment of a church-rate under 10*l*., informed them that he disputed the validity of the rate; the magistrates, nevertheless, made a verbal order upon him for payment; but on a subsequent day withdrew the order, and informed him of such withdrawal by letter. The churchwardens then instituted proceedings to enforce the rate; the defendant appeared under protest :- Held, that the matter was not res judicata, and that the Ecclesiastical Court had jurisdiction to enforce the rate. Linnell v. Gunn, 36 L. J., Ecc. 23; L. R. 1 Ecc. 363.

Variance, -In March, 1869, a rate was made by the churchwardens and overseers of a parish in Lichfield, for the repayment of money borrowed from the public works loan commissioners, under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36. The defendant occupied premises in the parish, in respect of which he was assessed, for the purposes of the rate, at 10s. 9d.; he refused to pay this sum, and disputed the validity of the rate. Letters of request were granted, directed to the Court of Arches, requesting the judge to call the defen-dant before him to answer "in respect of the A decree by letters of request said assessment." was issued in April, 1870, and the suit proceeded in the Arches Court. The defendant pleaded that a tithe rent-charge, the property of, and received by, the rector in commutation of the tithes within the parish, was not assessed to the rate, and that the glebe house and lands within the parish, of which the rector was the owner and occupier, had been omitted from the assessment. The plaintiff filed a responsive allegation, in which it was alleged that, in January, 1871, a meeting was duly held to amend the rate and the assessment on which the rate was made; and at the meeting the churchwardens, with the concurrence of the overseers, amended the assessment by adding to and including in such assessment the rectorial tithes, and glebe house and lands, and amended the rate by reducing the assessthe rector as owner of the tithes, and as owner and occupier of the globe house and lands, and F. contributing in any proportion towards the that the sum—in respect of which the defendant repairs of the church of B. Plea stated an

-amounted to 9s. 5d. instead of 10s. 9d., and that the plaintiffs only claimed to recover 9s. 5d. that the plantims only claimed to recover so, on. The defendant opposed the admission of the responsive allegation, and the court held that the allegation was inadmissible, because it had no jurisdiction to inquire concerning any other assessment than that mentioned in the letters of request. Asterley v. Adams, L. R. 3 Ecc. 361.

- Letters of Request. ] - A cause of subtraction of church-rate may be carried into the Arches Court by letters of request from the commissary of the diocese, or other jurisdiction, in which the eause originates, under the 23 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 3, without any proceeding having been first taken in the court of that jurisdiction. It is sufficient ground for such removal that matters of difficulty may arise, in which the parties desiring letters of request can have assistance of counsel in the superior court, not attainable in the inferior. Jolly v. Baines, 12 A. & E. 201; 4 P. & D. 224; 9 L. J., Q. B. 349; 5 Jur. 22. But sce Rippin v. Bastin, post, col. 1390.

Onus of Proof.]—In the Ecclesiastical Court the onus of proving a rate to have been rightly made lies on those who assert its validity; and, if that validity is not affirmatively established, the common law courts will prohibit the enforcement of the rate. Gosling v. Veley, 4 H. L. Cas. 679; 1 C. L. R. 950; 17 Jur. 939.

An order of the Ecclesiastical Court to admit a libel and exhibit to proof, is not a definite sentence. Ib.

Declaration in Prohibition-Variance. ] declaration in prohibition stated that the libel in the spiritual court alleged, first, that the parish of F. was a part of and within the parish of B.; secondly, that a usage had prevailed for the inhabitants of F. to maintain their own church, and to contribute to the repair of the parish church of B., and all expenses and charges necessarily laid out and expended by the churchwardens of B., in a certain proportion. That the plaintiff gave a negative issue to the libel, denying thereby the allegations of the same. The declaration further stated, that the plaintiff pleaded that F, was not a part of or within the parish of B.; and that there was not any such usage as that F., besides maintaining its own church, should contribute, in a certain proportion, to the repair of that at B., and all or any of the expenses necessary or otherwise laid out by the churchwardens of B.; and that the plaintiff alleged that F. was a distinct and separate parish. and had a parish church, which had been, time out of mind, maintained by the parishioners of F., and that the same was not a hamlet, chapelry, or township belonging to or within the parish of B. Then followed a statement, that it was falsely alleged in the libel that an ancient usage had been observed, by which the inhabitants of F. had contributed to the support of the parish church of B. in the proportion of three parts in eight of all the expenses of such support; and that, when the churchwardens of B, levied 81, for the repair of their church, or in due execution of their office of churchwardens, the inhabitants of F. had been used to raise 37, as their proportion ment on all the ratable property, and assessed of such charges and expenses; and the plaintiff expressly alleged that there was no such usage of reparation of the parish church of B. in the proportion as in the libel is alleged :-Held, that the libel sought to enforce a usage, with respect to the liability of the parishioners of F. to contribute to B., different from that contained in the plea; and that a question of temporal cognisance was raised in the Ecclesiastical Court, viz. whether F. be a part of and within the parish of B.; and, therefore, the plea disclosed no sufficient ground for awarding a consultation. Dolby v. Rimington, 9 Q. B. 179; 15 L. J., Q. B. 326 ; 10 Jur. 920.

Against Personal Representatives. ]-The exccutor of a deceased parishioner cannot be cited in an ecclesiastical court, in respect of a churchrate due from his testator. Williams v. George, 3 Curt, 343.

b. In County Court.

Jurisdiction. |- By a local act of parliament trustees were empowered to rebuild a church; and for that purpose to make rates on all the houses in the parish ratable for the relief of the poor; one half on the landlords, the other half on the tenants or occupiers. It also enacted that the tenants or occupiers should first pay the whole rate, and deduct a moiety out of their rent, and that every landlord should allow of such deduction, notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary. Subsequently to the passing of this statute, a lease of premises in the parish was granted, with a covenant that the tenant should pay all taxes and rates; and the landlord having refused to allow half the church-rate to be deducted from his rent, contending that the statute only extended to agreements in existence at the time when it was passed, the tenant proceeded against him by plaint in the county court :- Held, that that court had inrisdiction over the matter; it not being one in which the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments came in question. ### c. By Proceedings before Justices.

i. Generally.

Abandonment of Proceedings in Ecclesiastical Court.]—If proceedings against a person are commenced in the Ecclesiastical Court to enforce a rate, and afterwards abandoned, the same person may afterwards be summoned before justices, and by them ordered to pay the rate. Reg. v. St. Clement's, 12 A. & E. 177; 3 P. & D. 481; 4 Reg. v. Jur. 1059.

On whose Complaint. ]-Justices may act upon the complaint of one churchwarden, though in a parish having ten. Reg. v. Fenton, 1 Q. B. 480; I G. & D. 17.

Where parties are unduly elected churchwardens, but are admitted and sworn in and act. they may complain of nonpayment, so as to give justices jurisdiction, the sum not exceeding 10l. Reg. v. St. Clement's, supra.

Application of Local Acts. 1—Certain local acts confidence from the confidence provisions by which any rate in a parish, made by virtue of the acts, might be before them to the validity of the rate, the immemorial usage, by which F, had supported its peace; and an appeal was given to the quarter own chapel, and contributed to the support and sessions. Separate districts for ecclesiastical purposes were afterwards formed in this parish under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104 :- Held, that not withstanding the creation of the separate districts, the local acts still applied to church-rates for the parish church. Reg. v. Roberts, 3 B. & S. 495; 32 L. J., M. C. 153; 7 L. T. 822; 11 W. R. 362.

> Sufficiency of Refusal to Pay. ]-A collector called for a church-rate and produced the receiptbook as his authority to collect; the son of the ratepayer, by the authority of his father, refused to pay the rate, handing to the collector a written statement of his refusal: - Held, a sufficient refusal to ground an order of justices for payment. Mirchouse, In re, 1 L. T. 32.

Orders of Justices.]—An order of justices for payment of a chapel-rate need not state that the Ramsbottom proceedings were taken on oath. Ramsbot v. Duckworth, 1 Ex. 506; 19 L. J., M. C. 74.

Appeal from Order.] — A party appealing against an order of justices for payment of a church-rate, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 7, need not give notice of appeal to the justices making the order; it is sufficient to give it to the church-wardens. Rew v. Staffordshire JJ., 4 A. & E. 842; 6 N. & M. 477; 2 H. & W. 48.

ii. Jurisdiction of Justices.

Rate to reimburse Churchwardens, ]magistrates are called upon, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, to enforce a church-rate good upon the face of it, it is no ground of objection before them that the rate was in fact made for the reimbursement of the churchwardens. Rew V. Sillifant, 5 N. & M. 640; 4 A. & E. 354.

Procedure to Oust. ]-To oust the justices of their jurisdiction to adjudicate upon a churchrate summons, the party must decline to accept their adjudication. Reg. v. Know, 32 L. J., M. C. 257; 8 L. T. 330; 11 W. R. 703.

Validity of Rate Disputed. ]-By a local act creating a township a district parish, twentyfour substantial and creditable inhabitants of the parish were to be elected vestrymen, and the rector and thirteen or more of the vestrymen in vestry assembled, or the major part of them, might make a rate for keeping the church in repair, with a power to four or more justices, in case of default in payment of the rate, to grant and issue their warrant to levy the same by distress and sale of the offender's goods, and a power of appeal to the sessions was given to any person. who should find himself aggrieved by any assessment or by any distress to be made for the same, within three months after such distress made :-Held, that the justices had no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the rate, the remedy, if it was invalid, being by appeal to the sessions, and that, if they had such jurisdiction, the fact of some of the vestrymen not residing and sleeping within the parish did not disqualify. Wilson v. Sunderland Churchwardens, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 694; 34 L. J., M. C. 90; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1105; 11 L. T. 342; 13 W. R. 85.

recovered by summons before two justices of the justices have no power to make an order, though he does not object to their jurisdiction to decide in his power to compel the churchwardens to on the points which he has raised. Reg. v. Leievster JJ., 29 L. J., M. C. 203; 2 L. T. 486;

8 W. R. 563.

Where objections were taken, upon a summons before justices, to the validity of a rate made under the 5 Geo. 4, c. 36, as well as to the liability of the person to pay, which objections would have been sufficient, in the case of an ordinary church-rate, to bring the case within the proviso of the 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 7, and oust the jurisdiction of the justices:—Held, that the justices were right in refusing to adjudicate upon the summons, or to make an order. Reg. v. Staffordshire JJ., 25 L. J., M. C. 126; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1023; 4 W. R. 727.

- Rate Bad on the Face of it. ]-Although by 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 7, if any person refuses to pay a church-rate duly assessed upon him, the validity of which has not been questioned in an ecclesiastical court, a magistrate may grant a warrant to bring such person before two justices, who may examine into the complaint and order payment, &c., the court will not compel by mandamus a magistrate to issue his warrant where the rate is manifestly bad. Reg. v. Byron, 3 New Sess. Cas. 180; 12 Q. B. 321; 17 L. J., M. C. 134; 12 Jur. 479.

Sufficiency of Dispute.]—At a meeting of a vestry held in obedience to a monition from the Ecclesiastical Court, it was moved, and seconded, that a church-rate be laid upon the parish for the necessary repair of the church. It was then proposed, and seconded, that there be no church rate for the parish church for the current year. The original resolution was rejected by a majority. A proposition was then made, and seconded, that a voluntary subscription be commenced to pay the costs of the church, and was adopted by a majority. The churchwardens therefore proceeded to levy a rate with the consent of the minority, against which there was a protest. Upon complaint before justices against a party for nonpayment of the sum to which he was liable in respect of that rate, he gave notice, first, that he protested against the church-rate generally; secondly, that he should not contest the validity of the rate in the ecclesiastical courts; and, thirdly, that he should commence actions in the courts of common law against the justices for all acts connected with the rate which he should be advised were illegal :- Held, that the validity of the rate was sufficiently disjuted, and notice given to the justices within the proviso in 53 Geo, 3, c. 127, s. 7. Dale v. Pollard, 10 Q. B. 504; 2 New Sess. Cas. 631; 16 L. J., Q. B. 322; 11 Jur. 539.

- Bona fides of Dispute.]-A parishioner summoned by the churchwardens before justices for nonpayment of a church-rate, alleged that the rate was partly retrospective, and that several items were otherwise illegal, and that he intended to try the validity of the rate in the Ecclesiastical Court. The justices declined to grant an order then, but said they would do so at the end of a month unless the objecting party proceeded to try the validity of the rate in the meantime. No such proceeding was taken, and the parties appeared again before the justices at the end of a month. The objector continued to assert the invalidity of the rate, and his desire to try the question, and stated that it was not legally mouth Churchwardens, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 315; 30 institute proceedings against him in the Ecclesiastical Court, but he challenged them to do so, and he contended that the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted by the third proviso of the 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 7. The justices nevertheless made an order for payment of the rate. Afterwards, on being applied to for a distress warrant to levy such rate, they declined to grant it, and said they threw themselves upon 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5. On motion under that statute, calling upon them to show cause why they should not issue such warrant: -Held, that the justices, on the first hearing, had sufficient ground for considering the rate to be bona fide disputed : that the test of trying the validity of the rate between the first and second hearing was one which ought not to have been imposed; that the ultimate order was bad, and that they could not be called upon to enforce it. Reg. v. Collins, 17 Q. B. 816; 21 L. J., M. C. 73; 16 Jur. 422,

A mere statement to the justices, by the party complained of, that he disputes the rate, and that he has entered a caveat in the Ecclesiastical Court against its being allowed, does not deprive the justices of jurisdiction; they must still hearand examine to ascertain whether the rate is: bonâ fide disputed. Rew v. Wrottesley, 1 B. & Ad. 648; 9 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 51.

Disputes having arisen in a parish by reason of the refusal of the incumbent to bury the child of a Baptist in consecrated ground, some of the inhabitants determined to contest the churchrate. A person was summoned for nonpayment of his rate, and appeared by his solicitor, who stated that he contested the validity of the rate. But the justices, believing that the dispute about the burial of the child was the real cause of the refusal to pay, and that the legal objec-tion was not made bona fide, held that their jurisdiction was not ousted, and made an order for payment of the rate:-Held, that, in order to entitle the justices to assume jurisdiction in such case, they must have very strong evidence of mala fides, and that the facts disclosed were not sufficient ground for such a conclusion. Reg. v. Pedler, 12 L. T. 17.

Where a person, summoned for nonpayment of a church-rate, makes objections thereto, which the justices overrule as not being made bona fide, the court is not bound by the decision of the justices if the contrary appears from the facts. Reg. v. Huntsworth, 33 L. J., M. C. 131; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 945; 10 L. T. 374; 13 W. R. 7.

It is a general rule that the summary jurisdiction of justices gives way when a matter of title. comes bona fide into question before them. Backhouse v. Bishopwearmouth Churchwardens, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 315; 30 L. J., M. C. 118; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 338; 3 L. T. 626; 9 W. R. 162.

— By Quakers.]—The provision in s. 7 of 53 Geo. 3, c 127, which takes away the jurisdiction of justices where the validity of the rate is bona fide disputed, extends to Quakers.

Pease v. Chaytor, 1 B. & S. 658; 31 L. J., M. C. 1; S Jur. (N.S.) 482; 5 L. T. 280; 10 W. R. 16. When, under 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 34, s. 4, a Quaker is summoned before justices for nonpayment of a church-rate, if he bona fide disputes the title to enforce the rate, their jurisdiction ceases, and the Ecclesiastical Court is the proper tribunal to decide the matter. Backhouse v. Bishonwear-

Notice to Justices of Dispute. |- In order to take away the summary jurisdiction of magistrates, the party proceeded against must at once give notice to the justices that he disputes the validity of the rate, or his liability to pay it. If he argues an objection to the rate before the justices, and they decide upon it, and make an order, and he then gives notice that he disputes the validity of the rate, the court will not grant a certiorari to remove the order. Reg. v. Wicksted, or Reg. v. Salop JJ., 2 El. & El. 386; 29

Seed, of Mey. V. Suserp 30., 2 Et a S. L. J., M. C. 39; 6. Jur. (N.S.) 143.

A party, summoned before two justices for nonpayment of a church-rate, told the justices that he would immediately bring an action against any person who ventured to levy the rate, as he thought he had no right to pay it, because he had no claim to or seat in the chapel : -Held, that this was sufficient notice that he disputed his liability to be rated, and therefore the order was quashed. Rev v. Milnrow, 5 M. & S. 248.

In order to oust the jurisdiction of justices, notice that the validity of the rate is disputed must be given to them in a manner such as to induce them to forbear giving judgment. Mannering, Ex parte, 2 B. & S. 431; 31 L. J., M. C. 153.

A person summoned for nonpayment of a church-rate contended that the summons should be dismissed on the grounds that the rate was wrongly described in the summons, and that the rate was illegally made. These grounds having been argued, and the magistrates being about to deliberate, he gave notice that he disputed the validity of the rate and his liability to pay it; and thereupon they decided that their jurisdiction was taken away by the third proviso to s, 7 of 53 Geo, 3, c, 127. The court refused a rule on the justices to make an order for payment of the Justices proceeding notwithstanding. ]-On the hearing of an information before justices for the nonpayment of a church-rate, the attorney for the defendant objected, first, that the rate was illegal, on the ground that the whole parish was not included in it, as the B. district, a part of the parish, was not rated; secondly, that explanation and details of the estimate for the rate were required and refused; and, thirdly, that the rate was unnecessary and execssive. The complainant gave evidence that at the vestry at which the rate was made an explanation of the estimate was given, and that the amount sought to be raised was necessary; and the justices at once decided that the last two objections were not bona fide made. Further evidence having been adduced at an adjourned meeting by the complainant that the B. district had been legally separated from the parish by an order in council, and formed into a new parish for ecclesiastical purposes, the justices being about to give judgment, the defendant stated that he objected to the validity of the rate; the justices, however, held this objection also not bona fide, and made an order on him to pay :-Held, that the justices acted within their jurisdiction, and the court directed them to issue a distress warrant to enforce their order for payment of the rate. Reg. v. Black-burn, 32 L. J., M. C. 41.

L. J., M. C. 118; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 338; 3 L. T. 626; a symmetry of a church-rate, gives notice that he 9 W. R. 162. S. P., Gray v. Buckhouse, 9 Jur. disputes the validity of the rate, and the justices (N.S.) 54; 7 L. T. 438. believe the objection to be made bona fide, and make an order for payment, the court, on the order being brought up by certiorari, will quash it, upon affidavits showing that the justices had no reasonable ground for disbelieving the bona fides. Reg. v. Nunneley, El. Bl, & El. 852; 27 L. J., M. C. 260 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1146 ; 6 W. R. 654.

d. By Distress.

Warrants. ]- The plaintiff having been rated to a church-rate, and refused to pay, a complaint was made before justices, and duly heard; and on the 6th May a verbal order was made for payment by the plaintiff of the amount of the rate and costs. This order was not formally drawn up till some days afterwards. On the 7th a minute of the order was served upon the plaintiff, who refused to pay. After such refusal the order was formally drawn up, dated the 6th May, and a warrant issued by the justices, dated the same day, which was not executed until October, when a cart of the plaintiff's was seized for the distress. It did not appear whether the warrant was drawn up before or after the order dated the 6th May, nor did it recite the order. The plaintiff having brought trespass for the seizure:—Held, that it was not necessary, before issuing the warrant, that an order should have been formally drawn up under hand and seal, but that the pronouncing of the order on the 6th, and the service of the minute of the order on the 7th, were sufficient to justify the issuing of the warrant, and that the non-recital of the order in the warrant, and the fact of the date of the warrant being the same as that of the order, and the neglect to shew in the warrant that it had issued subsequently to the disobedience of the order, being all only matters of form, the justices were entitled to the protection of s. 1 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44. Hatt v. Parkinson, 20 L. J., M. C. 208.

The 27 Geo. 2, c. 20, which directs that in every warrant of distress the instice shall limit. in such warrant, a time of sale, so as such time be not less than four days, nor more than eight days, is applicable to cases of distress for churchrates (except those directed against persons called Quakers); and, therefore, where a distress was made under the 58 Geo. 3, c. 127, the warrunt directing a levying and selling "forthwith," and the person, against whose goods the warrant of distress was issued, resented the goods distrained from out of the custody of a constable :-Held, that an indictment for rescuing a distress could not be maintained, and the conviction was quashed. Reg. v. Williams, 4 New Sess. Cas. 137; 2 Car. & K. 1001; 1 Den. C. C. 529; T. & M. 235; 19 L. J., M. C. 126; 14 Jur. 115.

Refusal to grant Distress Warrant.]-By a local act, persons who refused to pay a churchrate, thereby empowered to be levied, were to be summoned before a magistrate, and if they then refused, the magistrate was authorised and required to grant a distress warrant to levy the amount. A tithe-owner having refused to pay the rate, on the ground that tithes were not ratable under the act, the magistrate refused to grant a distress warrant; but the court issued a mandamus to the magistrate to compel If a party, summoned before justices for non- him to do so. Rew v. Buckinghamshire JJ.,

1 N. & P. 503; 6 A. & E. 888; W. W. & D. XXVIII. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE IN

Illegal. ]-The defendant wrongfully seized the plaintiff's goods, under an alleged distress for church-rate, and gave notice that, unless they were redeemed within five days, they would be sold. In the meantime the defendant removed the goods from the plaintiff's house into another county, from whence they were brought back, and at the expiration of the five days sold :-Held, that the seizure, removal, and sale of the goods were distinct acts of trespass, and that an action might be brought within three calendar months of either, if the latter was within the time limited by 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 12. Collins v. Rose, 7 D. P. C. 796; 5 M. & W. 194; 8 L. J.,

Costs and Expenses.]—By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 17, the provisions, penalties, &c., of 57 Geo. 3, c. 93, are to extend, be applied and put in execution, so far as the same are applicable and capable of being put in execution, with respect to any distress for poor-rates, church-rates, &c., when the sum does not exceed 20%, and the two aets are to be read together. B., being charged with a warrant of distress to enforce the amount of a church-rate under 107. from A., levied on his goods, and sold them by a private contract; but afterwards, bona fide thinking this course erroneons, he induced the purchaser to reseind the contract, and afterwards sold the goods by auction, after appraisement. He retained the amount paid for appraisement, under 6d, in the pound, and tendered the overplus to A. :-Held, that B. was not liable to be convicted under 57 Geo. 3, c. 93, s. 2; for that though he had been mistaken, he had aeted bona fide; he had not taken other or greater charges than were allowed by the schedule, nor charged for what was not really done. Nott v. Bound, L. R. 1 Q. B. 405; 14 L. T. 330.

e. By Indictment.

Sufficiency of Averment.]—In an indictment for disobeying an order of two justices made under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, for the payment of a church-rate, an averment stating, by way of inducement, that a rate was duly made as by law in that behalf required, and that the same was afterwards duly allowed as by law in that behalf required, and that the defendant was in and by the rate duly rated, is sufficient, without setting out the facts which constituted the alleged making, allowance and rating. Reg. v. Bedwell, 1 Den. C. C. 222; 2 Car. & K. 564; 17 L. J., M. C. 99.

Where the count after the above averment, by way of inducement, went on to aver an information by the proper parties to the justice by whom the warrant was issued, that the rate was duly made and afterwards duly allowed, and that the defendant was duly rated, and that the party refused to pay, such information as above will give jurisdiction to the justice making the order, irrespective of the truth of the facts deposed to. Ib.

It is sufficient in an indictment to aver that the churchwardens were anthorised to collect and receive the rate at the time of refusal, without averring that they were so at the time of the demand, Ib.

If, in the indictment, it sufficiently appears by implication that the rate was in force when the order was made, that fact need not be positively averred. Ib.

ECCLESIASTICAL MATTERS,

1. GENERALLY.

Appearance.]-A defendant in a suit in the Arches Court of Canterbury cannot enter an appearance otherwise than in person or by a proctor. Burch v. Reid, L. R. 4 Ecc. 112.

A defendant in a criminal suit appeared, by his proetor, to the citation and prayed articles. the admission of the articles, the proctor intimated that he was not in a position to give in either an affirmative or negative issue, and praying justice submitted himself to the judgment of the court. The court fixed a day for the hearing, and proceeded with the cause as if a negative issue had been pleaded. Lee v. Morest, 39 L. J., Ecc. 53; 22 L. T. 420.

Abatement. ]-The bishop of the diocese in which an accused elergyman held preferment sent the eause in the first instance, by letters of request, to the Court of Arches. The court accepted the letters of request, and issued a decree ealling upon the accused to appear. He appeared, and after the articles had been brought in and admitted, the bishop, who was the promoter of the cause, resigned his see:—Held, that the cause had not abated by reason of such resignation, and leave was granted to amend the titleof the cause by altering the designation of the promoter. Winchester (Bishop) v. Wix, 39 L. J., Eee. 22; L. R. 3 Eec. 19; 21 L. T. 439.

In a proceeding at the suit of a promoter, judgment was given, and he appealed. After the appeal was filed and before hearing he died:

—Held, that it is the duty of the court before which proceedings are pending, when a promoterdies, to allow a proper promoter to be substituted in the place of the original promoter. Elphinstone v. Purchas, 39 L. J., Ecc. 124; L. R. 3 P. C. 245; 23 L. T. 285; 18 W. R. 1073. See Harris v. Perkins, post, col. 1399.

Amending Libel.]—A churchwarden instituted a suit for the recovery of a church-rate against a parishioner, and brought in a libel. The defendant gave in his answers to the libel, and also filed a responsive allegation, which was admitted; from which it appeared that he was not in the occupation of all the premises for which he had been assessed to the rate. The churchwarden then applied to amend the libel by limiting his demand to the sum assessed upon that portion of the property the occupation of which was admitted :—Held, that, on sufficient cause being shewn, the court may order the amendment of the pleadings at any time before the hearing of the cause; and that there was a reasonable ground for doing so under the circumstances. Barnes v. Grant, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 395; 12 L. T.

Within what Time Proceedings to be commenced.]—By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 20, every suit or proceeding against any clerk in holy orders, for an offence against the ecclesiastical laws, shall be commenced within two years after the commission of the offcuce in respect of which the suit or proceeding shall be instituted, and not afterwards:—Held, that the suit or proceeding was not commenced by the issuing of a commission, nor by the report made by the commissioners, nor by the filing of articles in the name of the was committed, and service of the same on the not within the reservation of s. 25, because the accused; but, first, that the suit or proceeding only commenced when the accused was served with a citation to appear at a certain time and place before a competent court, to answer definite charges, as required by ss. 9 and 10; and, secondly, that the limitation of two years, within the meaning of s. 20, was to be reckoned from the time of the service of the citation. Ditcher y. Denison, 11 Moore, P. C. 324; 6 W. R.

After Offence Admitted. - It is proper for the promoter in a criminal suit to bring in articles, though the party cited has by special proxy admitted his breach of the law as intimated in the citation ; for the court, without the specification so afforded by the articles, would not, in many cases, know what sentence to pronounce on such an admission. Jones v. Jelf, 8 L. T. 399.

Lapse of Time. ]-It is the duty of the promoter to prosecute the suit with reasonable expedition. If he neglects to do so, the court may dismiss the suit. Sheppard v. Bennett, 39 L. J., Ecc. 68;

Lapse of time is not an absolute bar to a criminal suit where the evil complained of is a customary one, e.g. that a church was unroofed and dismantled, whereby the parishioners were, and still are, prevented from resorting to their parish church. St. Davids (Bishop) v. De Rutzen, 4 L. T. 90.

Interlocutory Proceedings. ] - Interlocutory proceedings, such as decisions as to admission to proof of articles of charge, and the retention of a cause by the Court of Appeal, are matters on which the Judicial Committee can decide without the necessity of a confirmation of their decision by the Queen in council. The Judicial Committee has, under 6 & 7 Viet. c. 38, in such matters the same power as was formerly exercised by the Court of Delegates. Voysey v. Nable, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 167; 40 L. J., Ecc. 11; L. R. 3 P. C. 357; 23 L. T. 822; 19 W. R. 629.

Authority of Archbishop.]—The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 24, puts the archbishop of the province in the place of the bishop, for the purpose of doing any act, or exercising authority under that act, where the bishop is the patron of the pre-ferment held by the clerk proceeded against. Reg. v. Canterbury (Archbishop), 6 El. & Bl. 546; 25 L. J., Q. B. 946; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 835. See S. C., 4 W. R. 259.

In such cases the archbishop must proceed in the same manner as the bishop would have proceeded, and therefore he is bound to require the accused party to appear before him at a place within the diocese of the bishon by whom the case has been sent by letters of request. Ib.

The archbishop has no authority to summon him to any place within his province not within the diocese of the bishop. Ib.

Where an archbishop, at his visitation, re ceived a charge of simony against a clerk, and pronounced sentence of deprivation against him, and interdicted him from exercising his functions on pain of the greater excommunication : -Held, that the proceeding ought to have been conducted in the mode directed by the 3 & 4

bishop of the diocese in which the alleged offence | and in court, within the words of s. 28, and was power of depriving personally and without process in court did not belong to the archbishop before the statute; and the court prohibited the archbishop from enforcing the sentence. Reg. v. York (Archbishop), 2 G. & D. 202; 2 Q. B. 2; 6 Jur. 412.

> Jurisdiction of Archbishop.]—The archbishop has jurisdiction to cite a bishop in respect of ecclesiastical offences. Read, Exparte, or Read v. Canterhary (Archbishop), 58 L. J., P. C. 32; 13 P. D. 221; 59 L. T. 509—P. C.

> The Archbishop of Canterbury, sitting alone or with assessors, has jurisdiction to entertain a charge against a bishop of his province, of charge against a bishop of this province, of having been guilty of illegal practices in the conduct of divine service. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop) (No. 1), 14 P. D. 88; 61 L. T. 403.

> Power of Bishep. ]--- Upon a charge against a clerk of preaching erroneous doctrine repugnant to the thirty-nine articles, the bishop has no power under 13 Eliz. c. 12, s. 2, of proceeding personally and without process in court, to adjudicate upon such charge; the proceedings in 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86. Denison, Exparte, 4 El. & Bl. 292; 3 C. L. R. 247; 24 L. J., Q. B. 34; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 517; 3 W. R. 105.

> Where such a charge was made to the bishop, the patron of the living, accompanied by an application to grant letters of request to the Court of Arches to adjudicate on the case, and he declined to issue such letters, but privately admonished the clerk :- Held, that he had not adjudicated upon the charge so as to make the issuing of a commission by the archbishop to inquire into the charge an excess of jurisdiction.

Discretion of Bishop in issuing Commission.]
-The words in a statute "it shall be lawful" of themselves merely make that legal and possible which there would otherwise be no right or authority to do. Their natural meaning is permissive and enabling only. But there are cir-cumstances which may couple the power with a duty to exercise it. It lies upon those who call for the exercise of the power to shew that there is an obligation to exercise it. The 3rd section of the Church Discipline Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 86) gives the bishop complete discretion to issue or decline to issue such a commission as is there provided for to inquire as to the grounds of Charges made against clerks. Julius v. Oorford (Bishop), 49 L. J., Q. B. 577; 5 App. Cas. 214; 42 L. T. 546; 28 W. R. 726; 44 J. P. 600. S. P., Reg. v. Chichester (Bishop), 2 El. & El. 209; 29 L. J., Q. B. 23; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 120; 7 W. R.

The act recites that the manner of proceeding in cases for the correction of clerks requires amondment. Its provisions, therefore, may be construed independently of the practice under the previously existing law.

Semble, there is no duty cast on the bishop by the statute, unless, perhaps, a duty to hear and consider the application. Ih.

Enabling words are always compulsory where they are words to effectuate a legal right. Ib.

Reg. v. Tithe Commissioners (14 Q. B. D. 459

compel the bishop to issue such a commission, which is in the discretion of the court to grant or not, ought not to issue upon the application of one who is a stranger to the parish and diocese, and has no personal interest in the investigation of the charges. Reg. v. Chichester (Bishop), supra.

Statement of Offence.]-In a commission issued under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, it is not necessary that the offences complained of should be stated to have been committed within the two years limited by s. 20, if they are charged and admitted as continuing offences. Simpson v. Flamank, 36 L. J., Ecc. 28; L. R. 1 P. C. 463; 16 L. T. 724; 16 W. R. 8.

A citation or a decree issued by the court under letters of request being in the form prescribed by the rules made in pursuance of s. 13, it is no valid objection that it does not state the offences complained of to have been committed within two years, the time prescribed. It is sufficient if the letters of request, which are the foundation of the suit, allege that fact. Ib.

It is the object of letters of request, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 3, to present to the Court of Arches the subject of future proceedings, but it is not necessary to state therein matters over which the judge cannot exercise jurisdiction, notwithstanding that they may have found a place in the report of the commissioners upon which the letters of request are founded.

Bonwell v. London (Bishop), 14 Moore, P. C.

395; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1001; £ L. T. 813; 9 W. R. 874.

The insertion of an objectionable item of charge will not vitiate others well laid, and forms no objection to the judgment when founded on the charges which are well laid. Ib.

Evidence of circumstances which took place beyond the diocese is admissible to throw light upon the true character of acts which were done within the diocese. Ib.

Letters of Request.]—Letters of request arc no part of the record, and are recited in the decree. citing the party complained of to appear, only for the purpose of shewing how the superior court has acquired original jurisdiction. Fry. Transurs. 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 539; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 205; 11 L. T. 753; 13 W. R. 476; 5 N. R. 383.

When accepted, they enable the superior court to authorise the persons who obtain them to institute a suit, but they do no more, and until a suit is instituted in the superior court, litigation has not begun. Ib.

The acceptance or refusal of letters of request sent by a bishop to the Arches Court of Canterbury in proceedings taken under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, is not optional with the Dean of the Arches, the bishop being empowered to send such cases "to the court of appeal of the province, to be there heard and determined according to the law and practice of such court"; and it is not requisite that the letters of request should contain any reason for their being sent. Sheppard v. Philli-mare, 38 L. J., Ecc. 49; L. R. 2 P. C. 450; 20 L. T. 762; 17 W. R. 897.

But the Dean of the Arches will not accept letters of request in a suit for subtraction of church-rates, unless it appears on the letters of request, or by affidavit accompanying the letters particular articles and portions of the prayer of request, that the rate can be enforced not-

Discretion of Court.]—A mandamus to withstanding the provisions of 31 & 32 Vict. the bishop to issue such a commission, c. 109. Rippin v. Bastin, 38 L. J., Ecc. 22; 20 L. T. 622

The court must be moved by counsel to accept letters of request. Ih. In proceedings under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, the bishop sent the case, by letters of request, in the inst instance, and without issuing it commis-sion of inquiry, to the court of appeal of the province:—Held, that the bishop might make his election as to the mode of proceeding, and that the court of appeal could not refuse the letters of request. Brookes v. Cresswell, 10 Jur.

The service of notice of the intention to issue a commission by the bishop, but upon which no from sending the case to the court of appeal, by commission issues, will not preclude the bishop letters of request in the first instance. Head v. Sanders, 4 Moore, P. C. 186; 6 Jur. 1071.

Articles and Pleading.]—When it is intended to oppose the admission of a pleading, a notice must be filed stating the grounds of the objection. Daunt v. Crocker, 37 L. J., Ecc. 1; L. R. 2 Ecc. 41.

In a proceeding against a clergyman for maintaining doctrine alleged to be heretical, the comtaming decrine angest to be accepted, the com-mission is a mere preliminary step for the pur-pose of advising the bishop whether there is a prima facie case, and the letters of request are for the purpose of founding jurisdiction in the higher court, and the citation need only state. generically the offence charged, so that the accused may know the nature of the offence he is called upon to answer. Where, therefore, the commission was to inquire as to certain works of the accused, of which the titles and certain passages accused, of which the titles and certain passages were given, but no charge was preferred before the commissioners, or alleged in the letters of request or citation, in respect of the 29th article of religion:—Held, that the citation was sufficient to enable the promoter to introduce into cient to chable the promoter to introduce into the articles the additional passages and charge of impugning the 29th article of religion. Sheppard v. Bennett, 39 L. J., Ecc. 59; L. R. § 1°, C. 350; 23 L. T. 145; 18 W. R. 650.— P. C.

In support of a charge of heresy, articles filed in the Arches Court set out passages from the works of the accused in which he expressed approval of the works of certain other writers alleged to contain heretical doctrine :- Held, that the articles must set forth passages from the works of the accused in which he has maintained heretical doctrine; that it is not sufficient to set out passages of works of which the accused has expressed a general approval, and which contain passages he has not by his own publication accepted in their totality. Ib.

Where articles are exhibited against a clerk for unsound doctrine, it is not sufficient to set out in the articles the words of the defendant and to state generally that they contain unsound doctrine; but the unsound doctrine complained of must be specifically stated. Heath v. Burder, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 785; 2 L. T. 670; 9 W. R. 22—P. C.

Articles exhibited against a clergyman for publishing and maintaining doctrine contrary to that of the Church of England, after charging that the doctrine complained of was contrary to certain articles of religion, and certain parts of the prayer book and of the homilies, set out the positions, or teachings, declared and taught in which the said articles of religion, parts of the Book of Common Prayer, and formularies of the church, are also more largely expressed in the godly and wholesome dectrine necessary for these times, contained in the following passages from the 1st and 2nd book of the homilies, namely, &c."—Held, that the articles might be admitted to proof in this form. Noble v. Veysey, 39 I. J., Ecc. 21: 23 L. T. 169.

Certain articles, exhibited in a suit instituted by letters of request against the vienr of a parish, alleged that the viear, when officiating in the parish church and during divine service, on divers specified days, and on divers other days and times within two years next before the commencement of the suit, the precise dates whereof the promoter was unable to specify, had performed or sauctioned certain ceremonics alleged to be unlawful. One of the articles alleged the wearing, when officiating in the communion service, of divers dresses and things of divers forms and colours, and other than the habits appointed by law, without giving any specific description of the dresses and things complained of. On motion to reject these articles:—Held, that they were admissible. Combe v. Bdwards, I. R. 4 Ecc. 390.

In proceedings against a clerk for heresy, one of the articles charged him with having maintained that the "commonly received doctrines" of intercession and meditation by Christ, and atonement or reconciliation to God by the death of Christ, were opposed to the perfect harmond and simplicity of the love of God and tony and simplicity of the love of God and to the teaching of Jesus Christ himself:—Held, industriable, and must be struck out. *Voysey v. Nibble, 7 Moore, P. C. (S.S.) 167; 40 L. J., Ecc. 11; L. L. S. P. C. SST; 38 L. T. SSZ; 19 W. R. GSZ.

Articles in a responsive plea, stating that the suit was being promoted contrary to the wish and desire of the parishioners, and that the promoter had a pew in an independent chapel, ordered to be struck out as irrelevant. Ib.

In a suit against a clergyman for muking additious to and variations from the rites and ceremonies prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer in the performance of divine offices, it is necessary to state in the articles with clearness the acts done by him, and the law he has contavened by such acts; but it is not necessary to set out in detail the evidence that will be adduced in proof of them, or the intent with which they were done by him. Martin v. Mackenochie, 36 L. J., Ecc. 25.

When certain articles exhibited against a clergyman charged him with doing certain specified acts in his church "in a ceremonious manner," or "as connected with and forming part of the ceremonies of public worship" Held, that these words amounted to allegations of fact capable of proof, and not to conclusions of law to be drawn from facts. The averment, that an incumbent has "sanctioned or permitted" in his church any alleged departure from the course of public worship as authorised by law, is sufficient, without alleging that such departure was authorised by the incumbent. An averment, following the exact words of the third rubric at the end of the communion service, that there had been communion; that the elements were consecrated and received by the minister, either where no person communicated with him, or where only one person communicated with him, positions, or teachings, declared and taught in him, is a sufficient allegation of an ecclesiastical which the said articles of religion, parts of the offence having been committed. Parnell v. Book of Common Prayer, and formularies of the lourch, are also more largely expressed in the W. R. 428.

Proxies—Signing.]—The general rule of the Ecclesiastical Court requires every proxy to be signed by the party himself, or by some one anthorised to sign for him. Evy v. Treasure, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 539; 11 L.T. 7.53; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 205; 13 W. R. 476; 5 N. R. 383.

Articles—Signing.]—The articles under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 7, may be approved of and signed by any barrister practising in the Arches Court of Canterbury. Mouncey v. Robinson, 87 L. J., Ecc. 8.

Effect of Admission to Proof, ]—The effect of the admission to proof of articles of charge in proceedings for hereey is to adjudge that the matter of the charge is prima facic filegal, but this prima facic inpression the defeudant may remove by shewing that his expressed opinions do not bear the meaning ascribed to them, or that they do not exceed the limits allowed by law. Foyeny, Noble, 7 Moore, P. C. (N. S.) 167; 40 L. J., Ecc. 11; L. R. 3 P. C. 357; 23 L. T. 822; 19 W. R. 629.

— Including offences Committed in Different Diocess. J—Although, where there has been a commission of inquiry which has limited its investigation to a particular offence, the articles afterwards exhibited cannot add to the offence inquired into by the commission another offence committed in another dioces that did not come within the scape of this inquiry, yet there is no objection to coupling in the articles offences committed in different dioceses, where the bislope sends the case by letters of request to the Court of Arches in the first instance. Educards v. Moss, 20 L. T. 834—P. C.

Evidence.]—The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 20, requires only that the corpus deliction which the clerk is to be judged shall be shown to have been committed within two years before the service of the citation; but evidence of matters anterior to that period is not thereby excluded. Th.

— Affirmative Issue.]—When a defendant gives an affirmative issue to articles in a criminal suit, he may at the same time file an affidavit explanatory of his conduct. Kitson v. Drury, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 272.

Residence—Venne, ]—A man may be resident in one diocese, and come into another to commit the offence charged upon him in the significant, This, for the purpose of being cited, is a sufficient residence, and he may be prosecuted in the diocese where the offence was committed. Trebe v. Keith, 2 Atk, 489.

was authorised by the incum hent. An averment, following the exact words of the third rubric at the end of the communion service, that there had been communion; that the elements were conservated and received by the minister, either where no person communicated with him, or where only one person communicated with him, or where only one person communicated with a suit against morality and religion, and especially against the Established Church of which he was or where only one person communicated with would constitute a criminal offence, over which the Ecclestatical Court has no jurisdiction; the gravamen of the charge being the seandal Induced by the reports of the acts in question, for which a clergyman is amenable to his ordinary, and not their criminality, for which he is liable to the criminal tribunal of the island. Jersey (Dean) v. Parish  $\phi \longrightarrow (Reton)$ , 3 Moore, 229.

Production of Documents.]—Where the contents or substance of a document, e.g. an order in council are pleaded, the document itself must be annexed to the articles. St. David's (Bishep) v. De Ratzen, 4 L. T. 90.

Evidence, —In a criminal suit against a clergyman, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, he is competent and may be compelled to give evidence. Novucieh (Bishop) v. Pearse, 37 L. J., Ecc. 90. Where, in a proceeding by criminal articles

Where, in a proceeding by criminal articles against a clergyman for adultery, the defendant tendered limself as a witness (the promoter not objecting), the court rejected the evidence on the ground that, though the case did not fall within the exception of s. 4 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, it was not intended to be included within the terms of s. 2. Moss v. C., 6 L. T. 302.

In a suit against a clergyman, under 3 & 4 Vict. e. 86, for immorality, an application was made on his behalf, and joined in by the promoter, that he might be examined as a witness: —Hold, that, as by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 2, if a party to a suit is a competent witness, he is also compellable to give evidence in that suit, and by 13 Car. 2. c. 12, s. 4, the ecclesiastical courts are forbidden to compel any person to confess, or accuse or purge himself of, any criminal matter or thing, therefore, notwith-standing the consent of the promoter, the defendant could not be examined. Burder v. O'Neill, 9 Jun. (N.S.) 1109; 9 L. T. 232.

The rule of practice in the ecclesiastical courts, which requires that a material fact should be proved by two witnesses, is not applicable to proceedings under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, in which the witnesses give oral evidence in open court. Ib.

The evidence of a single witness of good character, whose memory is shown to be innecurate, and whose acts subsequent to the misconduct alleged, are not consistent with a resentment of it, will not be sufficient to convict a clergyman of an attempt, by words only, to solicit the chastity of such witness. Berney v. Norwich (Bishop), 38 L. J., Ecc. 10—P. C.

In a proceeding under 8 & 4 Vict. c. 86, against a leggram if, it a longstre issue is filed on his behalf without any defensive plea, evidence may nevertheless be given of all material facts necessary to the defense, but not of special circumstances which do not immediately arise out of the charges made against the defendant. Aloss v. Edvards, 27, 17, 18 feet.

v. Edwards, 37 L. J., Ecc. 89.
An application by either party to take evidence viva voce will be granted unless the party opposing the application shews sufficient reason why it should not. Edwards v. Hatton, 13 L. T. 253.

Case stated.]—Where a question is to be decided upon the principles of an ecclesiastical court, a court of equity will have a case stated for the opinion of civilians. Hurst v. Beach, 5 Madd. 356; 21 R. R. 304; followed in that respect. Sayre v. Cramp, 2 W. R. 438.

Costs.]—Although the judgment in the court below may be on all points reversed, a bistop, as respondent, will not be condemned in the costs of the proceedings either in the Court of Arches or in the Court of Appeal, if in instituting them he has acted simply in accordance with his duty to the public. Berney v. Norwich (Bishap), 36 L. J., Ecc. 10—P. C.

If the promoter in a criminal suit has been obliged to seek the assistance of the court in asserting a clear legal right which has been denied by the party cited, the latter will be condemned in costs. Jones v. Jelf, 8 L. T.

But, semble, otherwise, if party cited had at once acknowledged to promoter his error in point of law and his discontinuance of the illegal practice complained of. Ib.

Where a clergyman was charged with having officiated in an unconsecrated and unificensed building and without any authority from the bishop:—Held, that a misupprehension of the law, and the fact that other clergymen had acted in a similar way with impunity, were no grounds for his non-condemnation in costs. Kitson v. Drury, 11 Jur. (X.S.) 272.

In a litigation in the Ecclesiastical Court aparty intervenes and fails, but the decree of the court gives him his costs. An administration suit is then instituted; and upon the question at the hearing whether the costs of the intervener in the Ecclesiastical Court ought to be paid in priority to those of the administration suit:—Held, that they ought not, being in effect a charge on the estate. Major v. Major, 2 Drew. 281; 2 W. R. 382.

2. ECCLESIASTICAL OFFICERS,

Official Principals and Viear-Generals. —The official principal and viear-general of the bishop has jurisdiction within a district for which a commissary has been appointed (though for life), commissary is inhibited pending the bishop's visitation. Reg. v. Thougand, 12 A. & B. 583; 3 P. & D. 629; 9 J. J., & B. 121; 4 Jur.

The appointment of such a commissary does not make the district a peculiar; and the 23 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 2, does not apply in such a case. Ib.

Under an appointment by the bishop, P. was constituted chancellor and vicar-general in spirituals, and official principal of the episcopal and consistory court of Chichester, for life, with power of surrogating and substituting a fit person or persons in his stead, and of recalling or removing them with the consent of the bishop, and power was conferred upon him in the absence of the bishop from the consistory court, to proceed by himself or his substitute, in all causes, businesses, suits and complaints, spiritual and ecclesiastical, &c., and decide and finally determine the same (with certain exceptions not now material), nevertheless first consulting and having the consent of the bishop, if either party prayed the judgment of the bishop. The appointment also reserved to the bishop to examine and determine every cause in his proper person in the consistory court:—Held, that, although the official principal exercised powers delegated to him by the bishop, he was constituted an ordinary judge of the consistory court, and acted judicially quite independently of the bishop, and therefore that the bishop's being interested in a suit heard and decided by the official principal questions of law and fact are involved, the court was no ground for a prohibition, Medwin, Exparts, 1 El. & Bl. 609; 22 L. J., Q. B. 169; 17 Jur. 1178.

Registrar of Archdeacon's Court.]-A claim for fees of office, as the fees of the registrar of an archdeaconry court, to be valid, must be founded archiceaconry court, to be want, must be founded upon immemorial usage. Shephord v. Payne, 16 C. B. (x.s.) 182; 33 L. J. C. P. 158; 10 Jur. (x.s.) 540; 10 L. T. 193; 12 W. R. 584—Ex. Ch. The office of registrar of an archideaconry court, being a freehold office, with duties of a continuous and presumably perpetual character, and one whose existence is essential to the due exercise of the functions of the archdeacon, is an office to which fees may be annexed by immemorial usage. Ib.

The fact of such fees having been paid and received from 1727 down to 1862, is evidence from which the immemorial receipt of them ought to be presumed, if they could have had a legal origin : and the fact of their amount having from time to time been varied does not necessarily affect their validity. Ib.

The archdescon's visitation operating for the benefit of the parish at large, and of the churchwardens themselves, the performance of whose duties is facilitated by the service of the registrar, the fees payable to that officer are properly chargeable upon the churchwardens. 1b. But see Veley v. Perture, 39 L. J., Q. B. 195; L. R. 5 Q. B. 573; 22 L. T. 713; 18 W. R. 1024; aute, col. 1353.

Construing ss. 9 & 10 of 54 Geo. 3, c. 68, together, the acts intended by the latter section to be prohibited are those which are legally incident to the office of a proctor, not those which, though usually performed by him, are not of right incident to his office. And, therefore, a registrar of an ecclesiastical court, who, in cases where there was no testamentary contest, had prepared the document, and done the acts necessary for obtaining letters testamentary and probates of wills, and other similar matters, was held not to have thereby subjected himself to the penalty imposed by the 10th section, Stephenson v. Higginson, 3 H. L. Cas. 638.

On the trial of an action brought on this statute, evidence from ecclesiastical courts was tendered, to shew that it was enstomary for the registrar to do these acts, and to receive fees on account of doing them :-Held, that such evidence was properly admitted. Ib.

3. CONSISTORY COURT.

As to the Disposal of Alms. ]-It is doubtful whether the disposing to pious and charitable uses of the alms of the parishioners is the exercising of a civil right under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 19, so that a suit in a criminal form can be brought in a consistorial court to ascertain to whom such right belongs, Liddell v. Rainsford. 37 L. J., Ecc. 83.

Can order Proctor to Refund Money. |-- If money is improperly in the hands of a proctor, the consistory court may order him to refund it. Morris v. Gardner, 1 D. P. C. 524.

4. PUBLIC WORSHIP REGULATION ACT.

will hear two counsel on each side, and one counsel in reply. Clifton v. Ridsdale, 1 P. D. 316: 35 L. T. 432.

Jurisdiction of Judge.] - A representation under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, s. 9, having been in due course transmitted to the Archbishop of Canterbury by the Bishop of Rochester, the archbishop sent to the judge a requisition to hear the matter of the representation "at any place in London or Westmiuster, or within the diocese of Rochester, as you may deem fit." The judge gave due notice to the defendant that the case would be heard at Lambeth. Lambeth is in the province of Canterbury, but not in the diocese of Rochester. The defendant did not appear, and the case having been heard in his absence, judgment was pronounced against him :—Held, that all the proceedings before the judge were void, on the ground that the judge had no jurisdiction except by virtue of the requisition to him of the archbishop, and that, the archbishop having limited the place for that, the independent of the part of the rate of the aring, the judge had no power to hear the case outside the limits so prescribed. Hudson v. Tooth, 47 L. J., Q. B. 18; 3 Q. B. D. 46; 37 L. T. 462 : 26 W. R. 95.

Issue of Inhibition discretionary. 1-The issue of an inhibition pending appeal in ecclesiastical cases was a matter for the discretion of the court before the Public Worship Act, 1874, and the effect of that act is not to take away such discretionary power, but to give powers to the judge of first instance as to suspension of pro-Judge of first Instance as to suspension of pro-ceedings which did not previously exist. Midsalolo v. Clifton, 45 L. J., P. C. 12; 1 P. D. 383; 34 L. T. 515; 24 W. R. 1021.

Effect of |-The Public Worship Regulation Act deals only with matters of procedure, and does not in any respect enlarge the jurisdiction of the Court of Arches. Hudson v. Tooth, 2 P. D. 125; 35 L. T. 820.

Service of Representation, 1-A representation under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), s. 9, was sent to the bishop of the diocese on the 29th of August, 1876. The bishop received the representation on the 30th of August, and finding that the party complained of was the incumbent of a benefice in his patronage, forwarded it on the 15th of September to the archbishop of the province. On the 21st of October the archbishop transmitted a copy of the representation to the party complained of. The party complained of did not acknowledge the receipt of the copy of the representation so transmitted to him, and, though subsequently personally served with a duplicate copy of the representation, entered no appearance. Afterwards the archbishop required the judge to hear the matter of the representation :--Held, that the proceedings were void, and must be dismissed. by the judge, for the provision as to the time within which a copy of a representation should be transmitted to the party complained of was imperative, and had not been complied with, Howard v. Bodington, 2 P. D. 203.

Disqualification of Bishop to Act. | The action of the bishop under s. 9 of the Public Worship Counsel ]-In cases under the Public Worship Act, 1874, is a judicial action which he is dis-Regulation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), where qualified from performing if he is the patron of the living; and the word patron includes as well | of the county palatine sitting at Lincoln's Inn, a bishop who has the second turn as one who has the next presentation, each being interested in avoiding the benefice. Serjeant v. Dale, 46 L. J., Q. B. 781; 2 Q. B. D. 558; 37 L. T. 153.

Discretion of Bishop.]—Sect. 9 of the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, confers upon the bishop a general discretion as to taking steps to have a complaint, which has been sent in under s. 8, tried in the Ecclesiastical Court. Alleroft v. London (Bishop), [1891] A. C. 666; 65 L. T. 92; 55 J. P. 773—H. L. (E.)

Two representations were sent to the Bishop of London, one complaining that the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral had set up on a reredos in the cathedral figures which tended to encourage ideas and devotions of an unauthorised and superstitions kind, and were unlawful; the other repeating the former complaint, and going on to allege that the figures had in fact encouraged such ideas and devotions as above mentioned. The bishop, in reply to the first representation, stated that, having considered the whole circumstances of the case, he was of opinion that proceedings should not be taken; and gave as his reasons that the main question of principle had been already decided in Phillpotts v. Boyd (L. R. 6 P. C. 435), between which and the present case there were no differences of importance; that litigation in such matters. even where necessary to decide an important point, is a great evil, causing irritation and party strife, and that in the present case it would cause more mischief than benefit to the Church at large. To the second representation he replied that the questions in the second case were sub-stantially identical with those in the first, which was still sub judice. The complainants applied in both eases for a mandamus to compel the bishop to direct proceedings to be taken :-Held, that no grounds were shown for issuing a mandamus. Ib.

Judge of Provincial Chancery of York -Request to hear Matter at Westminster. ]-A representation having been made against a clerk, rector of a parish within the county palatine of Lancaster, in the province of York, under the Public Worship Act, 1874, for offences against s. 8 of that act committed in the parish church, the bishop of the diocese sent the matter to the Archbishop of York, who sent a requisition to Lord Penzance—the judge appointed under the act, who had since the passing of the act become official principal of the chancery court of York-requiring him to hear and determine the matter of the representation at any place in London or Westminster, or within the province of York or diocese of Manchester, as he might deem fit. The judge heard it at Westminster, and there pronounced judgment, and issued a practices complained of. The elerk having disobeyed the monition, the judge, sitting at Westminster, issued an inhibition inhibiting the clerk, for three months and thereafter until relaxation, from performing any service of the church within the diocese, and on his persisting in his disobedience pronounced him contumacious and issued a significavit under 53 Geo. 3. c. 127, s. 1. The tenor of the significavit was sent by mittimus from the Petty Bag Office to the chancellor of the county palatine of Lancaster.

a writ de contumace capiendo was issued, under which the clerk was arrested by the sheriff of Lancashire, and lodged in Lancaster Gaol. On a motion for a habeas corpus :-Held, that the matter so heard before the judge, as official principal of the chancery court of York, was a cause cognisable in an ecclesiastical court within the meaning of 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 1, and that the judge had power to pronounce the contumacy and issue the significavit under that act. That the county palatine being one of the exempt jurisdictions mentioned in 5 Eliz. c. 23, s. 11. the procedure required by that section as to the mittimus and the issue of the writ de contumace capiendo was applicable and was duly followed. That the mittimus was not one of the writs referred to in Ord. II. r. 8, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, and was properly tested as in the name of the Queen by the Master of the Rolls. That under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), s. 9, the judge had power not merely to "hear" but also to hear and determine the matter, and to do all the acts which he did at Westminster. That all the proceedings were regular and there was no ground for a habeas corpus. Green, In re, or Green v. Penzance (Lord), 51 L. J., Q. B. 25; 6 App. Cas. 657; 45 L. T. 353; 30 W. R. 218; 46 J. P. 115—H. L. (E.)

Monition—Inhibition.]—A monition, precisely following a judgment pronounced by the judge under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, admonished a clerk to abstain for the future when officiating in his church from doing each of certain specified acts, and (amongst them) from wearing the vestments known as an alb. a chasuble, and a biretta; and from causing to be formed a procession at the commencement of morning service; and also "from all practices, acts, matters and things of the same or a like nature to those hereinbefore particularly set forth or any of them, or from unlawfully permitting the same or any of them." A subsequent inhibition, after reciting the monition and the disobedience of the clerk thereto in regard to several other matters, recited his disobedience in permitting his curate to wear a vestment known as a biretta and a vestment known as a stole. and also in permitting his curate to form a procession between morning prayer and the communion service, and for such his disobedience inhibited the clerk from performing services for three months and until relaxation. The clerk having applied for a writ of prohibition :-Held, that the judge had jurisdiction (subject to correction on appeal) to insert the alia similia clause in the monition. And that under s. 13 of the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, the judge had jurisdiction to determine whether the wearing of a stole, and the forming a procession monition ordering the clerk to abstain from the between morning prayer and the communion service, were practices, acts, matters and things of the same or a like nature to those particularly set forth in the monition; and that if he had determined that question wrongly it might be the subject of appeal-if an appeal lies-but could not afford any ground for prohibition. And that, even if the wearing of a stole and the forming a procession between morning prayer and the communion service were not breaches of e chancellor the monition, yet, as it appeared on the face of In accord- the inhibition that the clerk had committed ance with an order made by the Vice-Chancellor several other acts of disobedience, any one of which would have justified an inhibition for the future from the commission of unlawful acts full period, there was no excess of jurisdiction and no ground for prohibition. Enraght v. Penzance (Lurd), 51 L. J., Q. B. 506; 7 App. Cas. 240; 46 L. T. 779; 30 W. R. 753; 46 J. P. 644— H. L. (E.)

Substitution of succeeding Churchwarden as Promoter. -The object of the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), is to give an easy mode of compelling obedience to the law; but proceedings under that act are not to be deemed to be a criminal suit within the meaning of the Church Discipline Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 86). No power is given to the court by the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, to substitute succeeding churchwardens for a churchwarden who has instituted a snit under s. 8 of the act for acts committed during the time that he was churchwarden, but has ceased to be so before the termination of the suit, and in such a case the speceeding churchwardens have no interest in the matter which entitles them to intervene in the suit. Harris v. Perkins, 51 L. J., P. C. 83; 7 P. D. 161; 47 L. T. 69-P. C.

Avoidance of Benefice. ]-G., a beneficed clerk, was admonished in a suit to discoutinue certain illegal practices, and on refusing was inhibited from performing divine service within the diocese. For disobedience his contempt was signified, and G. was imprisoned under warrant in pursuance of 53 Geo. 3, c. 127. G. having remained in prison for three years, whereupon his benefice became void under the Public Worship Regulation Act, s. 13:—Held, that, as the services inhibited ceased to operate when the incumbency ceased, G. had substantially obeyed the order of the court and satisfied his contempt, and was entitled under 53 Geo, 3, c. 127, to his order of discharge, Denn v. Green, 8 P. D. 79; 46 J. P. 742

5. MONITION.

Issuing.]—Where the court is satisfied that an ecclesiastical offence which has been proved will not be repeated, it is not bound to issue a monition in respect of such offence. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop), 62 L. J., P. C. 1; [1892] A. C. 644; 67 L. T. 128; 56 J. P. 725.

Interest of Promoters should appear on. ]-When a monition issued by the Commissary-General of the diocese of Canterbury to an incumbent and churchwardens, ordering them to remove certain ornaments from their church unless they should show cause to the contrary, did not disclose on the face of it any interest in the suit on the part of the promovent, and such defect was insisted upon by the churchwardens in showing cause against the same :- Held, that the judge of the Court of Arches was right in directing that the suit should be dismissed with costs as against the churchwardens. Fagg v. Lee, 48 L. J., Ecc. 1; L. R. 6 P. C. 88; 30 L. T. 801; 22 W. R. 902.

Such a suit is a civil suit, and is not open to every one, even with the consent of the ordinary, but only to those who have an interest in it. Ib.

may be attached to a definitive sentence; and, if the monition be disobeyed, the clerk, upon motion and without a fresh suit, may be condemned to a suspension ab officio et beneficio : and such a proceeding is not in contravention of am uses a proceeding is not in contravention of the Church Discipline Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 84):— So held, by Lord Coleridge, C.J., James and Thesiger, L.J.; Brett and Cotton, L.J.J., dis-senting. Martin v. Mackonochie, 49 L. J., Q. B. 9; 4 Q. B. D. 697; 40 L. T. 680-C. A. Affirmed, 50 L. J., Q. B. 611; 6 App. Cas. 424; 44 L. T. 479; 29 W. R. 633; 45 J. P. 584—H. L. (E.) See also Cambe v. Edwards, 3 P. D. 103; 39

L. T. 295, coram Lord Penzance, Dean of Arches.

Disobedience to.]—Order of suspension ab officio et a beneficio decreed against the perpetual curate of a chapel of case to a parish church, for persistent contempt in disobeying a monition, issued to enforce obedience to an order in council made in an ecclesiastical canse, declaring illegal and prohibiting the practice of certain rites and ceremonics, and the use of certain vestments, in the services of the church. Hebbert v. Purchas, L. B. 4 P. C. 301.

- Discretion of Court as to its Sentences. The articles, exhibited in a suit by letters of request under the Church Discipline Act, charged that the respondent, the incumbent of a parish church, had, within two years of the institution of the suit, whilst officiating in the performance of divine service in his parish church, committed certain offences in matters of ritual, the same being repetitions of offences from which he had been admonished to abstain by monitions issued in previous suits, and prayed that the respondent should be deprived ab officio et beneficio. At the time of the hearing of the snit, a decree of suspension pronounced in one of the previous suits above mentioned, and suspending the respondent ab officio et beneficio, was in force and unrelaxed, but no future proceedings to enforce such sentence had been taken. The court, though holding the articles proved, refused in its discretion to pronounce a sentence of deprivation, Martin v. Machonochie (third snit), 6 P. D. 87.

Compelling Obedience by Significavit in Chancery, ]-A suit having been brought against a churchwarden for removing earth and bones from a churchyard to a field on his own property. he was ordered to restore them. The order not being complied with, and a monition having issued, an objection was filed thereto, on the ground that the field was no longer in his possession. Having heard the argament, the court pronounced him contumacious and in contempt, and announced its intention to signify the same to the Court of Chancery, but withheld the processes for six days with the expectation that he would comply with the order. Adlam v. Coul-thurst, 37 L. J., Eec. 3; L. R. 2 Ecc. 30; 17 L. T. 226.

De Contumace Capiendo. ]-After the hearing of the matter of a representation in which the vicar of a parish was the party complained of, a monition issued admonishing the vicar to abstain from certain unlawful ceremonies and observances during the performance of divine service Attached to Definitive Sentence.]—In a criminal suit against a clerk instituted in an acclesiastical court, a monition to abstain in under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, inhibiting him for the term of three months from | on payment of costs to be discharged of process performing divine service within the diocese. Afterwards, and, whilst the inhibition was still in force, the complainants applied to the court on affidavits, which alleged that since the inhibition the vicar had performed divine service in the church, and had there continued the ceremonies and observances from which he had been admonished to abstain, and had also obstructed the curate appointed by the bishop of the diocese from entering the church, and prayed that the vicar should be pronounced contumacious. Thereupon the vicar was pronounced by the court to be contumacious; and, his contempt having been signified to the Queen in chancery, he was arrested and imprisoned under a writ de contumace capiendo. Shortly after the vicar had been thus arrested, divine service was, without any opposition being offered, performed in the church by the curate appointed by the bishop, and the complainants applied to the court on motion that the vicar should be released. The court that the vicar should be released. The court ordered that the vicar should be forthwith released without previous payment of the costs of his contempt, but without prejudice to any other remedy for such costs; and that such costs should be recoverable as costs in the cause. Hudson v. Tooth, 2 P. D. 125; 35 the cause. L. T. 820.

Lasting Effect of Monition - Discretion to refuse to enforce Monition.]—Monitions in a criminal suit under the Church Discipline Act against a clerk in orders, though general in terms and admonishing the defendant to abstain for the future from the like offences to those the court at the hearing pronounced him to have committed, are not to be regarded as forbidding him, under pain of being pronounced in contempt, to resort at any time during his life to the practices from which he has been so admonished to abstain. Hakes v. Cox. [1892] P. 110. Having regard to the time (four and a half years) which had clapsed since the expiration of a sentence of suspension founded upon disobedience to a monition, an application to enforce obedience to the monition was refused. Ib.

6. WRITS DE EXCOMMUNICATO CAPIENDO AND DE CONTUMACE CAPIENDO.

a. De Excommunicato,

Discontinuance. ]—By statute 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, excommunication is now discontinued except for offences of ecclesiastical cognisance. Rex v. Burrard, 1 P. W. 435.

Absolve, Writ to.]—Where the spiritual court has excommunicated a party for a cause for which it has no authority to do so, he has a right to some writ to absolve him ; but notice must be given to the complainant in a spiritual court of the application for such writ. Boraine's Case, 16 Ves. 346. See 14 R. R. 762, n.

Demurrer. - A demurrer because plaintiff excommunicated, overruled. Plumpton v. Headlam, Brookes v. --, Toth. 74.

Answer.]—After a plea of excommunication, yet returnable, the Court of Chancery would plaintiff obtained letters of absolution, and produced them; defendant ordered to answer, and of custody. Ib.

of contempt which had issued against them. Amers v. Legg, Cho. Ca. Ch. 164.

The defendant must answer the bill though excommunicated, Tichborne v. Edmonds, Toth.

Where two executors were plaintiffs and one was excommunicated, it was held that defendant must answer the other; that excommunication is a good plea to an executor or administrator, though he sue in autre droit. Tomes v. Vaughan, Toth. 74. Vide Co. Lit. 133, b.; 4 Abr. 36. Aliter, as to the proclam ami, or guardine of an infant. Wy. Pr. Reg. 327; Curs. Can. 185.

Supersedeas.]-Executrix in custody under a writ de excommunicato capiendo, for not appearing to a citation by a creditor to exhibit an inventory, moved for a supersedeas disputing the debt upon equitable grounds; motion refused.

Rex v. Blatch, 5 Ves. 113.

Supersedeas to a writ de excommunicato capiendo denied, though the significavit was general and uncertain, and said that the method was to proceed by habeas corpus; but, an appeal being brought, a supersedcas was granted. Rew v. Sneller, 1 Vern. 24,

Habeas Corpus.]—One that had been a prisoner in Newgate for debt, but since removed to the Fleet, is excommunicated; the Court of Chancery will not direct the cursitor to make out a writ of excommunicato capiendo to the warden of the Fleet, but the writ may be directed to the sheriff, who may return a non est inventus, and on the return the King's Bench may grant a habeas corpus, and thereupon charge him with an excommunicate capiendo. Strudwicke's Cuse, 3 P. Wms. 53. S. C.; Anon., Mos. 365.

Motion to Supersede.]—Motion to supersede a writ de excommunicato capiendo; the court refused to interfere, and ordered the party applying to pay the taxed costs of the applica-tion. Cheveley, Ex parte, Dick. 473.

Motion to supersede a writ of excommunicato capiendo, first, for want of addition; secondly, because not said the defendant was commorant in the diocese. Court allowed both the exceptions, but inclined to think that, after the writhhad been issued out of Court of Chancery, and then brought into B. R., and there delivered to the sheriff, but not yet actually returned to B. R., Court of Chancery, on a plain error appearing, may supersede or quash it. Rex v. Burrard, 1 P. Wms. 435.

Quashing.]-On motion to quash the writ of significavit, because the cause of excommunication was not set forth, and for divers other eauses, it was held sufficient to warrant the writ of excommunicato capicudo, Trebec v. Keith. 2 Atk. 498.

The court cannot do anything after the return of the writ excommunicato capiendo is out, the King's Bench having the recognisance; for they can compel the sheriff to return it, and the application to quash it must be there. Little, Ex parte, 3 Atk. 479.

If the writ had issued in the vacation, and not

b. De Contumace.

When can be issued.]—It was not necessary at the time of the excommunication; it was sufficient if he was there at the time of the citation. Rev v. Payton, 7 Term Rep. 153; 4 R. R.

Concurrent.]—It is competent to the Court of Chancery to issue several concurrent writs de contumace capiendo. Rex v. Blake, 2 N. & M. 312: 4 B. & Ad. 355.

A contumace capicado may be returnable on or after the essoign day of the term. Ib.

Significavit - Error in.] -A defendant committed by an ecclesiastical judge of appeal for contumacy in not paying costs, and the signifieavit only describing the suit to be "a certain cause of appeal and complaint of nullity," without showing that the defendant was committed for a cause within the jurisdiction of the spiritual judge, was entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus. Rrx v. Dugger, 1 D. & R. 460; 5 B. & Ald. 791; 24 R. R. 549.

Where a writ de contumace capiendo expressed "that the defendant had been pronounced guilty of contunacy and contempt of the law and jurisdiction ecclesiastical, in not having obeyed a decree made upon him to perform the usual penance in the parish church of St. M. N., in a certain cause of defamation"; and it appeared that, at the time the sentence was pronounced, a schedule of penance was made out, but which, by the practice of the ecclesiastical court, could not be delivered to the defendant until he paid the costs of the suit :-Held, that he ought to have had the decree exhibited to him in its more perfect form, before he could be considered as being in contempt, especially as the costs were not mentioned in the significavit, and that he was consequently entitled to be discharged. Rex v. Maby, 3 D. & R. 570; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 34.

Proper Person to Issue. |- The surrogate of the bishop's official principal is not the proper party to signify the contumacy of a defendant in a suit before him, as judge of the Consistory Court; and this both before and after 53 Geo. 3, c. 127; and, where a parson is taken under a contumace capiendo issued upon such certificate, the court will discharge him out of enstedy. Reg. v. Jones, 10 A. & E. 576.

The return to a habeas corpus set out a writ de contumace capiendo, reciting the significavit of "H. J., &c., official principal, &c., which Place, in the borough of L., a parishioner and inhabitant of the parish of St. M., in the borough of L., in the county of L., had been duly pronounced guilty of contumacy, in not obeying the lawful commands to pay to, &c., the church-wardens of the parish of St. M., 21. 5s., rated and assessed upon him, pursuant to a monition duly issued under the seal of the Arches Court. and duly and personally served on him, by not paying, &c., pursuant to the monition, in a cause or business of subtraction of church-rate, depending, &c., and the proceedings wherein were carried on in pain of the contumacy of W. B., duly cited to appear in the cause, with the usual intimation, but in nowise appearing, nor would be submit to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction":-Held, first, that the significavit, that the defendant was contumacious, was properly issued by the official principal of the Arches. Reg. v. Baines, 4 P. & D. 362; 12 A. & E. 210; 10 L. J., Q. B. 34; 5 Jur. 387. Held, secondly, that, although the defendant had not appeared in the ecclesiastical court, the Queen's Bench would not discharge him on habeas corpus; for, if it was the practice of the eeclesiastical court to give judgment against an absent party, there was nothing to show such practice was lilegal; and, if the practice was not so, the remedy of the party was by appeal. Ih.

Quere, whether the defendant was correctly described in the writ according to 53 Geo. 3, e. 127, schedule B; but held, that the misdescription could not be taken advantage of upon motion to discharge the defendant, on a return setting out the writ, and on an affidavit verifying a copy of the writ, as the proper course would have been to move to set aside the writ itself for irregularity. Ib.

Held, also, that an endorsement on the writ. that it had been delivered of record to the sheriff of L., was sufficient within 5 Eliz. c. 23, s. 2. Ib.

Sentence partly Good and partly Bad. ]-Where a writ de contumace capiendo set out the sentence of the spiritual court, which directed certain costs to be paid by the defendant, the court refused to quash the writ for an alleged invalidity in the sentence as to the other matters, that part of it being good which awarded costs against the defendant, who was therefore in conagainst the description, who was interested in contempt for the nonpayment of them. Kington v. Huck, 3 N. & P. 3; 7 A. & E. 708; 1 W. W. & H. 1; 7 L. J., Q. B. 59; 2 Jur. 14.

Committal of Trustee upon. ]-A. spiritual judge has no jurisdiction over a trustee appointed by a testator in his will; therefore, where a trustee was committed upon a writ de contumace capiendo, for not exhibiting an inventory and account of the goods of a testator, the court ordered him to be discharged. Rew v. Jenkins, 3 D. & R. 41. S. C., nom. Jenkins, Ex parte, 1 B. & C. 655.

Disobedience to Order of Suspension. ]-The power to issue a writ de contumace capiendo under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, for disobedience of an order of the Ecclesiastical Court, is not confined to cases where obedience to the order remains possible. A clerk in orders having disobeyed a monition issued in a suit instituted against him in the Eeelesiastical Court under the Church Discipline Act, 1840, a suspension was published and served upon him whereby he was suspended from his clerical office for a period of six months. During such period he officiated in his church, notwithstanding the suspension, and a significavit in respect of such disobedience issued against him. After the expiration of the six months, a writ de contumace capiendo was issued against him under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 1, upon which he was arrested :- Held, that the writ was lawfully issued. Cox, Ex parte, 57 L. J., Q. B. 98; 20 Q. B. D. 1; 58 L. T. 323; 36 W. R. 209; 52 J. P. 484-C. A.

Form of Writ. - The writ de contumaceeapiendo was improperly indorsed "The Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874. — Held, that this irregularity did not render the imprisonment illegal. Dean v. Green (8 P. D. 79) followed. Con, Exp parte, 56 L. J., Q. B. 532; 19 Q. B. D. 307.

Where it appeared on the face of a writ of capies cum proclamatione, that a whole term impedit, against a bishop, at the suit of W., who had intervened between its teste and the term claimed to be instituted to a living within the in which the writt de contumnac capiendo was diocese of which he was himself the patron. returnable, the court quashed the writ of capias as being a discontinuance on the face of it. Reg. v. Ricketts, 1 P. & D. 150; 8 A. & E. 951; 1 W. W. & H. 885; 8 L. J., Q. B. 44; 2 Jur. 1039.

Where a party in custody under writs of contumace capiendo applied for a rule to show cause why they should not be set aside for irregularity, with costs; and, after the rule obtained, also applied to the chancellor, who decided that one of them was bad, and ordered the others to stand over for argument, the court, on showing cause, cnlarged the rule, with a stay of proceedings. Rew v. Richetts, 1 H. & W. 64.

- To whom Addressed. ]-The writ de contumace must be addressed to the sheriff of the county of which the party contumacious is described in the significant; and, if addressed to the shoriff of a different county, the court will quash the writ. Rew v. Richetts, 1 N. & P. 680; 6 A. & E. 537; W. W. & D. 297; 6 L. J., K. B.

A writ directed to the sheriff of one county. and describing the defendant "heretofore and now" of another county, may be set aside for irregularity after the arrest has taken place. Rev v. Hewitt, 1 N. & P. 689; W. W. & D. 299; 5 D. P. C. 646; 6 A. & E. 547; 6 L. J., K. B. 235; 1 Jur. 721.

An insufficient writ may be quashed, on motion before the return day; and, if the defendant has been arrested on it, it is not necessary to bring him into court by habeas corpus. Ib.

- Significavit.] -- A writ, reciting a significavit by two judges, of disobedience to the commands of three judges, is bad, and the court will quash it on motion. Rew v. Ricketts, 1 N. & P. 685; 6 A. & E. 587; W. W. & D. 297; 6 L. J., K. B. 172. S. P., Rew v. Blake, 2 B. & Ad. 139.

It is not necessary that the significavit of contempt from the spiritual court should purport to be issued within ten days of the judgment of contempt. Reg. v. Thorogood, 12 A. & E. 183; 3 P. & D. 629; 9 L. J., Q. B. 211; 4 Jur. 937.

A significavit is not vitiated by the introduction of merely superfluous words not contained in the statutable form, viz. by the addition of the words "as by our citation he was required to appear," after the statement that the party had been pronounced in contempt. Ib.

The writ need not give the defendant any addition where he is imprisoned under it for contempt in not appearing to a citation, such imprisonment not being a pain or forfeiture within 5 Eliz, c. 23, s. 13. Ib.

A significavit of the sentence of an ecclesiastical court having been set aside by the Court of Chancery, for an ambiguity appearing in the sentence, and no subsequent proceedings having been taken, and there appearing no intention to proceed, the court refused a prohibition applied for, on the ground that no good significavit could issue on such a defective sentence. Bodenham v. Richetts, 2 H. & W. 132.

Court of Common Pleas, in an action of quare -H. L. (E.)

Whilst this action was proceeding, W. instituted a suit of duplex querela in the Arches Court of Canterbury, calling upon the bishop to show cause why W. should not be instituted to the living. The court, on motion on behalf of the bishop, directed that, if W. did not elect to abandon the action of quare impedit within ten days, the suit of duplex querela should stand dismissed, Walsh v. Lincoln (Bishop), L. R. 4 Ecc. 242.

Judgment. ]-In a quare impedit against A. and B., tenants in common of an advowson, being assignees of co-parceners, who did not agree to present, A. suffered judgment by default, and B. died pending the writ. This judgment is a bar to another quare impedit brought by A. and C. the representatives of B., to recover the same presentation; but it is not a bar to C.'s right to recover on the next avoidance in his turn. Barker v. London (Bishop), 1 H. Bl. 412, n.; Willes, 659; 2 R. R. 799.

Power of Judge to Amend. |- In quare impedit by the Crown upon a forfeiture by simony between the patron in fec, the grantee of the turn and the incumbent, a judge at chambers has authority to allow an amendment, by adding counts varying the terms and the parties to the simoniacal contract. Rew v. York (Archbishop), 3 N. & M. 453; 1 A. & E. 394.

Costs. ]-Though a defendant had judgment on denurrer in quare impedit, he was not cutilled to costs under 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 2. Thrale v. London (Bishop), 1 H. Bl. 530; Wadowes v. Carlisle, 3 Bing. 404; 11 Moore, 269. A bishop who falls upon a demurrer may be exempted from costs by certificate of the court.

Edwards v. Exeter (Bishop), 6 Bing. (N.C.) 146; 7 Scott, 679; 9 L. J., C. P., 87; 3 Jur. 1000. Tenants in common of an advowson, one being a Protestant, the other a Roman Catholic, the church being vacant, the former presented alone; the ordinary refused to admit the clerk so-presented, on the ground that the sole right of presentation was not in the Protestant co-patron : and after a lanse collated :- Held, that this was, a proper case for a certificate under 4 & 5 Will, 4, c. 39, to exempt the bishop from costs. # S PROHIBITION

a. Generally.

What.] - Prohibition is the common law proceeding by which any of the superior temporal. courts at Westminster (not the Queen's Bench only) are enabled to restrain, among others, the courts ecclesiastical from acting in excess of their jurisdiction : but it does not enable the temporal. court to act as a court of appeal from the court coclesiastical so as to correct any irregularity, or even injustice, which may have been done by the Ecclesiastical Court, if done in the 7. Prohibition to the spiritual coart lies only where that court is proceeding in a matter which is clearly out of its jurisdiction, or in a manner that is manifestly contrary to the general principles of justice. Story, Ex parte, 12 C, B, 767; 22 L, J., C, P, 75; 1 W, R, 38. S, P, and S, C, 8 Ex, 195; 22 L, J, Ex, 83.

The Archbishop of Canterbury required the judge to hear the matters of a representation, under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, against a clergyman "at any place in London or Westminster, or within the diocese of Rochester, as you may think fit." The judge, having heard the case at Lambeth Palace (which is in neither London nor Westminster nor the diocese of Rochester) gave judgment against the clergyman who did not appear. A monition was issued against the clergyman, who disobeyed it and was pronounced guilty of contempt and imprisoned : -Held, that a prohibition must issue, for that the judge had no power to hear the case at any place outside the limits defined, and that, by hearing it at Lambeth, he had exceeded his jurisdiction, and the whole proceedings were on that account void and coram non judice. Hudson v. Touth, 47 L. J., Q. B. 18; 3 Q. B. D. 46; 37 L. T. 462; 26 W. R. 95.

A prohibition to an ecclesiastical court, in a cause which is clearly of ecclesiastical cognisance, does not lie where there has been an stregglarity in the practice. Smyth, Exp parte, 5 N. & M. 145; 3 A. & E. 719; 1 H. & W. 417. S. P., Jolly v. Baines, 12 A. & E. 201; 4 P. & D. 224; 9 L. J., Q. B. 349; 5 Jur. 22.

Where the matter is within the jurisdiction of an ecclesiastical court, the court will not interfere by prohibition to prevent an adjudication upon it. Hallack v. Cambridge University, 1 G. & D. 100; 9 D. P. C. 583; 1 Q. B. 593; 10 L. J., Q. B. 206; 6 Jur. 10.

some that that jurisdiction will be improperly exercised, and therefore will not prohibit the ecclesiastical court from proceeding to judgment, although the faculty prayed for is larger than that court has power to grant. Ib.

Refusal to Bury Corpse. -On the 20th April, 1843, a clerk was cited to appear and answer in the spiritual court, for refusing a second time on the 26th May, 1841, to bury a corpse after due notice, the first whereof occurred on or about 17th February, 1840. Upon motion for a prohibition:—Held, that the decision of the ecclesiastical court, that there were distinct offences, involved only a question of ecclesiastical cognisance as to the construction, and not simply a misconstruction of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 20; and that, therefore, the proper remedy was by appeal to a higher ecclesiastical court, and not by prohibition. Titchmarsh v. Chapman, 1 D. & L. 732; 13 L. J., Q. B. 59; 8 Jur. 316.

- Nonpayment of Church-rate. ]-In a suit by churchwardens, against F., for nonpayment of church-rate, a libel, answer and reply were put in, and certain articles were exhibited by the churchwardens with and in support of the reply. The articles were rejected in the Consistory Court, but on appeal to the Arches Court they were admitted. F. then appealed to the privy council, and his appeal was referred to the judi-cial committee. While the appeal was depending, but before any proceedings had been taken in that court, F. moved for a prohibition, on the ground that the rate was bad on account of its being retrospective, and it appeared to be so from facts stated on the pleadings :- Held, that a prohibition could not be granted on this ground. the cause being before a court, the jurisdiction of which was not denicd, no erroneous proceeding having been taken there, and the court refusing to presume that the judicial committee would act incorrectly. Chesterton v. Furlar, 7 A. & E. 713; 3 N. & P. 15; 1 W. W. & H. 19; 7 L. J., O. B. 66: 2 Jur. 394.

A declaration, in prohibition, stated that the plaintiff having been libelled in the spiritual court for nonpayment of a church-rate, had pleaded in his defensive allegation that the rate, though good on the face of it, was asked for and intended to be applied to the payment of autecedent debts, and that the court had admitted to proof a responsive allegation, which alleged that the churchwardens of a prior year had neces-sarily incurred debts, in consequence of the parish refusing to make a rate, and that the retrospective rate subsequently became necessary, in order to discharge the said debts :- Held. that, whether the rate, being good in form, was or was not vitiated by any design to apply it retrospectively, and whether the rate, under the circumstances, was or was not bad, it being retrospective, the suit itself was a matter of ecclesiastical cognisance, and the objection to the rate was such as the ecclesiastical court was able to give effect to, if valid; and that it was to be presumed, that it would correctly administer the law; and that therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to a prohibition. Griffin v. Ellis, 3 P. & D.

Where a plaintiff declared, in prohibition, that Particular Matters-Grant of Faculty. ]-The he had been libelled by the defendant in a spirigrant of a faculty to appropriate certain parts of tual court, for nonpayment of a church-rate, a parish church is within the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court; and the court will not pre- grounds, one of which was as to the construction of an act of parliament, and averred that the exceptions were not the subject of ecclesiastical cognisance, and theupou prayed for a writ of prohibition:—Held, that he had shewn no ground for prohibition, as it did not appear that the court was proceeding to decide on the act of parliament, or that it would decide contrary to the common law. Hall v. Maule, 3 N. & P. 459; 7 A. & E. 721; 1 W. W. & H. 399; 7 L. J., O. B. 210: 2 Jur. 887.

- Payment of Legacy. ]-If a spiritual court go about to compel an executor to pay a v. Penzaece (Lord), 51 L. J., Q. B. 506; 7 Applegacy without a security to refund, a prohibition Cas. 240; 46 L. - Lease of Tithes. ]-In a sait for subtraction of tithes, in the spiritual court, by an impropriator, the defendant's personal answer stated a lease of them by the plaintiff to a third party, by whom they were demanded, and also that they belonged to the vicar, and not to the plaintiff. The defendant also put in a responsive allegation, that, by immemorial usage, custom, and prescription, the titles were deemed small or vicarial, and as such due to the vicar and not to the plaintiff; the plaintiff's personal answer denied the usage, and the judge assigned a day to hear on the sufficiency of the plaintiff's answer, and term probatory to the defendant :— Held, that at this stage of the cause there was no issue on the lease; that the only matter in issue, viz. the immemorial right of the viear, was properly cognisable by the spiritual court; and that there was no ground of prohibition. Beauchamp (Earl) v. Turner, 10 A. & E. 218; 2 declare in prohibition, for the more solemn P. & D. 496; 8 L. J., Q. B. 252.

— Custom.]—A prohibition lies to an ecclesi-astical court, where the question of custom or no custom is distinctly raised on the face of the libel and answer. Rhodes v. Oliver, 2 H. & W. 38.

Where a custom for a church-rate is pleaded in the Ecclesiastical Court, and the plea admitted, they may proceed to try the custom; but, if denied, a prohibition lies. Dunn v. Coates, 1 Atk.

Under s. 9 of the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, it appearing after sentence that the bishop was disqualified from acting :-Held, that prohibition might be granted after sentence where the sentence had not been fully executed, and the applicant had neither acquiesced in the jurisdiction of the court nor done anything to estop himself from complaining of it. Serjeant v. Dale, 46 L. J., Q. B. 781; 2 Q. B. D. 558; 37 L. T. 153.

It does not lie after sentence, unless it appears by the sentence that the Ecclesiastical Court has pronounced on matters cognisable at common law, although there are several articles contained in the libel, some of which are so cognisable. Hart v. Mursh, 1 N. & P. 62; 5 A. & E. 591; 5

D. P. C. 424; 2 H. & W. 341; 6 L. J., K. B. 9. Where the spiritual court incidentally determines any matter of common law cognisance, such as the construction of an act of parliament, otherwise than the common law requires, prohibition lies after sentence, although the objection does not appear upon the face of the libel, but is collected from the whole of the proceedings below. Gould v. Gapper, 5 East, 345; 1 Smith, 528; 7 R. R. 766.

After sentence in the Ecclesiastical Court in a matter of tithe, where the question turned upon the construction of an act of parliament, upon a doubt raised whether that court had not misconstrued the act, the court directed the plaintiff to adjudication of the question. Gare v. Gapper, 3 East, 472. S. P., White v. Steele, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 383 ; 5 L. T. 449.

Appeal no Bar. ]-An appeal from the consistory court to the Court of Arches is no bar to an application for a prohibition. White v. Steele, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 383; 31 L. J., C. P. 265; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1177; 6 L. T. 686.

Semble, the temporal court, proceeding in prohibition, is not bound by a decision of even the highest court of appeal in ecclesiastical committee of the privy council, if it exceeded its jurisdiction; but it could not issue for that which is a subject of appeal. Smyth, Ex parte, 2 C. M. & R. 748: 1 Tyrw. & G. 222; 1 Gale, 274; 5 L. J., Ex. 33.

c. Practice and Pleading.

Motion.]-A prohibition to the Ecclesiastical Court cannot be granted upon petition, but by motion and a proper suggestion it may. Hill v. Turner, 1 Atk. 516.

Application.]-A prohibition will issue out of chancery, when the common law courts are not After Sentence. Prohibition lies after sitting upon an ex parte application to restrain sentence, if the Ecclesiastical Court has not a spiritual court from trying a claim by prescription to pews in a parish church. Bateman, Ex parte and In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 383; L. R. 9 Eq. 660; 22 L. T. 60; 18 W. B. 425.

Affidavits in Support.]—Affidavits in support of an application for a prohibition must be entitled simply in the court, and not in any cause. Exams, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 410; 12 L. J., Q. B. 68; 7 Jur. 281.

Where it was objected to affidavits in answer to a rule nisi for a prohibition that they were entitled "In the Queen's Bench, between M. A. B., plaintiff, and W. P., defendant, in prohibition," and not in the Queen's Bench only, the court allowed them to be read. Breedon v. Capp, 9 Jur, 781.

Rule nisi for-Enlargement of . - A party heing libelled in the spiritual court for non-payment of a church-rate, made in pursuance of a resolution of the vestry, objected to the libel, because it stated a notice to have been given, which was defective, and he obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition; afterwards, the notice really given, which was good, and which had been lost, was discovered, and was submitted to the court, on shewing cause, with an affidavit, that, by the practice of the Ecclesiastical Court, leave would be given to amend the libel by an additional article, setting out the real notice :- Held, that the rule nisi for a prohibition might be enlarged. to give opportunity for such amendment. Blunt v. Harwood, 8 A. & E. 610; 3 N. & P. 577; 7 L. J., M. C. 107.

Discharged. -- Where a rule nisi for a prohibition to an inferior court has been discharged, the court will not allow the motion to be renewed, upon affidavits stating matter not before presented to the court, but existing at the time of the original application. Bodenham v. Ricketts, 6 N. & M. 537.

Pleading.]-Pleading an issuable plea to articles in the spiritual court is no answer to a prohibition, if the spiritual judge has no jurisdiction over the matter of which he has taken cognisance. Williams, Exparte, 6 D. & R. 373; 4 B. & C. 313; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 221.

A declaration in prohibition alleged that a question had been raised, and left for trial, in a suit in the spiritual court, whether A. was or was not a parish; and shewed, by reciting the pleadings in the spiritual court, that the question was a material question in the suit there. The pleas to the declaration were merely simple traverses of other allegations in the declaration, and left unanswered the allegation that the question of parish or no parish had been raised and left for trial in the spiritual court :- Held. that the pleas were no answer to the declaration. because the question whether A. was or was not a parish is a question not triable by the spiritual court; and, therefore, the allegation that such question had been raised and left for trial in the spiritual court, ought to have been either answered or depied by the pleas. Rutland (Duke) v. Bagshaw, 14 Q. R. 869; 19 L. J., Q. B. 234; 14 Jur. 715.

Costs.]-The 1 Will. 4, c. 21, s. 1, does not enable the court, when a party has declared in house of convocation, is repealed by 25 Hen. 8, prohibition and succeeded, to grant him his costs c. 19. Ib.

9. APPEAL.

To Privy Council.]-Rule 14 of the rules for appeals in ecclesiastical and maritime causes applies to an appeal from the Arches Court, as to the form of articles of charge against a clerk for heresy, although he contumaciously refused to appear to the citation of that court. Sheppard v. Bennett, 21 L. T. 650-P. C.

In such a case, therefore, as well as in the ordinary case where an appearance has not been entered, the appeal shall not stand for hearing before the judicial committee until a period of four months has expired from the bringing in of the petition of appeal. Ib.

A party is not bound to appeal from an interlocutory decree, though he might by so doing have raised the whole question at issue on the appeal from the definite sentence. Jones v. Gough, 3 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 1.

No appeal was interposed from an interlocutory indement of the Arches Court, admitting articles of charge against a clergynan proceeded against under 3 & 4 Vict. c, 86:—Held, that the appellant was not concluded by the admission of the articles, and that it was competent to him, upon appeal from the final sentence, to open the finding of the interlocutory judgment upon the articles. Williams v. Salisbury (Bishop), 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 375.

Secus, with respect to the respondent who had adhered to the appeal. Ih.

The court will not allow an appeal from its decision as to the admission of articles, unless some important principle of law is involved in such decision. Martin v. Mackonochie, 36 L. J., Ecc. 25.

A. being a stipendiary curate within a diocese, the bishop, after due notice and inquiry, revoked his licence. He appealed to the archbishop of the province under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 98, and the archbishop confirmed the revocation :—Held, that neither the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 92, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, nor the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, anthorise the privy council to receive appeals, except in the eases mentioned in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 6, from the decisions given by the archibishops under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106. Poole v. London (Bishop), 14 Moore, P. C. 262; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 347; 4 L. T. 224; 9 W. R. 485.

Under 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, an appeal lay from the archbishop's court to the delegates in all spiritual causes, whether touching the king or not, and therefore by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 92, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, s. 3, there is an appeal in such cases to the judicial committee of the privy council, whose decision is final. Gorham v. Exeter (Bishap), or Exeter (Bishap), Ex parts, 15 Q. B. 52; 10 C. B. 102; 5 Ex. 630; 19 L. J., Ex. 376; 19 L. J., C. P. 200; 19 L. J., Q. B.

Rehearing.]—An appeal from the Arches Court was heard ex parte and judgment was delivered. Before any report was presented to her Majesty an application was made to rehear the appeal on the ground that the respondent was unable to instruct counsel at the hearing, or to appear in person through ill-health, and on the ground that the judgment was binding upon all the clergy. They refused to rehear the appeal. Hebbert v. Purchas, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 551; 40 L. J., Ecc. 55.

To Court of Arches—From Archbishop.]—An appeal lies to the Court of Arches under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 15, from a judgment of a diocesan court presided over by the Archbishop of Canterbury, in consequence of the bishop of the diocese being the patron of the preferment held by the party proceeded against. Denison, Esc parte, 7 El. & Bl. 315; 26 L. J., Q. B. 178; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 439; 5 W. R. 320.

— Security for Costs.]—A criminal suit under the Church Discipline Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 86) having been promoted against the incumbent of a parish, and proof given of the charges made in the articles in the suit, the bishop of the diocese pronounced sentence suspending the defendant for two years ab officio et beneficio, and condenning him in the costs of the proceedings. The defendant appealed to the Court of Arches. On motion on behalf of the bishop, who had promoted his own office and appeared as respondent in the appeal, the Dean of Arches. on proof that the defendant was in a state of poverty, and had not paid any part of the costs in which he had been condemned, ordered the defendant to give security for the costs of the appeal in the sum of 100%, within four months from the date of making the order for security, O' Malley v. Norwich (Bishop), [1892] P. 175.

— From Commissioners.]—But no appeal is given by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, either to the Arches Court, or thence to the privy council, from the decision of the commissioners, on the regularity or the irregularity of the proceedings before them, Simpson v. Flamank, 4 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 385; 36 L. J., Ecc. 28; L. R. 1 P. C. 463; 16 L. T. 724: 16 W. R. 8.

By Party in Contempt for disobeying Monition. -A party in contempt for not obeying a monition, whose contempt has been signified under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, and a writ de contamace capiendo extracted against him, is not precluded from appealing from the principal sentence, though pronounced in poenam; protest against permission to appeal under such circumstances overruled. Harrison v. Harrison, 4 Moore, P. C. 96; 6 Jur. 899.

A. and B. were then in possession of the glebe lands, having been tenants of the former incumbent, and they continued in possession until after December, 1816, when the vector conveyed the lands to trustees for securing an annuity :-Held, that the latter could not maintain an ejectment against A. and B. without giving them a notice to quit. Doe d. Coutes v. Somerville, 6 B. & C. 126; 9 D. & R. 100; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 28.

Mortgage.]—A vicar is a person having a limited interest within the meaning of s. 3 of the Landowners West of England and South Wales Land Drainage and Inclosure Companies Act. and may charge his glebe land thereunder. To a foreclosure action under such a mortgage the patron of the living is not a necessary party. Goodden v. Coles, 59 L. T. 309; 36 W. R. 828.

A demise of glebe by an incumbent of a benefice, with cure of souls, to secure an annuity, is void by 57 Geo. 3, c. 99, reviving 13 Eliz. c. 20. Shaw v. Pritchard, 5 M. & Ry. 180; 10 B. & C. 124; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 133.

A rector, in December, 1816, granted, bargained, sold and demised the rectory and all the glebe lands, tithes, &c., to a trustee, for securing an annuity for a term of years, if he, the rector, should so long live. This conveyance having been made after 43 Geo. 3, and before 57 Geo. 3, was a valid conveyance, and passed the legal estate to the trustee. Dae d. Coates v. ### 1. COMMUTATION.

Meaning of .]-The commutation of tithes does not mean merely the commutation of existing tithes into a rent-charge settled at the moment, but the commutation of the right to take the tithes into the right to take a rent-charge in lien of them. Walsh v. Trinmer, 36 L. J., Q. B. 318: L. R. 2 H. L. 208: 16 L. T. 722; 15 W. R. 1150.

Intention of Commutation Acts.]-The intenon which the apportionment in each parish is cast, and these lands only, shall be liable in respect of the tithe payable for any lands in the parish; and that lands on which no apportionment is cast shall not be liable to tithe. Walker v. Bentley, 9 Hare, 629.

Award - Apportionment Act. ] - Award of the tithe commissioners commuting tithes for a rent-charge : - Held, "an instrument under which the rent-charge was payable" within s. 2 of the Apportionment Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22). Heasman v. Pearse, L. R. 8 Eq. 599.

Confirmed Award—Effect of ]—A confirmed award under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, ss. 27, 52, is final, as between the tithe-owners and tithepavers, but does not exclude from further investigation a case between the tithe-owners themselves, in which there was, before the award, a just title to tithes, which, by accident and mistake, is not brought forward till after the award is made. Clarke v. Yonge, 5 Beav. 523.

Lands, which, on the agreement and apportionment (confirmed by the commissioners), are treated as free from tithe, cannot be afterwards made subject to tithe. Walker v. Bentley, 9 Hare, 629.

Principle of Apportionment. -Ou a commutation of tithes of a parish, the valuer made an apportionment, which was objected to by the landowners, and the objectors were heard, first, by the assistant commissioners, who received evidence for and against the objections, and then by the tithe commissioners. The tithes of corn and grain were payable to the rector, and moduses for all other tithes to the vicar. A rent-charge, in lieu of such tithes and moduses, had been awarded, A., a landowner, held ancient pasture land of the dean and chapter of Canterbury, by lease, which forbade him to plough the land without licence in writing, for which he had never applied, nor intended applying, but lands of the dean and chapter in the same district had been ploughed within living memory. Part of the land in the parish was woodland. The valuer, in apportioning the rent-charge upon A.'s pasture lands, assessed them to the vicar's rent-charge according to the modus, and added a small portion of rent-charge, to be paid to the rector as part of the gross rent-charge awarded 2 Jur. 939. to him, where it seemed that the productive to him, where it seemed that the productive In a suit for tithes, commenced before the quality of the land admitted of its being arable, passing of the Tithe Commutation Act, this.

and that there was a reasonable probability of its being tilled, but he made no such additional assessment on the woodland, not considering that a reasonable probability existed of that land becoming arable. The objectors disputed both the facts and the principle of assessment. The commissioners, having inspected the evidence given as above stated for and against the objections, decided that they would confirm the apportionment if they were not forbidden by a superior court :-Held, that a prohibition did not lie, the commissioners having acted within their statutory jurisdiction, and according to law; and that the apportionment was right in principle, Appledore Tithe Commutation, In re, 8 Q. B. 139; 17 L. J., Q. B. 59.

Authority of Commissioners. - To a declaration (as to expenses of apportionment of a rent-charge), the commissioners pleaded first that the grievances complained of were committed after the passing of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, and that they were committed under the authority of the first act, and that no notice of action had been given one month before action; and, secondly, that the grievances were committed after passing of an act in the last plea first mentioned, and were done under the authority of that act, and they were committed in the county of M., and not of D.:— Held, that the pleas were good, and that the action would lie. Acland v. Buller, 1 Ex. 837; 18 L. J., Ex. 51.

Jurisdiction of Commissioners.]-A commissioner has, by his award, to fix the amount of rent-charge payable in lieu of tithe, and, for that purpose, to decide upon the tithability of lands; but he has no invisdiction to decide thereby who is the party entitled to receive the rent-charge.

Edwards v. Bunbury, 3 G. & D. 229; 3 Q. B.

885; 12 L. J., Q. B. 45: 6 Jur. 1014.

An act, passed in 1792, for carrying into effect an agreement for vesting lands in lien of titles, provided that no thing in the act should prejudice the right of the rector or his successors to the right of tithes and customary stocking in certain specified lands, the modus in the "The Groves" and "The Ancient Closes," and all other petty and personal tithes not therein mentioned or relinquished. The tithe commissioner decided that "The Ancient Closes" were not exempt from titles:—Held, that the titles on "The Aucient Closes" were not commuted or extinguished by the act of 1792, wherefore the jurisdiction of the tithe commissioners was not taken away by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 90. Winteringham Tithes. In re, 31 L. J., C. P. 274; 9 Jnr. (N.S.) 277; 6 L. T.

- Suits pending.] - The commissioners under the Tithe Commutation Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4 c. 71, have no jurisdiction to interfere with suits for tithes which were pending in the Court of Exchequer when the act was passed. Girdlestone: v. Stanley, 3 Y. & Coll. 421; 3 Jur. 382.

Under the 6 & 7 Will, 4, c. 71, s. 45 (Tithe Commutation Act), the commissioners have a discretionary power to determine suits theretofore pending; but, where they intend to do so, specific notice of such intention must be given. Wetherell v. Weighell, 3 Y. & Coll. 243; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 1; court refused, on motion; to suspend the pro- August, when the respondent, who was the rector on a particular day, proceed to commute. Ib.

Practice-Discovery in Aid. ]-The parties to an action, brought upon a feigned issue, under the provisions of the Tithe Commutation Act (6 & 7 Will, 4, c. 71), are not precluded by that act from sustaining a bill of discovery in aid of the trial of such issue. Morris v. Norfalk (Duke), 9 Sim. 472; 9 L. J., Ch. 273; 4 Jur. 1007.

Expenses.]-Expenses incurred by the employment of an attorney by landowners, to conduct proceedings towards a commutation of the tithes of a parish, are "not expenses of or jucident to making the apportionment," within 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 75; and the attorney may therefore make the order on the ground that they had no power:—Held, that the magistrates had against the landowners who were parties to employing him. Hincheliffe v. Armitstead, 9 M. & W. 155; 11 L. J., Ex. 258; 6 Jur. 693.

Evidence.]—A tithe commutation map is not, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 64, admissible in evidence as shewing the boundary of land in a case of disputed title. Wilberfuree v. Hearfield, 46 L. J., Ch. 584; 5 Ch. D. 709; 25 W. R. 861.

The proceedings (properly authenticated) of the tithe commissioners are public evidence of The matters therein stated, and to be received as such. Giffard v. Williams, 38 L. J., Ch. 597; 21 L. T. 575; 18 W. R. 56.

Construction.]—The words "every instrument," in s. 19 of the Tithe Commutation Amendment Act (9 & 10 Vict.e. 73), cannot be read as "every such instrument." Walker v. Bentley, 9 Hare, Apportionment. ]-By 23 & 24 Viet. c. 93, s. 28, shall have possession of the sealed copy of any confirmed instrument of apportionment, it shall be lawful for any two justices of the peace for the county or other jurisdiction, within which the lands mentioned in the apportionment are situate, upon the application of any person interested in the lands or rent-charge, and upon fourteen days' notice in writing of such application to the person or persons in whose custody such copy shall be at the time of such application, to hear and determine such application :-Held, that such notice refers to a notice of an application that has already been made; and, where fourteen days' notice had been given of an intention to apply to the justices, and they heard the application ex parte, and made an order, the court granted a writ of certiorari to quash it. Reg. v. Sayers, 3 L. T. 405.

Tithe Map-Custody-Order of County Council Power of Justices to enforce Order.]-The appellant L. was the chairman of the parish council of West Meon, and was interested in the tithe apportionment and map of that parish. In 1894 these documents were in the enstody of one A., and kept at his house. In March, 1895, the parish meeting passed a resolution that he should still retain the custody of these documents.

eceilings on the mere ordinary notice of the lot the parish, obtained them. In October of the commissioners under the act, that they should, same year the parish council passed a resolution that they should be handed over to them for custody, but the respondent refused to part with them. In April, 1896, the parish conneil applied to the county conneil under s. 17 (8) of the Local Government Act, 1894, and they ordered that these documents should be placed in such custody as the parish conneil might direct. In February of the present year the order was drawn up, sealed, and served on the respondent, but he refused to comply with it. The appellant then moved before the justices, under s. 28 of the Tithe Act, 1860, for an order that these documents should be moved from the custody of the respondent and deposited in the custody of the parish conneil. The magistrates refused to power to make such an order. Lewis v. Poole, 67 L. J., Q. B. 73; [1898] 1 Q. B. 164; 77 L. T. 369; 46 W. R. 93; 61 J. P. 776,

2. MERGER

Extent of ]—The provision contained in s. 19 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, that every instrument purporting to merge any tithes, and made with the consent of the commissioners, shall be absolately confirmed and made valid, both at law and in equity, in all respects, is not limited to cases in which the person executing the instrument has a title to the title, but operates as well where such person has no estate in the tithe as where his estate is insufficient to effect the merger. Walker v. Bentley, 9 Hare, 629.

The intention of the legislature was to preclude all questions of merger of tithe in all cases where declarations of merger had been made with Application for Possession of Instrument of the parties affected by an erroneous declaration the consent of the tithe commissioners, leaving whenever any person, other than the persons and, such being the intention, the merger is shall have possession of the same, offected, although the suntention, the merger is shall have possession of the same, offected, although the same of the same. sioners has been erroneously given. Walker v. Bentley, Ib.

3. INCLOSURE ACTS.

Generally.] - The commissioner appointed under an inclosure act stated that lands in the parish were subject to a modus, which "extended only to the lands when occupied by the owners thereof," or by residents, but that such lands became liable to the payment of tithes, the amount of which he specified in a schedule, when otherwise occupied, or "if converted into tillage." A resident owner built in one of his fields, then subject to the modus, a house, attached to it a garden, and planted fruit trees on the rest of the field :- Held, that, by the planting of the fruit trees, there had not been a conversion into tillage so as to destroy the modus, and render the hand subject to the increased tithe. Dudman v. Vigar, 42 L. J., C. P. 297; L. R. 6 H. L. 212; 29 L. T. 552; 22 W. R. 170.

The conversion into tillage of any part of the land, if such conversion had actually taken place, would not under this award make the whole field, but only that part of it which was so converted, liable to the increased tithe. Ib,

An inclosure act granted an annual rent of 4s. He died in May of that year, and they still per acre to a rector of a parish, in lieu of tithes, remained in the possession of his family till and enacted that all allotments and the annual and, to prevent the settling of such proportions parish as the commissioner should fix as the proportion the rector should pay, considering the nature of a money payment. The commissioner awarded that the rector's proportion should be "one-fourteenth part of the amount of the rate so made by me as aforesaid," which he declared to be 295t, upon 4,140t. 8s., the ratable value of the lands in the parish :- Held, that such award was bad, not being what the act directed him to do, and that a rate founded upon it could not be supported. Reg. v. Hemsworth Overseers, 3 L. T.

An inclosure act enacted that it should be lawful for the commissioner to apportion the rent-charge in lien of tithes upon such portion as he should think fit of the lands of A. The commissioner apportioned the rent-charge upon all the lands of A. :- Held, that it was not necessary to specify the lands. Willoughby v. Willoughby, 4 Q. B. 687; 12 L. J., Q. B. 281; 7 Jur. 798.

- Re-Apportionment. ]-Under an inclosure act, by which a corn-rent was given to a rector in lieu of certain thes :- Held, that an application for re-ascertainment of the amount of the rent could take place only at the expiration of one of the periods fixed by the act; and, if then omitted, could not be made till the next twenty-one years had expired. Reg. v. Lindsey, J., 13 Q. B. 484; 18 L. J., Q. B. 168; 13 Jur. 491.

4. AS BETWEEN LANDLORD AND TENANT.

54 Vict. c. 8 (Tithe Act, 1891), s. 1.]-Any lands, after the passing of this art, for the pay-ment of the litherent charge by the occupier, shall be void:

Demise.]—The decision in this case, reported 1 Ir. Ch. R. 401, varied on appeal. A demise of lands and the tithes thereof does not necessarily mean a demise of hands and a demise of tithes as separate and independent properties, but may, if the circumstances of the case warrant such an Construction-"Charges." ]-A lease contained a covenant that the lessee would pay the rent reserved without any deductions in respect of any taxes, rates, assessments or charges whatsoever, the landlord's property-tax only excepted :-Held, that he was not entitled to deduct the Held, that he was not entired to define the amount of a tithe-rent charge paid by him from the rent payable to the lessor, for that the word "charges" is wide enough to include it, and is not confined to matters ejusdem generis with taxes, rates and assessments. Lockwood v. Wilson, 43 L. J., C. P. 179; 30 L. T. 761; 22 W. R. 919.

"Outgoings." ]—A landlord agreed to let, and a tenant agreed to take, a farm, for a term rent to the rector should at all times be rated lord to abate 5%, per amount of the rent for the proportionably with other lands in the parish, first two years, in consideration of the condition of the place, and to put the farm into repair, and from creating disputes between the rector and the tenant to keep the same in repair .--Held, parishioners, the rector's rate for ever thereafter that, under the words "free of all outgoings." parishioners, the rector's rate for ever thereafter that, under the words "free of all outgoings," should be in such proportion to the rates of the the tenant was bound to pay the land fax and tithe commutation rent-charge. Parish v. Sleeman, 1 De G. F. & J. 326: 29 L. J., Ch. 96: 6 Jur. (N.S.) 385; 8 W. R. 166.

> Taxes and Assessments. -A. let land to B. at a specified rent, payable without any deduction, except level tax, property tax, and land tax; B. covenanted to pay all taxes and assessments, except such specified taxes; A., besides being owner of the land, was owner of the titherent charge thereon:—Held, that B. was not liable on such covenant for not paying the tithe rent-charge in addition to the specified rent. Jeffery v. Neale, 40 L. J., C. P. 191; L. R. 6 C. P. 240; 24 L. T. 362; 19 W. R. 700.

> Effect of Commutation-On Lessee's Covenants. -A lessee of tithes is liable on his covenant to pay rent, notwithstanding the tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge; his remedy being by surrender of his lease under 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 71, s. 88. Tasker v. Bullman, 3 Ex. 351; 18 L. J., Ex. 153.

- On Agreement to demise "Tithe Free." -Where A., being the owner of land, and also of the commuted tithes thereof, agreed by parol to demise to B, the land, tithe-free, at a yearly rent :- Held, that, although before the commutation, such an agreement might have operated as an agreement to demise both tithe and land at that joint rent, yet the agreement being after the commutation, the words "tithe free" were surplusage, since by 6 & 7 Will, 4, c, 71, s. 80, if the owner distrained for the rent-charge, the contract made between an occupier and owner of tenant would be entitled to deduct the amount Indemnity. ]-A declaration alleged that the plaintiff was tenant of a furn to the defendant for a term of years, after the expiration of which there became due and payable from him, to the ecclesiastical commissioners, money in respect of tithe commutation rent charged on the farm and land, which farm and land were interpretation, be construed to mean a demise of liable to the payment of the rent, as the defendands tithe free. Denny v. Deconshire, 1 Ir. Ch. R. dant knew; that, he having neglected to pay that knew; that, he having neglected to pay it, the commissioners, according to the pro-visions of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, distrained for it a stack of wheat of the plaintiff, lawfully being on the farm and land, and afterwards sold it, in satisfaction of the sum in arrear, costs and charges, and the plaintiff was deprived of the stack, yet the defendant, though he had notice of these matters, and was requested by the plaintiff to indemnify him, had not indemnified him :-Held, that the declaration shewed no cause of action, the facts stated creating no liability on the part of the defendant to indemnify the plaintiff. Griffinhoofe v. Daubuz (in error), 5 El. & Bl. 746; 25 L. J., Q. B. 237; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 392; 4 W. R. 131-Ex. Ch.

Seb-off.]—Where, in an agreement between and a tenant agreed to take, a farm, for a term of fourteen years, determinable at the end of the officers even years, at the many and the contend upon D's land, D being then lessed of first seven years, at the yearly rent of 40t., pay- a part of the great tithes on the land demised, it able quarterly, "free of all outgoings," the land- was agreed that the defendant should pay 375t.

yearly rent, and all rates, taxes and assessments, and also the vicarial tithes :-Held, that the owners of a rectorial tithe rent-charge from the defendant, in an action for rent by the plaintiff, who had purchased the demised farm from D., was not entitled, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, e. 71, s. 80, to set off a payment made by him to the bishop, estimated rental in respect of the remuneration to set of a payment made by him to the obstop, estimated remain respect to the remindential on account of rent-charge in lieu of tithes after of a collector, legal costs and out-of-pocket the lease of the tithes to D. had expired; the expenses, bad debts and irregularity in payment contained nothing to show that the ments, and tenant's taxes, and also for tenant's land was demised by D. free of rectorial tithes, profits and for the repair of the chancel of the although it did contain the stipulation that the defendant should pay the vicarial tithes, and although the defendant had never paid anything by way of tithes to D. or to the plaintiff. Forbes v. Elderfield, 4 W. R. 15.

Tithe Act, 1891-Failure by Landowner to give Notice of Liability of Occupier.]—The county court judge, in granting a certificate under s. 2, sub-s. 6 of the Tithe Act, 1891, has only to consider whether there has been good cause for the landlord's failure to give the notice to the tithe-owner, and whether the tenant has been prejudiced by the failure to do so; he has not to construe the tenant's lease or his liability thereunder. Hughes v. Himmer, [1893] 2 Q. B. 314; 5 R. 475; 69 L. T. 417; 42 W. R. 79; 58 J. P. 23.

5. RATES AND TAXES.

Rates-How recoverable: ]-Where the owner of a tithe rent-charge does not pay the rates to which he is assessed in respect thereof, the amount is recovered from one or more of the occupiers of the land out of which such rentcharge issues, and not from the owner of such rent-charge. Lamplugh v. Yalding Overseers, 58 L. J., Q. B. 279; 22 Q. B. D. 452; 37 W. R. 422; 53 J. P. 389—C. A.

Poor-rate. The impropriate rectory and tithe rent-charge of a parish, and a piece of land thereunto appertaining, were vested in the archbishops of Canterbury, one of whom, under the statutory power given for that purpose, granted to the perpetual curates of T. for ever an annual rent of 40%, to be charged upon, and yearly issuing out of, the rectory, rent-charge and land. A lease of the same was afterwards granted by the archbishop to G., who paid a rent calculated on the basis that the curate's portion would have to be paid to him by G., which G. accordingly did : -Held, that G. ought not, in assessing the value of his occupation for the purposes of poor-rate, to be allowed to deduct the sum paid to the perpetual curate, as that was only a part of the rent. Reg. v. Groves, 2 El. & El. 793; 29 L. J., M. C. 179; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1014; 8 W. R. 434. Also, Rey. v. Sherford, 8 B. & S. 596; 36 L. J., M. C. 113; L. R. 2 Q. B. 503; 16 L. T. 663; 15 W. R. 1035.

Measure of Assessment.]-A tithe rentcharge is to be assessed to the poor-rate, like all other property, according to the sum for which it might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, and, in deciding upon such amount, it must be considered whether, in each particular case, anything over the expenses for collecting. and the allowances for bad debts and legal and other expenses, would be necessary to induce a tenant to take it. St. Asaph (Dean) v. Llantenant to take it. Sc. Asaph (Deen) v. Llan-rhaiadr-yn-Mochaant Overseers, 66 L. J., Q. B. 267; [1897] 1 Q. B. 511; 76 L. T. 42; 45 W. R. 374; 61 J. P. 213—C. A.

Upon an appeal to quarter sessions by the decision of an assessment committee as to the ratable value thereof, the court of quarter sessions allowed deductions from the gross parish church :-Held, on appeal, first, that in the absence of a finding of fact that the amount allowed for the expenses of collection, bad debts, and legal and other expenses was insufficient to induce a tenant to take the tithe rent-charge without a further allowance, the court of quarter sessions were wrong in allowing a deduction for tenant's profits; and, secondly, that, as it did not appear that a tenant could be charged with the repair of the chancel of the church, the deduction upon that ground was also wrong, Reg. v. Goodchild (El. Bl. & El. 1; 27 L. J., M. C. 233) followed. Ib.

Annual Value for Purposes of Property Tax. ]-In estimating the "annual value" of tithe commutation rent-charge for the purpose of charging the owner thereof with property tax under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 34, s. 32, the amount necessarily expended by him in collection of the tithe rentcharge must be deducted. Stevens v. Bishop, 57 L. J., Q. B. 283: 20 Q. B. D. 442; 58 L. T. 669; 36 W. R. 421; 52 J. P. 548—C. A.

Repayment of Money borrowed under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36.]-The owner of tithe or tithe rentcharge is liable to be assessed to a rate made under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36, s. 1, for the repayment of money borrowed under that act from the public works loan commissioners for the repair of the parish church, notwithstanding his exemption from church-rates. Smallbanes v. Edney, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 286; 40 L. J., Ecc. 8; L. R. 3 P. C. 444; 24 L. T. 241; 19 W. R. 287.

General Rate, Lighting Rate, Sewers Rate.] A commutation tithe rent-charge is liable to the general rate and lighting rate levied under 18 & 19 Viet. c. 120, s. 161, but not to the sewers rate, being within the exemption of s. 164, when the practice, before the 18 & 19 Vict. c, 112, was the practice, periors the 10 & 12 vict. C. 112, who to exempt the tithes of the parish from the sewers rate. Ileg. v. Goodchild, El. Bl. & El. 1; 27 L. J., M. C. 251; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1050.

In City of London. ]-By 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, provision was made for payment to the clergy of the city of London and their successors of a rate made upon the inhabitants and calculated upon the rent of the houses in the city. In this and several subsequent statutes these payments were described as tithes. A special act passed in 1881 provided that all tithes, and sums of money in lien of tithes, arising or growing due in a parish in Loudon should cease and be extinguished, and the tithe-owner should receive, in lieu and satisfaction thereof, a fixed annual sum, to be levied and collected in the same manner as the poorrates. Neither the above-mentioned tithes, nor the fixed annual sum in lieu thereof, had ever been assessed for the relief of the poor :-Held, that the owner was not ratable to the poor-rate in respect of this fixed annual sum, as such sum was a personal payment, and was not a payment in lieu of tithes ratable under 43 Eliz. c. 2. Esdaile v. City of London Union, 56 L. J., M. C.

Land Tax.]—The annual rent-charge payable under the Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886, in lieu of the extraordinary charge pre-viously levied under the Tithe Commutation viously levied under the 11the Commutation Acts, is not liable to laud-tax. Curr v. Fuele, 62 L. J. Q. B. 177; [1893] 1 Q. B. 251; 5 R. 163; 68 L. T. 123; 41 W. R. 365; 57 J. P. 136.

Arrears of Rates upon Tithe Rent-charge due before passing of Tithe Act, 1891.]—Having regard to the provisions of s. 6 of the Tithe Act, 1891, the machinery under the repealed Tithe Acts, 1836 and 1837, cannot be applied to the recovery of arrears of rates due before the passing of the act of 1891. Sect. 38, sub-s. 2 of the Interpretation Act, 1889, does not affect the matter. An occupier of lands is, therefore, not entitled to deduct from his rent any money paid by him after the passing of the Tithe Act, 1891, in respect of arrears of rates due before the passing thereof. Such a payment by an occupier being voluntary, a landowner cannot deduct the amount from payments made by him to the tithe-owner (Kay, L.J., dissenting). Jones v. Potts, 63 I., J., Q. B. 381; [1894] I. Q. B. 213; 9 R. 230; 69 L. T. 849; 42 W. R. 294; 58 J. P. 333-C. A.

6. EXTRAORDINARY TITHE.

What Lands liable.]—The power of the tithe commissioners, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c, 71, s. 42 (repealed), and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 42 (repealed), to impose an extraordinary charge on lands in a parish newly cultivated as hop grounds or market gardens, is not limited to lands in a parish in which a district had been assigned at the time of the commutation within which such extraordinary charge should be payable, but such charge may be made although no district had ever been so assigned. Russell v. Tithe Commissioners, 40 L. J., C. P. 265; L. R. 6 C. P. 596; 24 L. T. 908; 19 W. R. 1007.

Where lands, at the time of a commutation and apportionment, were not liable to, and did not pay, any tithes; but such lands are afterwards inclosed, and are cultivated as hop grounds, they become liable, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 42, to pay the extraordinary charge fixed by the commissioners to be paid by lands fixed by the commissioners to be paid by lands in the particular district cultivated as hop grounds. Walsh v. Trimmer, 36 L. J., Q. B. 318; L. R. 2 H. L. 208; 16 L. T. 722; 15 W. R. 1150.

Contribution - Jurisdiction. ] - Where land. belonging to two or more owners, is charged with one smount of rent-charge by the land commissioners, acting under the provisions of the Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886, one of such owners who has paid the whole of such rent-charge must claim contribution or apportionment from the other owners under the provisions of s. 16 of the Tithe Commutation Act, 1842; that is, before justices. In such a case, a county court has no jurisdiction. Simmonds v. Heath, 62 L. J., Q. B. 445; 5 R. 550; 69 L. T. 442; 42 W. R. 30.

149; 19 Q. B. D. 481; 57 L. T. 749; 35 W. R. to the plaintiff. Subsequently, the land commissioners ascertained and certified the capital value of the extraordinary charge on the whole farm :-Held, that, inasmuch as, before the passing of the act of 1886, the extraordinary charge was only a charge on the land cultivated as a hop ground, the annual rent-charge payable under s. 4 of the act of 1886 was only a charge on the land so cultivated, notwithstanding that the commissioners had assessed it in respect of the whole farm : and that, therefore, the defendant was not liable to contribute towards payment of the charge. #### 7. PRESCRIPTION ACT AND STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Limitation. ]-The Statute of Limitations cannot be pleaded to a bill for tithes. Marston v.

Cleypole, Bunb. 213.
The right to tithe rent-charge in Ireland was vested in a spiritual corporation sole until 1871, when it was transferred by statute to a lay corporation. In 1877 the lay corporation brought an action against the persons liable to pay tithe rent-charge to recover six years' arrears. more than twenty years next before action there had been no payment and no acknowledgment in writing:—Held, that the tithe rent-charge was "rent" within s. I of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), and not a "composition" within the exception to s. I, compositions in Ireland having been abolished by 1 & 2 Viet. c. 109; that s, 2 of 3 & 4 Will, 4, c, 27, applied as between the owner and the persons liable to tithe rent-charge; that the lay corporation could not avail themselves of the provisions of s. 29 in favour of spiritual corporations sole; and that the action was barred by the lapse of twenty years. Irish Land Commission v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 14; 52 L. T. 228; 33 W. R. 357—H. L. (Ir.)

A suit was instituted for the tithes of a par-ticular district in a parish. The whole tithes of that parish had been demised by general words, but it was not asserted that the lease had been granted with a view to the tithes claimed by the ill, or that the lessee had paid or received anything on account of them :-Held, that the out-standing lease did not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations running as regarded the particular tithes claimed. Ely (Dean and Chapter) v. Hiss, 5 Beav. 574; 11 L. J., Ch. 351; 6 Jur. 496.

The right to tithes as against an ecclesiastical corporation aggregate is barred under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, by nonpayment for twenty years.

Where, on a bill for tithes of a district of the parish recently brought into cultivation; plea, nonpayment and no acknowledgment of the right within twenty years (under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) before the commencement of the suit ; that the district was not exempt; that a decree of the passing of the Extraordinary of the Redemption Act, 1886, a farm called Boxall's Farm, was owned by one man, part of which was cultivated as a hop ground. After the passing of the act, he sold part of the farm to the defendant, and part containing the hop ground. it appeared from the bill, by way of evidence, time the act took effect, but no payment or although that fact was clearly established by the right of action and the nonpayment during Prescription. ]-The act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100. is nuaffected by the provisions of the act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; the interpretation clause of the latter act, although enacting that the word hand" shall in its meaning extend to tithes, has reference to an estate in tithes, and not to tithes as a chattel, and the 2nd section, therefore, does not embrace the case of a render of tithes these not enibrace the case or a remer or others as a chartel by the person bound to pay to the tithe owner. S. C., 2 De G. M. & G. 459.

The statute 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100, brings down the period of legal memory from the time of I Rich, I to the time of the commencement of the two incumbencies (not being together less than sixty years) and three years of a third incombency, but does not create a new ground of exemption, or destroy the right to tithes, apon mere proof of nonpayment or nonrender during two such incumbencies and three years of a third, in cases where proof of nonpayment, or nonrender, from the time of 1 Rich. 1, would, or nonrender, from the time of 1 Rich, 1 would, before the statute 2 & 3 Will, 4, e 100, have established no exemption. Subleta v. Johnston, Hare, 190; 11 L. J., Ch., 201; 6 Jur. Reversed, 1 Mac. & G., 242; 1 H. & Tw. 521; 18 L. J., Ch., 493; 14 Jur. 1. And see M. C. at law, 2 Mim. Gr. & Sc. 749; 2 Ex. 256; 18 L. J., Ch., 400; 10 L. J., 2 L. J., 3 L. J

The object of the Tithe Prescription Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100), to be inferred from its preamble, as explained by the enacting part, was to prevent the expense and inconvenience of suits for tithes, by establishing certain limitations of time, after which claims of moduses and discharges should not be questioned. And and discharges should not be questioned. And the effect of the act, as applicable to claims of exemption, is not only to facilitate the proof of exemption de facto for the time past, but to dispense with the proof (which was before required from laymen) of any legal origin of such exemption. Att. Gen. v. Darham (Earl), 46 L. T. 16.

And semble (though the opinion of the majority of the judges consulted was to the contrary), that the act applies to cases in which it appears that the lands have paid tithes of some tithable matters, other than those for which the exemption is claimed, and even where such last-mentioned matters are of modern introduction, as well as to eases in which the lands have been enjoyed without payment of any tithes. Ih.

But :- Hekl, that, at all events, it is sufficient, even in a case of the former description, for the occupier to allege and prove that his lands have been enjoyed for the prescribed period, without payment of the tithes demanded, miless the party claiming the tithes shall specifically allege, as well as prove, that other tithes have during that period been paid. And, therefore, where a bill by a vicar for some particular tithes contailed no such allegation, and the defendants alleged and proved that their lands had been enjoyed for the prescribed period, without payment of the tithes demanded, or any money or other matter in lieu thereof, it was :- Held, that the court could not notice the fact that tithes of other matters had been paid for the same lands, the act rook enect, but no payment or although that fact was clearly established by the receipt of tithes in respect of the particular cyclence in the cause; and, therefore, that district was ever made :—Held, that, shewing a whether the fact were so or not, the defence set up was, upon these pleadings, a complete answer above the period prescribed by the act, the plan to the plaintiffs demand, and the bill was accordingly dismissed. Ib.

> Six Years' Arrears. ]-Courts of equity are not bound in tithe causes to any limitation in point of time for which tithes are sought, although, a convenienti, it has been usual to confine the account to the period of six years where the court sees no reason to depart from such usage. St. Paul's (Wardens) v. Lincoln (Bishop), 4 Price, 86.

In a suit in equity for an account of tithes, the defendant set up an award, which declared that a certain sum should be paid in lien of tithes, provided the whole lands were subject to tithes; but, if only subject to titles according to a specified terrier, then a different sum was awarded. The defendant's counsel also set up at the hearing the statute 53 Geo. 3. c. 127, as a bar to the recovery of tithes for more than six years. The statute was not pleaded by the answer of the defendant :—Held, that the award, not being final, was void, but that the plaintiff was only entitled to an account of tithes for six years before the filing of the bill. Goode v. Waters, 20 L. J., Ch. 72

Practice — Amendment.] — A bill for tithes having been filed within the period limited by the statute 8 & 4 Will. 4, and amended after that period for the purpose of adding another party:— Held, sufficient as against the last party, inasmuch as the bill and amended bill formed bub one record. Thorpe v. Mattingley, 2 Y. & Coll. 421; S. L. J., Ex. Eq. 9.

S. REDEMPTION.

Jurisdiction of County Court.]—A county court has inrisdiction since the Tithe Act, 1891, to hear and determine actions brought for recovery of redemption-money and expenses incident to the redemption of a title rent-charge. ### 9. REMISSION.

Certificate of Annual Value-Tithe Act, 1891, s. 8.]-An owner-occupier of agricultural land 8. 8.)—An owner-occupier or agricultural mana-cexercised the option given by a 18 of the Inland Revenue Act, 1887, to be assessed for property and income-tax purposes under schedule D. in lieu of schedule B. He subsequently applied under the Tithe Act, 1891, s. 8, sub-s. 5, for a certificate from the district commissioners of taxes of the annual value of his land. The commissioners declined to give the certificate unless the applicant first consented to have his land assessed for the purposes of schedule B, under sub-s, 4 of the lastmentioned act :-Held, that the commissioners were right, inasmuch as the certificate to be granted under sub-s. 5 of s. 8 of the Tithe Act, 1891, only applied to the annual value of land under that section, and that section referred only to asse ments ascertained and entered under schedule Bor, if not already so entered, to be ascertained for the purposes of the said schedule B. under sub-s. 4; and that no assessment under schedule D. was made applicable for the purposes of remission of tithe-rent charge under this section. Reg. v. Petersfield Tax Commissioners, 63 L. J., Q. B. 357.

Commissioners. - Where a tithe rent-charge is reduced under s. 8, sub-s. (i.) of the Tithe Act, 1881, in consequence of a lower assessment under schedule B. of the Income Tax Act, 1853, being made by the commissioners upon appeal from the surveyor, the owner may, if he has not had notice of, and has not been represented at, the hearing, appeal to them against their previous decision, under the provisions of sub-s. (iii.) of s, 8 of the Tithe Act, 1801. Reg. v. Commissioners of Taxes for Barnstable Division of Essex, Gibson, Ex-parte, 64 L. J., Q. B. 759; [1895] 2 Q. B. 123; 15 R. 471; 72 L. T. 800; 48 W. #### 10. RECOVERY.

See Tithe Act, 1891 (54 Vict. c. 8), ss. 1, 2, for recent changes in the law.

a. By Distress.

Where Distress not sufficient. ]-If the halfyearly payments of the rent-charge are in arrear, and no sufficient distress found an owner of the rent-charge may recover such arrear, for a period not exceeding two years, by inquisition and writ of habere facias possessionem under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 82, although he may not have attempted to levy the arrears by distress, under s. 81, at the end of each, or any but the last, of the half-years; and although, at the end of one or more of such previous half-years, there may have been a sufficient distress for the amount then due. Camberwell Rent-charge, In re, 4 Q. B. 151; 3 G. & D. 365; 12 L. J., Q. B. 155; 7 Jur. 128.

A tithe rent-charge owner is bound, in estimating whether there is any sufficient distress on the premises, in respect of which the tithe rentcharge is in arrear, to include the value of a growing crop, although not in such a state as to come to maturity and to be capable of realisation within forty days from the date of entry. Within Tork days from the date of chtry. Plumpton Tithe Rent-charge, In re, Arnison, Ex parte, 37 L. J., Ex. 57; L. R. 3 Ex. 56; 17 L. T. 480; 16 W. R. 368.

Distress ineffectual—Arrears not recoverable by Sale.]—By the 67th section of the Tithe Commutation Act (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71), the sam thenceforth payable in lien of tithes is declared to be "in the nature of a rent-charge issuing out of the lands charged therewith." Lands in respect of which a tithe rent-charge was payable having become unproductive, and the remedy by distress and entry having become ineffectual :-Held, that the sum payable in lieu of tithes is not by the statute rendered a charge on the inheritance; and that the owner of the rentcharge was not entitled to claim a sale of the lands in order to recover the arrears of his rent-charge. Bailey v. Badham, 54 L. J., Ch. 1067;

A rick of wheat of the value of 62l. was seized as a distress for 391., arrears of a tithe rent-

Appeal against Assessment of Income Tax | the tenant was under covenant with his landlord to consume it on the farm, the tithe rent-charge owner sold the wheat only, the buyer to thresh it on the premises and leave the straw. The value of the wheat was  $42l_{\odot}$ , that of the straw 201. :- Held, that the tithe rent-charge owner was justified in seizing the entire rick, and, although there was other property on the premises, that the distress was not excessive. Roden v. Eyton, 6 C. B. 427; 18 L. J., C. P. 1; 12 Jur. 921.

The sworn appraisers by whom the distress is valued must be persons reasonably competent, but need not be professional appraisers. Ib.

Inclosure Act.] - An inclosure act, reciting that there were owners of old inclosed lands within a parish, provided that the tithes should be extinguished, and certain yearly corn-rents substituted, to be payable for ever out of the lands to be charged therewith as aforesaid. It also provided that the rector, in addition to all present powers for recovery of tithes and compositions, should have the same powers for recovering them as by common law or statute given to landlords for the recovery of rack-rent in arrear. It further provided for the apportionment of the rent-charge in case of the division of the land, and enacted that such apportioned part of the rent might be recovered from the lands socharged therewith, or from the owners thereof, in the same manner as the whole yearly cornrents:—Held, that a distress by the rector for the amount of the rent-charge imposed upon lands of a proprietor acquired by him before the passing of the act, and also for the amount of the rent-charge imposed upon other lands in the parish acquired by him since the passing of the act, jointly, was illegal. Bedford v. Sutton Coldfield, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 449; 27 L. J., C. P. 105; 4 Jnr. (N.s.) 133.

Held, also, that a distress might be levied in respect of the whole rent-charge imposed on all the lands in the parish belonging to the same owner, upon an occupier of any part thereof.

Judge's Order.]—The judge's order, under 6 & 7 Will, 4, c. 71, s. 82, may be made on an exparteapplication. Hammersmith Rent-charge, In re. 4 Ex. 87; 19 L. J., Ex. 66.

Costs of Rule to set aside Order. |-The court discharged a rule obtained for setting aside anorder so made, without giving any directions asto the costs of shewing canse :- Held, that the costs upon the rule were properly taxed as costs of the inquisition, for which the writ of haberefacias possessionem might issue. S. C., 1 L. M. & P. 578; 19 L. J., Ex. 357.

Double Costs.]-The owner of a tithe rentcharge distraining, and afterwards obtaining judgment in replevin, is not entitled to double costs under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 22; neither, consequently, is he entitled to the "full and reason-Excessive Distress.]—A charge of 2s. 6d. per double costs by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 2. When Action lies.]—An inclosure act enacted that, where the rent-charge apportioned in lien of tithes by vitue of the act should be unpaid for three months, the rector should have such and the like powers and remedies for recovering the same as by the common law or statute are given to laudlords for the recovery of rent. Semble, that an action would lie by the rector. Willoughby, 4 Q. B. 687; 12 L. J., Q. B. 281; 7 Jur. 798.

An inclosure act, reciting that there were owners of old inclosed lands within a parish, provided that the tithes should be extinguished. and certain yearly corn-rents substituted, to be payable for ever out of the lands to be charged therewith as aforesaid. It also provided that the rector, in addition to all present powers for recovery of tithes and compositions, should have the same powers for recovering them as by common law or statute given to landlords for the recovery of rack-rent in arrear. It further, having provided for the apportionment of the rent-charge in case of the division of the land. enacted that such apportioned part of the rent might be recovered from the lands so charged therewith, or from the owners thereof, in the same manner as the whole of the said yearly corn-rents were thereby made recoverable :-Held, that the rector could not maintain an action against the owners of the land for the Bedford v. Sutton Coldfield, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 449; 27 L. J., C. P. 105; 4 Jm. (N.S.) 133.

Recovery of Arrears -- Contribution. ] -- The defendant was the owner and occupier of certain ducfiltant was the owner and tocopies of carrier aluds in the parish of P., which by a private act were charged with the payment to the vicar of 270l. in lieu of all tithes. The act provided that if the anumal rents were in arrear, the vicar was to have such and the same powers and remedies for recovering the same as by the laws and statutes of the realm are provided for the recovery of rent in arrear; and also that, if no sufficient distress was found on the premises, the vicar might cuter and take possession of the same until the arrears were satisfied. Four years' arrears of the annual rent accrued in respect of the whole of the lands charged, during the whole of which period the defendant was the owner and occupier of a portion only of such lands :- Held, that the vicar might maintain an action of debt against the defendant for the whole amount in arrear, the remedy by real action, which was a higher remedy than the action by debt, having been abolished by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 36. #### 11. IN LONDON.

Generally.]—Decree, under the statute 37 Hen. S, for payment of tithes in London as to warchouses-creeted by the East India Company upon the site of old buildings, and occupied by them, at 2s. 9d. in the pound upon the value, to be let, without an issue, no specific customary payment in lieu of tithes being alleged. Antrobus v. East. India to A. 13 Ves. 9.

Bill had been filed under startute 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, to recover 2x. 9d. in the pound for tithes, and an issue was refused, under these circumstances: iffirst, mispleading; the defendants not stating customary payments by their answer, but adopting ore tenus payments disclosed by the answer to their cross bill, instead of moving for leave to file a supplemental answer; secondly, the improbability of establishing three payments, after two unsuccessful trials at her in another cause. St. Paul's (Warden) v. Kettle, 9 Ver. 8. B.

How computed.]—Titles in the city of London under 37 Hen. 8. c. 12, at the rate of 2s. 9d. in the pound, are to be computed, not merely on the rent reserved by the lease, but on the full annual improved value of the premises to let. Tirion v. Unchram, * De G. M. & G. 818: 25 L. J., Ch. 858; 1 Jur. (K.S.) 809; 3 W. R. 254.

Meaning of "Rent." |- The term "rent," used in a decree, under statute 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, relating to tithes in London, means rent actually and bona fide received, without fraud or covin, and not the annual value of the premises let. Fines, to whatever amount, paid on the renewal of leases of dwelling-houses, are not to be considered as increase of rent, or to be taken into calculation in estimating the amount of tithes due, provided the rent reserved is equal to that at which the Nonpayment ]—Mere nonpayment of tithes under statute 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, is no answer to a claim for them; as it would be no answer to a claim for tithes at common law. St. Paul's (Warden) v. Kettle, 2 Ves. & B. 1.

Exemption.]—A certain enstomary payment in Loudon, in lieu of tithes, may be good so as to exempt an individual house, if usually made a sufficient time to acquire the character of customary in the Ecclesiastical Court, though within time of memory, and not general through the place or parish. St. Paul's (Warden) v. Kettle, Ib. By the London City Tithes Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 268), s. 7, an occupier of property, which, although subject to poor rates, is exempt from tithes, shall continue to be exempt in the same manuer as if the not had not been passed. In 1856, the rector of one of the parishes subject to the act leased the basement, yard, ground floor and first floor of his rectory house for twenty-one years, reserving to himself the upper part of the house for his own residence :- Held, that the occupiers of the leased part of the rectory were L. Rep. 191.

Evidence. ]-The books of former rectors may be produced in evidence, upon an issue to try whether there had been any variation as to sums paid for tithe in London. Ih.

Presumption of Inrolment. ]-A decree concerning the payment of tithes within the city of London was made under 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, but no involment of it in chancery could be produced, though the decree appeared, by a statement in the registry book of the see of London, to have been given to Archbishop Bonner, the bishop of not exempt from liability. Reg. v. Fenner, 31 London, to be kept in the registry of St. Paul's cathedral. As the courts have repeatedly treated the decree as a binding instrument, and the citizens have recognised it by the usage of paying tithes according to its order, the involuent must be presumed. Macdonyall v. Purrier, 2 Dow. & Cl. 135. See Macdonyal v. Young, 2 Car. & P. 278 : R. & M. 392.

> Prescription-Limitation.]-A lay impropriator of the tithes in a parish within the city having brought an action to recover from the inhabitants of certain houses within the parish tithes payable under 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, it appeared that (so far as was known) no tithes or payments in lien of tithes had ever been paid in respect of those houses:—Held, upon the authority of Andrews v. Drever (3 Cl. & F. 314) that (apart from statute) mere nonpayment afforded no defence even against a lay impropriator, that the payments imposed by 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, were not a render of tithes in kind within the meaning of the Tithe Prescription Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100, s. 1), and that that act afforded no defence, and that the payments imposed by 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, were "annuities or periodical sums of money charged upon land" within the meaning of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will, 4, c, 27, s, 1), and that the statute (as amended by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57) afforded a defence to the action. — Houses pulled down by Railway Company—Indemnity by Company.]—By 37 Hen. S, c. 12, the inhabitants of the parishes in Londou therein mentioned are to pay tithes at the rate of 2s. 9d. in the pound on their rent. By a railway act, it was enacted that, where houses in these parishes shall be taken for the railway. after the occupiers shall have quitted their houses, and until new houses shall be erected. and occupied, of such annual rent or value that the titles of such new houses shall be cound to the tithes payable for the houses quitted, the tithes, or payments in lieu of tithes, payable in respect of the houses quitted (according to the last assessments to the 25th March, 1839), or annual sums of money equal to the loss in tithes which the rectors may sustain by taking down such houses, shall be payable to the rectors. The company removed houses, and built others which were at once occupied :- Held, that the object of the act was only indemnity to the clergy : that, therefore, the clergy were entitled to receive only what they would have received if the company had never interfered with the premises; that the company was liable to pay in respect of houses removed (where no others had been built in their places) such sums as were actually paid to the rector, whether by agreement or otherwise, up to the 25th March, 1839; that the amount before agreed upon between the restor and the occupant, and paid by the occupant, constituted the "assessment," and that the amount of compensation must be measured thereby; and further, that, where new honses had been built and occupied, the company was entitled to be credited (in reduction of its general liability to make compensation) with the sums which had become payable in respect of such new houses, and not merely with those which had been actually received therefrom.

Burial of Paupers. |-- Overseers are not bound either by common law, or by 43 Eliz. c. 2, to bury a pauper settled in their parish, who dies in the parish, but not in any parish house. Reg. v. Stewart, 4 P. & D. 349; 12 A. & E. 773.

Every person dying in this country, and not within certain ecclesiastical prohibitions, is cu-titled to christian burial. Ib.

Where no such prohibition attaches, semble, that every householder, in whose house a dead body lies, is bound by common law to inter the body decently; and that, upon this principle, where a body lies in the house of a parish or of a union, the parish or the union must provide for the interment. Ib.

Duty of Parent, &c., to provide for Burial of Child. - A parent is bound to provide christian burial for the body of a deceased child, if he has the means: but, if he has not the means, though the body remains unburied and becomes a nuisance to the neighbourhood, he is not indictable for the nuisance, notwithstanding he could have obtained money for the burial expenses by way of loan from the poor-law authorities of the parish, for he is not bound to incur a debt. Notice to bury without Church Service-Expenses of Funeral. —A notice given by H., under 43 & 44 Vict. c. 41, s. 1, of burial without the church service, contained his name, but no child, because the churchyard was full, but persons on board were drowned. Some of the afterwards room was found. H, attended with bodies were found ashore within the boundaries afterwards room was found. H, attended with his friends on the day named in the notice, but had to postpone the burial to a future day. H. sued the vicar for the expenses of the abortive funeral on the first day :- Held, that the notice of burial was bad, and the defect was not waived by what the vicar had done thereafter. Houre v. Ram. 45 J. P. 729.

Right to recover Costs of Burial. ] - Semble. that a child or a more distant relation, being an infant, would not be liable upon a contract for the burial of a parent or a relation. Chapple v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 252; 13 L. J., Ex. 286.

But an infant wiclow is liable upon a contract for her deceased husband's funeral expenses. Ib.

The husband is liable for the necessary expense of the decent interment of his wife from whom he has been separated, whether the party incurring such expense is an undertaker or a mere volunteer. Ambrose v. Kerrison, 10 C. B. 776; 20 L. J., C. P. 135.

Right of Executors to Body. |-- Where a gaoler refused to deliver up the body of a person who had died while a prisoner in execution in his custody to the executors of the deceased unless they would satisfy certain claims made against the deceased by the gaoler, the court issued a peremptory mandamus in the first instance, commanding that the body should be delivered up to the executors, Reg. v. For, 2 Q. B. 247; 1 G. & D. 566.

There is no property in a dead body, but the executors have a right to the possession of the body, and their duty is to bury it, although there is direction in the will that some other person should cause the body to be burnt. Refusal to bury. ]-A clergyman refused to bury the body of a parishioner on the coroner's order for burial, the jury having returned a verdict of found drowned, assigning as his reason that such person had died in a state of intoxication, or was felo de se :- Held, that the mere opinion of the clergyman as to the cause of death did not justify his refusal to bury. Cooper v. Dodd, 2 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 270; 14 Jur. 724.

A suit against a clergyman in the Ecclesiastical Court, for refusing to bury the corpse of one of his parishioners, was dismissed, on the ground that a convenient warning had not been given, The court refused an application for a mandamus, though the clergyman had stated generally, that he never would bury the body, but allowed the applicant to make a fresh demand. Burial of Dead Bodies cast on Shore from Sea -36 Geo. 5, -75. |-A steamship was sunk by collision in the river Thames, near Woolwich, at Church of England is bound to read the burden of a place below low-water mark, and a number of service in the manner and form prescribed by of Woolwich in Kent, and were buried by the overseers. The river Thames, at Woolwich and at the places where the bodies were found ashore, is a navigable tidal river where great ships go :-Held, that the county treasurer could not be made liable for the expenses incurred by the overseers under 48 Geo. 3, c. 75, ss. 1 and 5, for the bodies were not east on shore "from the sea" within the meaning of the act. Woodwich Overseers v. Robertson, 50 L. J., M. C. 87; 6 Q. B. D. 654; 44 L. T. 747; 29 W. B. 892; 45 J. P. 766.

Order to pay Expenses-Bodies cast on Shore -Validity of Justices' Order. ]-A justice's order, made under 48 Geo. 3, c. 75, s. 6, after stating that he had inquired into and ascertained on oath the costs and expenses, amounting to 11, 5s., incurred by churchwardens and overseers by reason of a dead human body having been found and brought on to the shore within their parish, directed the county treasurer to pay to them the said sum of 11. 5s., according to the act :- Held, that the order was bad, because it did not shew that the expenses in question were proper and necessary expenses incurred in or about the execution of the act, and, therefore, did not sufficiently state facts to shew, or from which it could be inferred. that the justice had jurisdiction to make it. Reg. v. Krnt Treasurer, 58 L. J., M. C. 71; 22 Q. B. D. 603; 60 L. T. 426; 37 W. R. 619; 16 Cox, C, C, 583; 53 J, P, 279, Disinterring Dead Body. ]-A dead body by law belongs to no one, and is therefore under the protection of the public. If it lies in consecrated ground the ecclesiastical law will interpose for its protection; but, whether in ground consecrated or unconsecrated, indignities offered to human remains in improperly and indecently disinterring them are the ground of an indict-ment. Foster v. Dodd, 8 B. & S. 842, 854; 37 L. J., Q. B. 28; L. R. 3 Q. B. 67; 17 L. T. 614.

It is a misdemeanor at common law to remove, without lawful authority, a corpse from a grave in a burying-ground belonging to a congregation of Protestant dissenters, and it is no defence to such a charge that the motive of the person such a charge that the moove of the person removing the body was pious and landable. Reg. v. Sharpe, Dear. & B. 160; 26 L. J., M. C. 47; 3 Jür. (N.S.) 192; 5 W. R. 318; 7 Cox, C. C.

2. SERVICE.

Who has Right to take Part in. |- It is illegal for anyone, unless he is lawfully anthorised, to read or assist in reading a burial service in consecrated ground over a dead body. Johnson v. Friend, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 280.

Burial Board-Performance of Service. ]-It is a breach of the ecclesiastical law on the part of a burial board to permit any person to perform the burial service in the consecrated portion of their cemetery unless such person be authorised by the incumbent to do so, and, a fortiori, unless he be a nesament to do so, and, a fortiorf, unless he be a person "duly qualified." On Unconsecrated Ground, ]—The ordinary cannot compel an incumbent by ecclesiastical consure to perform the burial service on unconsecrated ground in which the only entrance to the vault is to be found. Rugg v. Kingsmill, 5 Moore, P. O. (Kas.) 79; 37 L. J., Ecc. 18; L. R. 2 P. C. 59; 18 L. T. 94.

3. BURIAL BOARDS.

Authority for forming.]—The 15 & 16 Vict. e.85, authorising the formation of a burial board in a parish, is applicable to a parish not having separate overseers, no resparately maintaining its poor. The interpretation clause extends the meaning of the word to places not parishes, having separate overseers and separately maintaining resparate overseers and separately maintaining their own poor, but does not exclude parishes which for any reason do not fulfil those conditions. Rep. v. Sudabery Burial Bloor El. Bl. & El. 264; 27 L. J., Q. B. 232; 4 Jur. (S.S.) 948; 6

Appointment of, 1—The existence of a legally constituted burial board for the whole of a parish, does not prevent the vestry of an ecclesiastical district formed out of such parish under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, and which does not separately maintain its own poor, from legally appointing a burial board for such district under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 12. Reg. v. Trabridge Occracers, 53 L. J., Q. B. 488; 13 Q. B. D. 339; 51 L. T. 179; 33 W. R. 24; 48 J. P. 740—C. A.

Under Local Act. —By a local act for making a township a distinct parish, it was enacted that a new church and burial-place adjoining should be the parish church and churchyard of the parish, and a vestry was constituted for preserving better order in the parish, and for other enumerated purposes relating to the church. On a mandamus to convene a meeting of this vestry for determining whether a burial-ground should be provided under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134:—Held, that this vestry was "a vestry elected under the provisions of a local act," within 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 52. Reg. v. Peters, 6 El. & Bl. 226; 25 L. J., Q. B. 271; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 424; 4 W. R. 480.

Purchase of Parish Land by—Payment into Court—Gosts.]—A burial board duly constituted under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, and the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, agree to purchase parish lands on the terms of paying an annual sum, the principal to be secured either on the land or as a charge on the church-into or poor-rate. On petition to carry out this agreement:—Held, that the money must be paid into court in a gross sum, the dividends to be paid to the vendors until invested in land, and the costs to be paid by the burial board. Semble, the court will not sanction a perpetual charge. Barraon, Jarra, 3 W. R. 633.

Consent of Ecclesiastical Commissioners to use of Parish Land for Cemetery.]—See Watford Burial Beard, Ex parte, col. 1339.

Parish divided.]—Where a part of a parish may, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 12, appoint a burial board for such part, severed from the rest of the parish, the rest of the parish may, by implication, appoint a separate burial board of its own. Viner v. Tonbridge Churchwardens 2 El & El 9; 28 L. J., M. C. 251; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1298; 7 W. R. 558.

The mere fact that a parish has been divided into three separate parishes for all ceclesiastical purposes, under 58 dec. 3, c. 45, does not prevent the vestry of the old parish from appointing a burial board, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 8, 5, 10; and a burial board having been appointed from the old parish, and it not appearing that either of the new parishes had appointed a burial board mader 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, 8, 5, the court granted a peremptory mandamus to the overseers of the old parish to pay to the burial board old parish to pay to the burial board out of the poor rates of the entire parish the expenses which they had incurred. Heg. v. Wallot Overseers, 2 B, & 8, 555; 31 L. J., M. C. 217; 6 L. T. 320; 10 W. R. 530

A burial board of a parish comprising within its limits several townships, each having separate overseers of the poor, and separately maintaining its own poor, cannot apportion the sums to be contributed by the various townships, unless they bring themselves within the provisions of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 11, in which case the consent of a secretary of state is rendered a necessary element to their proceedings by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 9. Reg. v. Wright, 8 Jur. (s.s.) 260; 5 L. T. 345; 10 W. R. 86.

Where a parish has been divided into separate parishs for ecclesiastical purposes under 58 Geo. 3, e. 45, and the vestry of the old parish collectively has appointed a burial board and established one burial-ground for the whole parish, the vestry of one of the new parishes may also appoint a burial board under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, 8, 5. Rey. V. Walcat, St. Sucithn Coerseers, 2 B. & S. 511; 31 L. J., M. C. 221; 6 L. T. 325; 10 W. R. 602.

Joinder of Parish for Ecclesiastical Purposes,]—Where two parishes or places, each maintaining its own poor, are united together for ecclesiastical purposes, a burial board for the whole district, appointed by the vote of the vestry, or meeting in the nature of a vestry, is properly constituted by virtue of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, read in connection with 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, although this would have been otherwise under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85. Reg. v. Calcabill Decreasers, 2 B. & S. 825; 31 L. J., Q. B. 219; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 226; 7 L. T. 244.

Election of Board.]—In a parish under a local act, a body called the select vestry of the parish had the functions of a board of guardians. There was also a general vestry having the management of the general parochial affairs of the parish: Held, that the members of a burial board for the parish, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, s. 7, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 83, ss. 10, 11, 52, were to be elected by the general vestry having the management of the general parochial affairs, and not by the body created by the local act. Reg. v. Gladstone, 7 El. & Bl. 375; 26 L. J., Q. B. 213; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 441; 5 W. R. 530.

— Filling up Vacancies.]—By 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 12, vacancies in a burial board may be filled up when and as the vestry shall think fit.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 4, every vacancy shall granted to the vicar of the parish, under 51 Geo. 3, be filled up by the vestry within one month after the vacancy; and in case of neglect, the vacancy may be filled up by the burial board :-Held. that the vestry might fill up a vacancy in the board at any time before the burial board did so, though not within one month after the vacancy, Heg. v. South Weald Overseers, 5 B. & S. 391; 33 L. J., M. C. 193; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1099; 10 L. T. 498; 12 W. R. 873.

4. RATES.

When can be laid.]—Querc, whether, under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, a rate can be laid for the purpose of providing additional burying-ground. Reg. v. Abney or Leicestershire J.J., 2 C. L. R. 1488; 3 El. & Bl. 779; 23 L. J., M. C. 154; 18 Jur. 1052; 2 W. R. 489.

If it can, still a single rate, laid for purposes authorised by these acts, and also for purposes for which a church-rate can be laid only at common law, is bad. Ib.

Loans. ]-The vestry of a parish, one for ceclesiastical purposes, but divided into two parts for the relief of the poor and other temporal purposes, appointed a burial board, which borrowed a large sum for the formation of the burinl ground, and by deed charged the future rates to he levied on part A., and also the future rates to be levied on part B., for the relief of the poor of the parish or any part thereof, with the payment of the principal and interest. After a time a sum becoming due for an instalment of the loan and interest, the burial board apportioned the amount between the two parts in the proportion of the value of the property in each part as rated to the relief of the poor, and demanded payment of the overseers of each part for its respective portiou : -Held, that the charge was duly imposed by the deed, and the apportionment made on a correct principle. Reg. v. Coleshill Overseers, 34 L. J., Q. B. 96—Ex. Ch. Affirming 2 B. & S. 825 : 31 Q. B. 96—Ex. Ch. Affirming 2 B. & S. 825; 31 L. J., Q. B. 219; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 226; 7 L. T. 244.

5. CHURCHYARDS, CEMETERIES, AND BURIAL-GROUNDS

Grant of ]-A. conveyed a farm, with a meeting-house and burial-ground, vault and tomb thereon, to B, and C, in trust; as to the meetinghouse and burial-ground, to permit a society of Quakers to use the same, so long as they should pay a certain rent, and keep them in repair; and after the determination of that estate, as to the meeting-house and burial-ground, and from the execution of the conveyance, as to all the other property, and during the continuance of the estate, as to the rent to B., to keep the vault and tomb in repair, and to permit them to be used for the interment of A. and her family; and after the termination of that estate, to C. his heirs and assigns for ever : provided that the society might take part of the farm to build a new meeting-house upon if necessary:—Held, first, that the grant of the meeting-house and burial-ground was void by the Statute of Mortmain (9 Geo. 2, c. 36); secondly, that the limitation of the vault and tomb was not a charitable one. Doe d. Thompson v. Pitcher, 2 Marsh. 61; 6 Taunt. 359; 3 M. & S. 407.

c. 115, s. 2, part of the waste of the manor for a burial-ground. To a bill filed on behalf of the parishioners setting up a customary right to this part of the waste as a village green, and seeking to set aside the grant, a demurrer was overruled.

Waste.]-To convert land into a cemetery is waste, Cregan v. Cullen, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 339.

Injunction to restrain.]-A., holding meadow and pasture lands, under a lease of lives renewable for ever, demised a part of the premises to B. for a similar term, with a covenant to keep and deliver up the premises in tenantable order. &c., and with a power of surrender at the end of every three years. The assignees of B.'s interest being about to convert the premises into a public cemetery, the representatives of A. obtained an injunction to prevent them. Semble, the proposed alteration of the property would amount to waste at common law. Hunt v. Brown, San, & Sc. 179.

Parties to Action. ]-The lay rector of a parish. in respect of his freehold property in the parish church and churchyard, can maintain an action in the High Court against a trespasser. A person. not resident in a parish, but owning property within it, in respect of which he pays parish rates, is a "parishoner" and entirled to sue as such. Batter v. Grelge, 58 L. J., Ch. 549; 41 Ch. D. 507; 60 L. T. 802; 37 W. R. 540; 53 J. P. 501.

____ Jurisdiction.]—The Ecclesiastical Court having full jurisdiction to entertain an action and grant relief in respect of the interference with a churchway-such as a pathway within a parish churchyard-forming an approach for the parishioners to their parish church, the High Court will not exercise jurisdiction in respect of such an interference at the suit of a parishioner.

Marriott v. Turpley, 9 Sim. 279; 7 L. J., Ch.

Distance from Dwelling-house.]-The 18 & 119 Viet. c. 128, which provides that no burialground shall be within 100 yards of a dwellinghouse without the consent of the owner or occupier, applies to all burial-grounds, private as well as public. Greenwood v. Wadsworth, 43 L. J., Ch. 78; L. R. 16 Eq. 288; 29 L. T. 88; 21 W. R. 722.

The defendant, in 1865, obtained leave from the home secretary to convert a piece of land containing twenty acres into a cemetery. He could not succeed in doing so, and the land remained unaltered. In 1876 an attempt was made to get up a company for the purpose, but the attempt failed. In the following year the plaintiff, who was owner of a dwelling-house within 100 yards of the nearest part of the land, wrote to the defendant to the effect that, unless he would give an undertaking not to use any part of the land for a cemetery, he should take legal proceedings. The defendant replied to the effect that he had no present intention of converting the land into a cometery; that he would not give any undertaking not to do so if he Out of Waste.]—The ecclesiastical commissioners, as loads of a manor in a parish would give the plaintiff two months notice of profits ratable from the sales ought to be his intention to do so; and he stated that included in the arising value of the cemetery. he should not bury within 100 yards of the plaintiff's house without consent. The plaintiff thereupon commenced an action, and Bacon, V.C., granted an interlocutory injunction restraining the defendant from using, for burial or for a cemetery, the ground in question, or any part thereof:—Held, that the injunction must be dissolved, for that there was no such threat or intention to use any part of the ground for a cemetery as to warrant the interference of the court by injunction, supposing such use to be wilawful. Cooley (Lord) v. Byas, 5 Ch. D. 944; 37 L. T. 238; 26 W. R. 1—C. A.

Held, also, that an injunction in the above form could not, in any case, have been supported, for that, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 9, a cemetery may come within 100 yards of a house, the only thing prohibited being actual burial within that limit. Ib.

Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 9, "dwellinghouse" does not include the curtilage, and the specified distance must be measured from the walls of the dwelling-house. Wright v. Wallasey Local Board, 56 L. J., Q. B. 259; 18 Q. B. D. 783; 52 J. P. 4.

Division between Consecrated and Unconseorated Portions.]-Under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, extending 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, to England, and enabling local boards of health to set apart burial grounds, and to divide the consecrated and unconsecrated parts :—Held, that a division twelve inches high was sufficient, and, therefore, that the ground was in a fit state for consecration. Reg. v. Ticerton Local Board, 6 W. R.

Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85-Price of Site-Charity Land. ]—A burial board, being duly constituted under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, made a report to the vestry in accordance with that act, in which it was erroneously represented, while reporting the merits of two rival sites, that one of such sites, being land held by the parish on charitable trusts, would cost the parish nothing. The vestry thereupon voted in favour of taking the land. This land was, in point of fact, belonging to the parish, and was held on charitable trusts for objects within the parish, but not for general parish purposes :-Held, that the report of the board was erroneous, and that the amount of the price was one of the terms which the court would consider and decide upon an application under s. 29. Egham Burial Board, In rc, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 956. Semble, that, if the land had been held for the general purposes of the parish, no price would have been required by the court to be paid.

Held, that the approval of the vestry, being taken on a misstatement of an important point, was a mere nullity, and must be taken over again. Ib.

- Wreath, with Glass Shade and Wire Protection.]- The defendants, a burial board, had provided a burial-ground under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85. By s. 33 of that act the burial board are empowered to sell the exclusive right of burial in any part of their burial-ground, the right of constructing any vault or place of burial, and also the right of creeting any monument, gravestone, tablet, or monumental inscription in such burial-ground. By s. 3s the general management, regulation, and control of the burial-ground are vested in the burial board. For the purpose of burying a deceased daughter, the plaintiff purchased from the defendants, and they conveyed to him, "the exclusive right of burial" in a grave-space in their burial-ground in perpetuity; and they also granted him the and subject to the, in tales for the company:— Light to erect a gine come on the grave. It held, that the company was liable to be rated afterwards placed upon the grave a wreath, and as an occupier of the cemetery, and that the to protect it, a glass shade covered with a wire frame. It was the general rule of the defendants never to allow the placing of such glas shades on the graves in their burial-ground, and, accordingly, the defendants removed the glass shade and wire frame without the cousent of the plaintiff :- Held, that the plaintiff had only acquired such rights as, under s. 33, the defendants were empowered to sell; that such rights did not include a right to place the glass shade and wire covering on the grave; and that, in the exercise of the control vested in them by s. 38, the defendants were entitled to remove the same. Erection of Tombstone with Inscription. ]-The daughter of a Wesleyan minister was buried in the churchyard of the parish where her father resided. The incumbent of the parish refused to allow a stone with an inscription describing the deceased as daughter of the "Revd." H. K., "Wesleyan Minister," to be erected over the "The Revd." before "H. K., Wesleyan Minister," in the inscription, which was otherwise unobjectionable, was not a sufficient justification for the incumbent's refusal to allow the tombstone to be erected within the churchyard. In 1866 the corporation, being authorised to take a portion of the burial-ground under an improvement act, served upon the rector, ordinary, and patron of the parish the usual notice to treat, and upon a reference to arbitration a sum of money was awarded for compensation. The corporation subsequently refused to pay, upon the ground that the fee-simple of the land reverted to the corporation, upon its being closed against burials, and the use for which it was dedicated having come to an end :- Held, that by the act of parliament, followed by the sentence of consecration, the land was dedicated for ever to the use of a burial-ground, and there was no reversion of the fee to the corporation; that, if necessary, the court would presume a conveyance of the legal estate by the corporation. Cumpbell v. Liverpool Corporation, L. R. 9 Eq. 579; 21 L. T. 814; 18

Land purchased in 1809 for an additional burial-ground was vested in the rector and churchwardens in trust for the inhabitants of the parish, and the burial fees were received by the rector from 1809 to 1849, when part of the land was taken by a railway company, and the purchase-money paid into court. A petition was presented by the rector praying for payment to him of the dividends on the investments representing the purchase-money. A second petition was presented by the parishioners, praying for a scheme :- Held, that the rector was entitled scheme:—neta, that he recor was channed to the dividends. St. Martin's, Birmingham (Rectar), Ew parte, 40 L. J., Ch. 69; L. R. 11 Eq. 23; 23 L. T. 575; 19 W. R. 95. A rector who has enjoyed the right to burial fees from a burial-ground, the freehold of which is vested in trustees, is the person entitled under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 70, to the receipt of the rents and profits. Ib.

By an act reciting the insufficiency of an existing churchyard, the rector and churchwardens and other persons were constituted trustees, and empowered to enlarge the existing chnrehyard and to buy land for an additional burial-ground, to be conveyed to the rector and churchwardens for the use of the inhabitants of the parish. In 1849, a portion of the land purchased under the act was taken by a railway company, and the purchase-money paid into court. The burial-ground was subsequently closed for burials :- Held, that, inasmuch as the land was intended as an addition to the churchyard, the rights of the rector therein were the same as his rights in the old churchyard, so far as they were not affected by the act under which the land was purchased, and that he was entitled to the dividends on the fund in court so long as it remained there. Ib.

A burial-ground provided by act of parliament, but of which the rector was the freeholder, was closed by order in council. Subsequently a portion of the land was taken for public purposes, and a sum paid into court ;-Held, that inasmuch as the freehold was in the rector, and he received the burial fees, he was cutifled to receive the

The purchase money payable by a railway company on taking part of a burial ground in the metropolis, which had been closed by order in council, was paid into court. Upon two petitions, one presented by certain church trustees, to whom the burial fees would have been payable if the ground had remained open, praying payment of the fund to them, the other by the attorncy-general, asking that the moneys might be applied to charitable purposes :-Held, that the trusts of the closed ground were merely suspended, and the fund must be paid out to the church trustees. Right to enter upon. ]-A by-law of a cometery prohibited a discharged servant from being admitted to the cemetery, except by special leave of the directors, and it anthorised his removal. D., the owner of a grave, employed W., a discharged servant, to do some work :- Held, that there was nothing unreasonable in the by-law, and that W. was rightly excluded by force from the cemetery. Martin v. Wyatt, 48 J. P. 215.

- Of Sexton. - Where a new consecrated burial-ground and chapel have been provided for a parish, under 16 & 17 Vict. c 134, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, the parish sexton has a right, at reasonable and proper times and places, and in a reasonable and proper way, to dig the graves of parishioners in the burial-ground, and ring the chapel bell at their funerals, and he may appoint a deputy to do it, who is not liable to an action at the suit of the burial board for entering under such circumstances to do these acts, such board refusing permission on the ground that they are ready and willing to perform these duties by their own servants. On application for a mandamus to justices to hear a complaint against the rector of a district church, built under the provisions of the Church Building Acts, for burying in the churchyard attached to the church, contrary to an order in council :--Held, that such churchyard was not a cometery within s. 5, which contemplated only cometeries established by anthority of a special act, such as the commercial cemeteries enumerated in Schedule (B.) to 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85. Ib.

By a local act, a new church was built and became the parish church, and the old parish church was made a parochial chapel; afterwards, by an order in conneil, the parish burial-ground, which adjoined the old church, was shut up in 1853, and a cemetery was provided; in 1863, by an order in council, part of the parish was assigned to the parochial chapel, and marriages, baptisms, churchings and burials allowed to be performed therein :-Held that the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 10, did not vest the burial-ground in the incumbent of the chapel. - Sale of. ]-By the St. Saviour's, Southwark (Church Rate Abolition) Act, 1883, after reciting that, certain land was then vested in trustees upon trust to apply the income for the purposes therein mentioned, the land was (ss. 6 & 7) vested in the trustees appointed by the act, upon trust to apply the income for purposes corresponding to those of the original trust; and, by s. 9, the trustees were empowered to sell the land or let it on building or other leases. The land had formerly been used as a burial-ground, but in 1853 it was closed as such by an Order in Council, and thus became a "disused burial-ground." By s. 3 of the Disused Burial-Grounds Act, 1884, building on any disused burial-ground is prohibited, but s. 5 enacts that nothing in the act contained "shall apply to any burial-ground which has been sold or disposed of under the authority of any act of parliament." In 1885, the trustees, under the act of 1883, put the land up for sale by auction describing it in the particulars as "building land," and stating in the conditions that, although it was a disused burial-ground, they believed that it came within s. 5 of the act of 1884, and that they had therefore power under the act of 1888 to sell it as building ground. The property was knocked down to Messrs. O., who signed the contract and paid the deposit. The purchasers, who bought for building purposes, having refused to complete on the ground has building on the land was expressly pro-hibited by the act of 1884—Held, on a sum-mons by the trustees under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, that the act of 1883 did not constitute a sale or disposition "under the authority of any act of parliament," and that, having regard to the act of 1884, the contract could not be enforced against the purchasers. R. 395. township of W., was used as the burial-ground for the whole parish until 1854, when it was closed by order in council, and a burial board for the township of W. was formed :—Held, that, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 18, where a burial-ground is closed by order in council, if it is a churchyard, it must be kept in order by the churchwardens, and, if it be a cemetery formed by a burial board then by the burial board : and that therefore the ground in question, being a churchyard, was to be kept in order, not by the burial board, but by the churchwardens. Roy. v. Bishon Wearmouth Burial Board. 5 O. B. D.

Held, also, that the expenses of keeping the ground in order were to be repaid to the churchwardens out of the rate for the township of W. being a place having a separate poor-rate within, which the ground was situate, and not out of the rates of all the townships composing the parish of which it had been the burial-ground. ____ Maintenance of Walls, &c.]—Sect. 128 of the Burials Act, 1855, provides that, upon the discontinuance of burials in churchyards, the churchwardens shall maintain such churchyards in decent order, and repair the walls and fences, and "the costs and expenses shall be repaid by the overseers upon the certificate of the . churchwardens' :- Held, that a churchwarden. need not pay such costs and expenses out of hisown booket before calling upon a vestry, as overseers, to provide them, or make a rate for that purpose; and that a letter or requisition by the churchwarden setting out the amounts expended. was a sufficient certificate. Laying out as Public Garden . - Where a faculty had been decreed to issue allowing a churchyard, closed for burials and containing two private vaults, one in repair and the other out of repair, to be laid out as a public garden, subject to future order as to how such vaults were to be dealt with, the court made an order that there should be no interference with the vault in renair, but that the vault out of repair should be levelled with the ground and filled up. -Rule of the court in such cases. On an application for a faculty to sanction the appropriation of a portion of a churchyard, which had been closed for burials under an order in council, for the purpose of a public garden, the court authorised the construction of footpaths in such portion of the churchyard for the; convenience of the parishioners, and the erection of gates to give them access to it. For Burial in reserved Space. By an P. 95. order in conneil a churchyard was closed except as to burials in reserved grave spaces allotted to members of the families of parishioners:—Held, that a faculty for the reservation of a space in the churchyard for exclusive burial could be granted to a living non-parishioner, member of the family of a parishioner. Surgent, In re, 15 P. D. 168.

For Lighting Purposes. ]-In two cases of faculty, it appeared that, for the purpose of lighting two districts in the city of London with electric light, it was necessary that underground chambers should be constructed in two closed churchyards in the districts, there being no other places suitable for their construction, and that it was in the interest of the parishioners and public that electric light should be introduced in the districts :- Held, that the court had jurisdiction in its discretion to decree a faculty on each case anthorising the construction of such a clamber in the churchyard, and the use of the same as a transformer chamber for the term of twenty-oue years, subject to payment of a yearly rent to the rector and churchwardens of the parish. St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, In re. St. Benet Fink

Churchyard, Iu ra, [1803] P. 58. Dence Fine A local act of parliament provided that part of the parish church of St. Benet Fink in the City of London, and one-third part of the burial-ground of that parish, might be taken for the purposes of the act after notice, and should be vested in the corporation of the city of London, on such payment being made as in the act mentioned. By a subsequent local act it was provided that, on complying with certain directions therein contained, the corporation might take down the parish church of St. Benet Fink, or the part thereof not taken down under the last-mentioned act, and the site thereof, and the ground and soil thereof, and also the then present burial-ground of the said parish, and the freehold of the same in fee simple should be vested in the corporation free from all trusts and incumbrances whatsoever, and that, as soon as the site of the said church and the said burialground should be cleared, such portion of the same as was not otherwise appropriated under the act should remain for ever unbuilt upon, and unappropriated to any purpose except such ornamental purpose as the corporation, with the consent of the Bishop of London, might direct.

After the provisions of these acts as to the vesting of the churchyard of St. Benet Fink had become operative, the corporation of the city of London and the rector of the united parish of St. Peter-le-Poer with St. Benet Fink, and the churchwardens of St. Benet Fink, petitioned the court to decree a faculty for the construction in the churchyard of St. Benet Fink of an underground chamber to be used for the transformation of electricity :- Held, that the court was not precluded by the local acts relating to the churchyard from granting the faculty prayed for burials, and as to the provisoes to be inserted in such faculties. St. Gabriel, Fenchurch Street v. City of London Real Property Co., [1896]

- For widening Public Thoroughfare. ]-The vicar and churchwardens of a parish church in the city of London applied to the court to sanction an agreement between the vicar and the commissioners of sewers for the city of London to appropriate a portion of the parish ehurchyard, closed for burials, for the widening of an adjoining street. At the hearing of the application it was proved that the proposed widening would be of great convenience to the congregation of the church, and to the public generally : - Held, that the court had jurisdiction to authorise by faculty the appropriation of the portion of the churchyard required for the proposed widening of the street, so long as it should be used for the purpose, and the removal to a vanit to be constructed in the churchyard of all human remains disturbed in carrying out the human remains disturbed in carrying out the works authorised by the faculty. St. Botolph without Aldgate (Vivar) v. Parishioners (No. 1), [1892] P. 161.

- Removal of Remains.]-There being no room in the charehyard for the vault directed to be constructed as above mentioned, the court ordered the remains disturbed to be placed in the crypts of the church. The commissioners of sewers and the vicar and churchwardens subsequently petitioned the court to authorise the remains placed in the crypts under the order of the court, as well as certain other remains found in one of the crypts, to be removed to the City of London Cemetery, at Little Ilford in Essex, and it appeared that such removal was expedient on sanitary grounds :- Held, that the court had jurisdiction to authorise the remains to be removed as prayed, and to be reinterred in the consecrated portion of the Hford Cemetery.

Where application is made to the court for a faculty to authorise human remains interred in a church or disused churchyard to be removed therefrom, and re-interred in consecrated ground elsewhere, the court, if it grants the faculty, will insert in it provisions authorising members of families whose relatives are buried in such church or churchyard to remove the remains of their relatives to any particular churchyard or consecrated cemetery selected by them for the purpose of reinterment :- In a faculty authorising, on sanitary grounds, the removal of human remains interred in a parish church, provisions were, by the directions of the court, inserted exempting from the operation of the faculty several ancient family vaults. St. Helews, Bishopsgute (Rector) v. Parishioners, [1892] P. 259.

The powers for preventing vaults or burial-places becoming or continuing dangerous or injurious to public health, which her Majesty is empowered to exercise by order in conneil under s. 23 of the Burial Act, 1857, are not inconsistent with the court of the ordinary possessing exclusive jurisdiction to authorise the removal and re-interment of remains buried in consecrated For Footpaths.]—Observations by the burial-places or vaults in consecrated ground. chancellor of the diocese of London as to the Where, therefore, an order in council made under the above act directed the churchwardens of a parish church to remove remains buried beneath the church to some other consecrated burial-ground, and there to re-bury them, and it appeared that such removal was advisable on sanitary grounds, the court, on the application of the rector and churchwardens of the parish church, decreed a faculty to issue, giving authority for the removal and reinterment of the remains, but confining the re-interment to a place of burial to be specified in such faculty, and containing provisoes as to the mode and manner in which the removal and reinterment should be carried out, and for safeguarding the interests of the relatives of persons whose remains were proved to have been buried beneath mans were proved to have been buried beneath the church. In 1854 a local act was obtained to enable the granting of building leases of a certain portion of the cemetery belonging to a parish, which had not previously (it was then supposed) been used for the purposes of interment, and which was particularly described in a schedule to the act. The trustees, under the powers of the act, contracted for the sale of the land so described; but the contractor, on making excavations, found coffins and remains of bodies therein. In 1858. on representation that these did not exceed twenty in number, a licence of faculty issued from the consistory court for the removal of such coffins and remains, in order to their decent and proper interment in the inclosed part of the cemetery. Subsequently, without any further authority, between 400 and 500 more coffins were disinterred —Held, that the vicar and churchwardens, to whom the faculty had been directed, land exceeded the powers confided to them by the ordinary; that they must return the faculty to the registry, be admonished to re-inter decently all the remains that had been disinterred, and to refrain from disturbing the remains of the dead which had been interred in any portion of the cemetery; and that they must pay the costs of the proceedings. St. Pan-eras Vestry v. St. Martin-in-the-Field (Vicar), 6 Jur. (N.S.) 540.

18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, does not apply to Private Burial Grounds.—The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 18, has reference to parochial burial-grounds only, and does not apply to private burial-grounds. Reg. v. The 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 23, as to closing burial-grounds, does not apply to land in which burials may have taken place, but which has ceased to be applied to such a purpose, and which has changed its character and been treated by the owner and occupier in all respects a private property; but applies only to ground which is a burial-ground defact or de jure in use or in trust. Re-interment.]—The court is accustomed in proper cases to grant faculties for the removal of remains buried in consecrated ground for the sole purpose of such remains being re-interred in other consecrated ground, and would not be justified in granting a faculty for enabling remains to be removed after burial for cremation. #### 6. FEES.

Right at Common Law.]—No burial fee is due at common law, but it may be due by custom in any particular parish. Andrews v. Cawthorne, Willes, 536.

Vicar may specially Contract.]—A vicar of a parish, being frecholder of the church and churchyard, may make a special contract for the payment of a fee, other than the customary burial fee (if any), for the burial of a non-parishioner in a particular vault in the parish church. Nerille v. Bridger, 43 L. J., Ex. 147; L. R. 9 Ex. 214; 30 L. T. 500; 22 W. R. 740.

Right of Incumbent to.]-Before 51 Geo. 3, c. 151, the incumbent or minister of the parish of St. Marylebone (which was a lay rectory), by himself or his curate, performed the duty of all burials in the parish, and received the surplice fees thereon, as part of the profits of the living. By this act the vestry of the parish was empowered to provide an additional cemetery for the parish, and erect a chapel thereon : and. by s. 41, the lay rector was empowered to appoint a burying minister to officiate in burying the dead in the cemetery, a reader to perform divine service and preach in the chapel, and (if it should seem right to the vestry) another minister to preach in the chapel, such reader and preacher to receive for their salaries such sums as the vestry should appoint. By s. 89, nothing therein contained was to lessen or alter the title of the lay rector, or the person for the time being entitled to the rectory and advowson, to the ecclesiastical dues, oblations and obventions belonging thereto. By 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 21, it was enacted that the parish should remain and be one entire and undivided parish for all ecclesiastical and civil purposes. By 6 Geo. 4. c. 124 (whereby the four districts were made district rectorics for certain purposes), the district rectors were empowered to solemnise marriages and baptisms, and take all fees for the same; but nothing therein contained was to alter or affect the law respecting burials or burial fees within the parish. In 1824 W. was presented by the Crown (in whose hands the lay rectory then was) to the chapel built under 51 Geo. 3, c. 151, and thenceforth performed all the burials there, and received the burial fees, which he paid over to the rector of the parish until 1839, when the defendant, by direction of the vestry, received and retained them :-Held, that the rector was entitled to recover the amount of such fees in an Emperor, 6 M. & W. 639; 10 L. J., Ex. 50.

By s. 49. the vestrymen were empowered to settle the rates and fees for burial in the cemetery, and to alter and amend the same. By s. 50, the vestrymen were prevented from reducing the burial fees below the amount payable in the then cometeries of the parish. By s. 71, the vestry was empowered to borrow 150,000*l*, upon the credit of the rates and burial fees, and to assign any portion of such rates or fees to the parties advancing the money. In 1733, the then minister and the parish referred to a third party the settlement of the minister's fees, and a table of fees was accordingly prepared by the referee. From 1733 down to 1838 a fee of 1s. 6d. was paid by the parish officers to the rector for the burial of a pauper in any of the cemeteries of the parish. From 1835 to 1847 the 1s. 6d, had been paid to the rector, and Is, to the clerk and sexton, in pursuance of a table of fees settled by the secretary, containing the following item:—"Paupers from the workhouse, 2s. 6d." The defendant had given orders for the burial of certain paupers in the cemetery of the new church. The burial service was not performed by the rector of St. Marylebone, or any of his curates, but by the reader of one of the chapels in the parish :— Held, that the fees in question were due only by immemorial custom, or by some act of parliament; that no such immemorial custom was stated, nor was the court empowered by the parties to infer as a jury the existence of such a custom; and that no such fees were due by virtue of the act of parliament. Spry v. Gallop, 16 M. & W. 716; 16 L. J., Ex. 218.

In 1823 a piece of ground in the parish of St. Margaret, Leicester, was purchased by subscription of the inhabitants, and conveyed to the commissioners for building new churches, who erected a chapel on one part of it, and inclosed the other for a burial-ground. In 1827 the the other for a burial-ground. In 1827 the chanel and burial-ground were consecrated. In 1828 an order in council was made and published, whereby, after reciting the 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 16, which empowers the commissioners to divide populous parishes into two or more distinct and separate parishes; also reciting the 21st section, which empowers the commissioners to divide populous parishes into ecclesiastical districts; also reciting that the commissioners had made a representation to the Crown respecting the increase of population and insufficient church accommodation for the parish; also reciting that it appeared to the commissioners expedient that an ecclesiastical district should be assigned to the new chapel under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, and that the consent of the bishop had been obtained; his majesty ordered that the proposed divisions should be made and effected, according to the provisions of the acts. The boundaries of the district were enrolled under 58 Geo. 3, c. 143, s. 22. No order in council was made respecting the performance of the offices of the church in the chapel, or the appropriation of the fees payable in respect thereof, nor did the commissioners make any order as to whether the fees for burials were to be reserved to the incumbent of the parish, or assigned to the curate of the chapel, or whether burials should be performed in such chapel. In 1848 the corporation of Leicester established a cemetery within the borough, under shaw v. Wigan Buriat Board, 42 L. J., Q. B. 11 Vict. c. 2, by which the burial service over 137; L. R. S Q. required to perform the service, and would have been entitled to the fees, if the interment had taken place in his parish or ecclesiastical district:—Held, that the order in council was made under the 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 21, and not under the 59 Geo. 3, c. 143, s. 16, and that upon enrolment of the boundaries the chapelry became a separate district parish for all ecclesiastical purposes, and that after the death of the then incumbent of the original parish the curate of the district parish was entitled to the fees for burial, both in his parish and in respect of deceased persons removed therefrom for interment in the cemetery. Edgell v. Burnaby. Edgell v. Burnaby. 8 Ex. 788.

The ancient parish of St. Mary comprised (inter alia) the district parish of St. Mark, attached to the district church of which was a churchyard wherein the remains of the inhabitants of St. Mark were interred. In 1852 a burial board was formed for the whole of the parish of St. Mary, and in 1853 the churchyard of the district parish of St. Mark was closed by order of the secretary of state, and the remains of the inhabitants of St. Mark were thenceforth interred in the burial ground provided by the burial board of St. Mary. Such burial ground was consecrated in 1854, and from that time became the burial ground of St. Mary. In 1875 a church called St. James was built and consecrated in the district parish of St. Mark, and a distinct part of the district parish of St. Mark assigned to it by order in council. By the sentence of consceration and order in council authority was given to solemnise and perform burials, &c., at the church of St. James, the fees to arise therefrom to be paid and belong to the minister of such church for the time being. The incumbent of St. James having brought an neumbert of St. James having brought an action claiming to perform the burial service in the defendants' burial ground over the bodies of the inhabitants of St. James buried therein, and to receive the fees for such services :- Held, thatthe district of St. James was a "new parish" within s. 5 of 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, and that the plaintiff, as incumbent of the district, was entitled to the right claimed under that section and s. 14 of 19 & 20 Vict, c. 104, on the death of the incumbent of the ancient parish of St. Mary. Harris v. Lambeth Burial Board, 47 J. P.

In 1851, a church was built and consecrated, In 1852, an order in conneil under 59 Geo. 3 c. 134, s. 16, authorised services to be performed in the new church, assigned a district to it out of the ancient parish in which it was situated, and granted the incumbent the fees. There was then no burial ground in the district, and the persons dying in it continued to be buried as before in the churchyard of the parish. The plaintiff was appointed incumbent of this church in 1854, and in 1856 a burial ground for the whole parish was conscerated, the district of the new church contributing to the rates for providing it. A new rector of the parish was appointed in 1864 :- Held, that the district was a "new parish" within 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, and that the plaintiff, on the first, avoidance of the rectory, was entitled to the burial fees in respect of inhabitants buried within the parish. Gron-

_____Under Cemetery Acts. ]—A cemetery act company to the incumbent of the parish or other ecclesiastical district or division from which any body should be removed for interment in the cemetery, and directed that a portion of such fees should be paid over to the churchwardens or chapelwardens, to be by them applied among the persons entitled by law or custom to share in the burial fees receivable in such parishes or districts by the churchwardens or chapelwardens:

—Held, that the fees in respect of intermeuts from a district which had been created since the passing of the cemetery act under an order in council, conferring powers of marrying, churching and baptising, but silent as to burials, were payable to the incumbent of such district, and not to the incumbent of the mother parish. Vaughan v. South Metropolitan Cemetery Co., 1 J. & H. 256; 80 L. J., Ch. 256; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 159; 3 L. T. 727; 9 W. R. 228.

By a private act to establish a cemetery it was provided that certain fees should be paid by the cemetery company to the incumbent of the parish or other ecclesiastical district or division from which any body should be removed for the purpose of interment in the cemetery. also directed that a portion of such fees should be paid over by the churchwardens, or chapelwardens, to be by them applied among the persons entitled by law or custom to share in the burial fees receivable in such parishes or districts by the churchwardens or chapelwardens. After the passing of the act three separate ecclesiastical districts-one with, and the other two without, a burial ground—were formed out of the parish of Clapham, one of the parishes to which the act applied. Before the cemetery was established, the parish churchyard of Clapham was used as the place of burial of persons dying in the parish, and the vicar of Clapham for the time being was entitled to all fees of such burials :- Held, that the act applied to future ecclesiastical districts with or without burial places; and, therefore, that the incumbents of the three districts were entitled to the fees under the act, as against the vicar of Clapham. Bowger v. Stantial, 3 Ex. D. 315; 38 L. T. 271—C. A.

Under Burial Acts. ]—An incumbent of a district church to which a burial ground had been appropriated before 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, and which district has been carved out of a township which district has been carred out of a township having separate overseers, and maintaining its own poor, is entitled to all the fees formerly enjoyed in respect of burials in his district, for burial services performed by him in a new burial ground provided by the burial board of a parish ground provided by the build b

When an ecclesiastical district having a burialground has been divided into two districts, but no burial-ground has been allotted to the second district, the incumbent of the first created district is entitled to the fees for the burial of inhabitants of both districts. Ib.

Under the Burial Acts :- Held, that the incumbents of parish or district churches were not entitled to the burial fees in a cemetery provided under the Burial Acts, where those churches had not burial grounds attached to them in which the persons dying within the district would have been buried, as of right, if it had not been for the existence of the cemetery. Hornby v.

Towteth Burial Board, 31 Beav. 52; 31 L. J., Ch. 643; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 531; 6 L. T. 146; 10 W. R.

When a district, being part of a parish, has separate overseers of the poor and separately maintains them, such district is, for the purposes of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 13, to be regarded as a distinct parish. Ib.

A burial-ground attached to a district church. the right of interment in which was not confined to the inhabitants of the district, but could be purchased by any stranger :- Held, not to entitle the incumbent to any part of burial fees derived from a cemetery provided for the district under the Burial Acts. Ib.

In respect of Non-Parishioners. ]-The right to grant sepulture to strangers, which the incumbent might have exercised in the ancient churchyard of his parish, is not preserved to him under the act in the conscerated portion of a cemetery provided by the board, and no fees in respect thereof are payable to him by the board. Wood v. Headingley Burial Board, [1892] 1 Q. B. 713; 66 L. T. 90; 40 W. R. 390; 56 J. P. 326.

Duty of Burial Board to give Notice to Incumbent. -No duty rests upon a burial board to give notice to the incumbent of the parish to perform the funeral service at burials in the perform the functual service at ourists in the cemetery provided by a burial board under the Burial Act (15 & 16 Vict. c. 85), or to give notice to the incumbent that his services are not required under Osborne Morgan's Act (43 & 44 Vict. c. 41), such duty (if any) being in the friends of the deceased person. And the fees for performing the burial service are not payable to the incumbent by the board except in cases where he has actually performed the service or received such notice under Osborne Morgan's Act. Ih.

Separation of Parishes.]—Where a cemetery is formed by a burial board under the Burials Acts, 1852 and 1853, for a parish which never had any burial-ground, the incumbent of the parish is bound to perform the services in the consecrated part of the cemetery over bodies of parishioners and inhabitants of his parish, and is entitled to take any ecclesiastical fees which the board may collect in respect of such services. Hornby v. Toxteth Park Burial Board (31 Beav. Board, 56 L. J., Ch. 425; 34 Ch. D. 314; 56 L. T. 380; 35 W. R. 268.

Under private Act - Right of Vestry Recovery.]-Where by a private act of parliament, burial fees are to be collected and paid to the treasurer of the vestrymen for the purposes of the act and other parochial purposes, they are to be recovered by the burial board under s. 36 of the Burial Act, 1852, and paid to the vestry; and it is no answer to the claim of the vestry to say that the fees are insufficient to pay Warylebone Vestry, 64 L. Right of Sexton to. ] -- A sexton of a chapelry district constituted under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 16, is not, when the churchyard is closed, entitled to fees in respect of the barial of inhabitants in a burial ground provided pursuant to 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, for the pariel, their case for the establishment of a mortuary from which the district has been taken. Ormerod on the site proposal, directed that a family v. Hlaabburn Burial Board, 28 L. T. 438; 21 should issue for the crection of the mortuary, W. R. 539

But a sexton of a chapelry district constituted under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 16, and afterwards formed into a district parish under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, ss. 11 and 14, is entitled by virtue of the proviso in 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 5, to such fees. Ib.

Cucler 15 & 16 Vict. e. 85, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 114, parish clerks and sextons are entitled to perform, when necessary, the same functions and duties, and receive fees therefor in respension of the burnlas of the parishioners and inhabitants of the parishes of which they are clerks and extons, in the new burnla-ground provided by burnla boards mader those acts, and the burnla boards cannot deprive them of such fees by appointing other persons to do their duties. ——Formation of District by Annexation.]—Where, nucle nu order in conneil made under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, a portion of the parish of N. was detached therefrom and annexael to a neighbouring parish, and a common burial-ground was provided for the district comprising both parishes:—Held, that the sexton of the parish of N., duly appointed before the date of the order in council, was not entitled to the burial fees payable in respect of the portion detached from the parish of N. White v. Norwood Burial Boura, 55 L. J., Q. B. 63; 16 Q. B. D. 58; 54 L. T. 81; 34 W. R. 123; 59 J. P. 100.

Liability of Collectors.]—An action is not maintainable to recover a sum of money path to a churchwarden for burial dues, which he has paid over to the treasurer of the trustees of a chapel previously to the action. Horsfull v. Handley, 2 Moore, 5; 8 Tannt, 136.

An agreement having existed between the successive vients and churchwardens of a parish, that certain fees should be taken upon the burial of strangers in the churchyard, and divided equally between them, and an incoming vient rofused to accord to the agreement, and prevailed on the collector of the fees to pay over to him the whole of what he them had in his hands:—Held, that, the collector having received one-half of these fees to the use of the churchwardens, they were entitled to recover that moiety from the vicer. Littlewood v. Williams, 1 Marsh. 589; 8 Taunt, 277.

7. MORTUARIES.

Not within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 6, S.]—Mortuaries are not within the X & Will. 3, c. 6, s. 2, which authorises justices of the peace to adjudicate upon complaints of subtraction of small tithes, offerings, oblations and obventions. Applan v. Abbatt, 14 Q. B. 1; 18 L. J., Q. B. 314; 14 Jur. 314.

Faculty for Erection of, in Consecrated BurialGround.]—The rector, churchwardens, and burial board of an utbain parish applied for the grant of a faculty to authorise the creation of the parochial mortuary with a post-morten room attached, in a consecrated burial-ground stirate in a populous part of the parish, and closed for burials by order in council. The court, being of opinion that the petitioners had made out shees; and that the court had jurisdiction in their case for the establishment of a mortuary on the site proposed, directed that a faculty should issue for the erection of the mortuary, but directed that certain conditions to be specified in the faculty should be imposed with respect to the manner of using the mortuary. St. George's, Hanvier Square, Burial Board v. Hall, 5 P. D. 12.

The court, being of opinion that it was requisite for the health of the parish that a northary should be provided, and also that the churchyard was the most suitable site for its erection, decided that it had jurisliction to grant a faculty for the creetion of a mortuary on a portion of the churchyard, with a room to be appropriated to post-mortem examinations. Manuscat v. St. Matthew, Bethinal Green, 4 P. D. 46.

8. CREMATION.

Generally.]—Whether it is lawful to burn a dead body even if the deceased by his will directed some person so to do, quare. Williams v. Williams, 51 L. J., Ch. 385; 20 Ch. D. 659; 46 L. T. 275; 30 W. R. 438; 15 Cox, C. G. 39; 46 J. P. 726.

To barn a dead body, instead of barying it, is not a misdemensor, unless it is so done as to amount to a public nuisance. If an inquest ought to be held upon a dead body, it is a misdemeanor to dispose of the body so as to prevent the coroner from holding the inquest, Rey. v. Price, 53 L. J. M. C. 51; 12 Q. B. D. 247; 33 W. R. 45, n.; 15 Cox, C. C. Ss9, And Rey. v. Schphenson, 53 L. J. M. C. 176; 13 Q. B. D. 331; 52 L. T. 267; 33 W. R. 44; 49 J. P. 486.

After Burial.]—The court would not be justified in granting a faculty for enabling remains to be removed, after burial in consecrated ground, for cremation. Diwon, In re, [1892] P. 386; 56 J. P. 481.

Disposal of Cremated Remains.]—But, semble, where there lad been a previous cremation, in pursuance of directions left by the deceased, there is no logal objection to the ashes resulting therefrom being buried in consecrated ground, with the use of the buriel service. The Semble, that cremated remains cannot lawfully be intered in or under a parish church except under the authority of a faculty from the ordinary. Korr. In re. [1894] P. 284.

The vicar and churchwardens of a parish church, built under the Church Building Act, 1818, and closed for burials by virtue of an order in council under the Burial Act, 1853, concurred in an application, by the widow of a parishioner whose dead body had been cremated, for a faculty to authorise the formation of a niche in the wall of the church inside the church and above the level of the floor, and the permanently placing therein of a scaled urn containing the cremated ashes of such dead body. A certificate was brought in to the effect that the vestry of the parish was in favour of the remains being interred beneath the church : -Held, that the burial of the cremated ashes of a dead body in the church had not been prohibited by the Church Building Act, 1818, the Public Health Acts, 1848 and 1875, or by the order in council closing the church under the Burial Act, 1853, the provisions in those acts as to "burial" not applying to the burial of the

Held, also, that the court, having ascertained from the Home Office that no objection on sanitary grounds was entertained by the Home Secretary to the interment of the urn containing the remains below the floor of the church, was prepared to decree the issue of a faculty for the urn and its contents being so interred below the church, subject to a proper fee for the interment being paid to the incumbent of the parish, Ib.

1. CONSTITUTION, POWERS AND LIABILITIES. Constitution of Select Vestry.]-If, in pleading, it is stated, "that from time immemorial there had been a select vestry, composed of a certain number of select persons," it is incumbent on the party making that averment to prove that the vestry had consisted of a definite number. Berry v. Banner, Peake, 157; 3 R. R. 674.

On an issue, whether a churchwarden ought to be elected by the select vestry, a record between a former churchwarden and another person is admissible. Ib.

A select vestry cannot be constituted by a faculty from the bishop. Ib.

A custom that there shall be a select vestry of an indefinite number of persons, continued by election of new members made by itself, and not by the parishioners, is valid in law. Golding v. Fenn, 7 B. & C. 765; 1 M. & Ry. 647; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 178.

By an ancient custom, a select vestry was to consist of the rector, churchwardens, and those who had served the office of upper churchwarden. and other parishioners to be elected by the vestrymen. The practice in modern times had been to elect as vestrymen those parishioners only who had been fined for not serving the office of upper churchwarden :- Held, that they were good vestrymen. Rew v. Brain, 3 B. & Ad. 614: L. J., M. C. 58.

The magistrates were bound, under 59 Geo. 8. c. 12, to appoint all persons nominated and elected by the parishioners to be members of the select vestry, and had no discretion to v. Kent JJ., 4 N. & M. 299; 4 L. J., M. C. 7. S. C., nom. Rox v. Adams, 2 A. & E. 409.

An inhabitant may be a member of a select vestry, although he is a magistrate acting within the parish. 1b.

An overseer may be a select vestryman, by virtue of an election by the parishioners, although he is also a member of the select vestry by virtue of his office. Ib.

Where Parish has been subdivided. ]-In parishes which have adopted the 1 & 2 Will, 4, c. 60, the number of vestrymen to be allotted out at the first election of vestrymen under that act is one-third of those vestrymen who, at the time of the election, were in actual existence, and not one-third of a complete vestry, deducting from such third the number of the vacancies. Rev v. St. Pancras Churchwardens, 3 N. & M. 425; 1 A. & E. 80; 3 L. J., M. C. 90.

In parishes within the metropolitan police district, or the city of London, or in which the rated householders exceed 3,000 persons, persons to be eligible as vestrymen, and to be capable of acting as such within 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, must be resident householders, rated upon a rental of 40l.; but it is not necessary that such rating should be in respect of property in their own occupation. Ib.

So. as to eligibility in parishes not being within the metropolitan police district, or the city of London. Tb.

A parish is not "divided into districts for A parish is not "divided into districts for ecclesiastical or other purposes," within 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 22, where a small portion of the parish is annexed to a chapelry, created in an adjoining parish, or where the parish has been, for the convenience of collecting the poor-rates, divided into four districts, which districts have there adopted by the returning officer of a borough (within which the parish is situated) for the purpose of taking the poll at an election for members of parliament, 1h.

An ancient parish was divided, by acts of parliament, into two parishes, St. Giles-in-the-Fields, and St. George, Bloomsbury, which were made separate and distinct for all purposes, except as to church, highway, and poor rates, and separate vestrymen were appointed for the new parishes. By a subsequent act for regula-ting the affairs of the joint parishes of St. Giles and St. George, and of the separate parishes of St. Giles and St. George, the vestry of each parish was to be composed of forty-two persons (besides the rector and churchwardens), elected by the vestrymen duly qualified. Each vestry was to appoint its own churchwardens and auditors, and make its own church-rates, and to manage some other affairs of the separate parish; and the vestrymen of the two parishes were to be the joint vestry of the parishes, and to appoint overseers and directors, and other officers, to manage the poor of the joint parish, to make its poor-rates, and to exercise other powers relative to the poor, and concerning the parishes jointly. Questions before the joint vestry were to be decided by a majority of the vestrymen present : -Held, that the parishioners of one of the parishes could not adopt separately the provisions of the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, for the election of their own vestry. Reg. v. Basset, 17 Q. B. 332.

Constitution in other Cases. ]-A local act empowered the vestrymen of a parish, or the major part of them, to remove the poor-law collector of the parish from his office :- Held, that the majority must be an actual majority of the vestrymen assembled, and that it was not sufficient at a meeting of thirty-five vestrymen for sixteen to vote for the removal and eleven against it, the remaining eight abstaining from voting altogether. Reg. v. Christchurch Overseers, 7 El. & Bl. 409; 27 L. J., M. C. 23; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1074; 5 W. R. 755—Ex. Ch.

parish was newly created by a local act, which provided for twenty-four vestrymen being chosen for the purpose of managing the affairs of the church, providing scavengers, &c. This vestry had always acted in all the affairs of the parish:—Held, that this vestry was the proper body to determine whether a burial-ground should be provided for the parish under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 51, Reg. v. Peters, 6 El. & Bl. 225; 25 L. J., Q. B. 271; 2 Jur. (N.s.) 424; 4 W. R. 480.

2. PROCEEDINGS OF VESTRY.

a. Westings

Notice of . - A committee had been appointed at a vestry duly convened, to report whether it would be expedient to enlarge the parish church. Some time afterwards, notice of another meeting of the vestry was given in the following terms : "Notice is hereby given, that a meeting will be held in the vestry room, on, &c., at nine o'clock precisely, to receive a report from the church committee, and to adopt such measures as may appear necessary for earrying that report into execution" :- Held, that this was a sufficient notice of the meeting under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 134 (the Church Building Acts), and 58 Geo. 3, c. 69. Blunt v. Harrood, 8 A. & E.

A notice was affixed by the churchwardens and overseers to the door of a parish church, on Sunday, the 25th of March, 1846, appointing a vestry meeting to be held on the succeeding Wednesday, to nominate officers of the parish for the ensuing year. A vestry was held, in pursuance of the notice, and the parish, after nominating the overseors, proceeded to elect two persons as surveyors of the highways:—Held, that this appointment of surveyors was invalid under 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. I, the notice of the meeting not having been given three days at least before the vestry meeting was held. Reg. v. Best, 2 New Sess. Cas. 655; 2 C. B. Rep. 90;

5 D. & L. 40; 16 L. J., M. C. 102; 11 Jur. 489.
Notice was given on a Friday for a vestry meeting to elect churchwardens on the following Tuesday. The vestry met and elected two churchwardens; but, in consequence of doubts as to the notice convening the vestry being in accordance with the provisions of the 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 1, another notice was given on the next Sunday, calling a vestry meeting for the same purpose on the following Thursday, on which day the inhabitants again met and elected the same churchwardens, who entered upon the office and performed its duties. Upon a rule for a same form that the characteristic states the characteristic states are the characteristic states and the same form the characteristic states are the characteristic states and the characteristic states are the characteristic states are the characteristic states and the characteristic states are the characteristi mandamus to the inhabitants to elect churchwardens, on the ground that both elections were invalid:—Held, without deciding which of the two was the valid election, that, assuming the first to be bad, the second was good. Reg. v. St. Faith, 25 L. J., Q. B. 168; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 212; 4 W. R. 267.

The 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 1, requiring notice of a "meeting of the inhabitants in vestry of or for any parish" to be given three days before the day to be appointed for holding it, by the publication of it on some Sunday, applies only to a common-law parish, and not to a district for ecclesiastical purposes created under the Church Ceclesiasical physics elected finder one chains Building Acts, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 134. Reg. v. Barrow, 10 B. & S. 674; L. R. 4 Q. B. 577; 20 L. T. 760; 17 W. R. 928.

- Adjournment. ] - Where notice of the purpose of a vestry meeting has been duly given, and that meeting has begun, but not completed, a certain business, and the meeting is regularly adjourned, such business may lawfully be completed at the adjourned meeting, though the notice for summoning such adjourned meeting does not state the purpose for which it is summoned. Scadding v. Lorant, 3 H. L. Cas. 418; 15 Jur. 955. S. C., in Q. B., 13 Q. B. 706, affirmed.

A vestry being about to be held for the election meeting would be held in the parish church, but that, if a poll was demanded, it would be adjourned to the town-hall. At the meeting there was a show of hands, upon which a poll was demanded; and thereupon the chairman. without taking the sense of the meeting, adjourned the election to the town-hall, where a poll was taken :- Held, that the proceeding was regular, no business having been interrupted by it, and the adjournment, in a particular event, being part of the original appointment. Rev v. Chester (Archdeacon), 1 A. & E. 342; 2 N. & M. 413; 3 L. J., M. C. 95.

Place of ]—Before 58 Geo. 3, e. 69, the Ecclesiastical Court had jurisdiction, ratione loci, over the proceedings of vestry meetings held in a parish church. Wilson v. M'Math, 4 B. & Ald. 241: 22 R. R. 371.

Authority to fix Hours of .] -The vicar and churchwardens of a parish have power to fix the hour of holding vestry meetings, and the parishioners cannot by mandanus compel them parismoners cannot by mandamus compet them to alter it. Reg. v. Wilson or Tottenham (Vicar), 49 L. J., Q. B. 870; 43 L. T. 550; 45 J. P. 140

—C. A. Affirming, 4 Q. B. D. 357; 27 W. R.

Mandamus - To compel Churchwardens to Call. -The court will not grant a mandamus to churchwardens to assemble the parishioners for the purpose of taking a poll upon a motion, earried by a shew of hands at a vestry meeting, to do an illegal act; as, to apply a portion of a fund, held in trust for charitable purposes, to the crection of a monument to the memory of the donor of the fund. Rev v. St. Sariour's, South-wark, 3 N. & M. 879; 1 A. & E. 380.

Expelling Intruder from.]-In justification of an assault, the defendants pleaded that they were duly assembled as a select vestry; that, plaintiff being an intruder, they forced him out of the room. One of the select vestry not having received any notice of the meeting: - Held, that the justification was not made out, as the meeting was not a legally-constituted vestry, so as to support the allegation that the select vestry was duly assembled. Dobson v. Fussey, 5 M. & P. 112; 7 Bing. 305; 9 L.J. (o.s.) C. P. 72.

b. Presidency.

In Whom. -The minister of a parish has a right to preside at all vestry meetings. Wilson v. M' Math, 4 B. & Ald. 241; 22 R. R. 371, But he is not an essential part of the vestry.

Mawley v. Barbet, 2 Esp. 687.

By an act for paving, lighting, and watching the streets of a parish, the rector, churchwardens, overseers of the poor, and vestrymen, were appointed trustees for putting the act in execution. By a subsequent act, the trustees. appointed to put the first act in execution were appointed trustees for exceuting that act, and the trustees, or any thirteen or more of them, were authorised to elect four constables for the parish:—Held, that the presence of the rector at a vestry for the election of a constable was not necessary if thirteen other trustees were present. Rev v. Brain, 3 B. & Ad. 614; 1 L. J., M. C. 53.

At a vestry meeting summoned by the churchwardens for the purpose of electing new churchof churchwardens, notice was given that the wardens in a parish regulated by 58 Geo. 3, D'Oyly, 12 A. & E. 139; 4 P. & D. 52; 4 Jnr. 8 Jur. (N.S.) 288. 1056. S. P., Reg. v. St. Mary Lambeth, 9 L. J., M. C. 113.

And he may adjourn such meeting, though against the wish of the majority present, on his legal responsibility if in so doing he improperly disturbs the proceedings. Ib.

A poll being demanded, he may, of his own

o. Binding Effect of.

As regards Parish.]—The only legitimate mode in which a parish can express its desire to do an act is, by convening a vestry, and duly conducting the proceedings therein to their legal termination, viz, by shew of hands, or by a poll when a tool, viz. by snew of maios, or by a poll when a poll is duly demanded. White v. Steele, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 383; 31 L. J., C. P. 265; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1177; 6 L. T. 686.

A parish being indebted to A, for repairs done to the church, the parishioners agreed at a vestry that the parish officers should give a bond for the amount; that A. should give the parish twelve months' notice when he required payment, and the parish should be at liberty to pay the debt by instalments; and, at another vestry held shortly afterwards, it was resolved, that the obligors should be indemnified by the parishioners, ont of the rates; and the parish officers for the time being were authorised and directed to pay the interest and the principal, when required, out of the rates. A., who was himself a parishioner, and several of the other parishioners, signed both the agreement and the resolution, and he received the interest on his debt for several years, and part of the principal also, out of the rates, and never called on the obligors to pay the interest :- Held, that, as the parishioners had no power to bind the parish, the obligors were not exempted from their liability on the bond, notwithstanding A. had signed both the agreement and the resolution. Jacquet v. Lewis, 8 Sim. 480 : 1 Jur. 511.

As regards succeeding Vestry.]—The acts of one vestry are not absolutely binding on a succeeding vestry, and they may be confirmed or. rescinded by such succeeding vestry, but the confirmation of the succeeding vestry is not necessary to make the acts of the preceding one valid. Marcley v. Burbet, 2 Esp. 687.

i. Qualification.

Plurality of Votes. |-- Where in a parish the poor-rates had, according to an ancient custom, been always assessed without regard to the annual value of property in the parish, but according to the supposed ability of the party assessed :- Held, that persons so rated were not entitled to the benefit conferred by 58 Geo. 8, e. 69, s. 3, as to the plurality of votes, although assessed in respect of property exceeding the annual value of 50l. Nightingale v. Marshall, 3 D. & R. 549 : 2 B. & C. 313.

Where, at a vestry meeting, a person is entitled. to vote in two characters, as an occupier in his own right, and also as an owner in his vicarious right, he cannot exercise his rights separately,

c. 69, the rector has a right to preside. Reg. v. | charge to which he is subject. Lambe v. Grieves, Under Local Act.]—By a local act, the inhabitants of a parish paying church and poor rates were empowered to elect guardians of the poor; in 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, there is a proviso, that that act shall not affect the right or manner of voting in any vestry held by ancient usage or by special act:-Held, that this provise did not except the parish from the operation of that statute; and that, to bring a vestry within the exception, it must have a peculiar constitution, Rea v. St. James, Clerkenwell, 3 N. & M. 411; 1 A. & E. 317; 3 L. J., M. C. 99.

Voting at Adjourned Meeting.]-Inhabitants who were not present at an original vestry meeting may, if a poll is demanded, vote at the adjourned meeting. Griffin v. Ellis, 4 Jur. 409.

By a local act, the inhabitants of each district in the parish, in vestry assembled, were to nominate a certain number of persons to be returned to justices at petty sessions, who were to select therefrom a certain number to be overseers. a vestry meeting for the above purpose, there was a contest as to the persons to be nominated; and, after a shew of hands, a poll was demanded; -Held, that the nomination was not necessarily to be confined to the persons present at the meeting; but that a poll might be lawfully had on a future day, so that other persons entitled to vote might take part in the nomination. Reg. v. Hedger, 4 P. & D. 61; 12 A. & E. 189.

Rejection of Votes -Result not affected. -At an election of churchwardens, the votes of tenants of small tenements, the owners of which were rated to the poor and highway rates, by virtue of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, tendered on behalf of one of the candidates, were rejected :-Held, that a mandamus to convene a vestry for the election of churchwardens would not lie to try the question whether such tenants were entitled to vote, it not being shewn that the result of the election would have been different if their votes had been received. Marchy or Joyce, Ex parte, 3 El. & Bl. 718; 28 L. J., M. C. 153; 18 Jur. 906; 2 W. R. 473.

Of Owner of Small Tenement-13 & 14 Vict. c. 99.1—Where the 13 & 14 Viet. c. 99 (Small Tenements Act) has been adopted in a parish, an owner of a tenement of a value not exceeding 61., who has been assessed to the poor-rate instead of the occupier, is, by virtue of the 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, entitled to vote at all vestry meetings in respect of such tenement; but the occupier has no such vote. But, for whatever number of tenements such owner is assessed, he can, at the most, give no more than six votes, the restriction in 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 3, being applicable. Richardson v. Gladwin, El. Bl. & El. 138; 27 L. J., M. C. 192; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 377; 6 W. R. 473.

Executors. ]--When a person is assessed to a poor-rate in respect of his own property, and is also executor of a person whose executors are assessed in respect of property of the deceased, he is entitled to vote at a vestry, under 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, if the two assessments amount to 251. Reg. but must combine his qualifications, so as to vote v. Kirby, 1 B. & S. 647; 31 L. J., Q. B. 3; according to and in respect of the aggregate 5 L. T. 280; 10 W. R. 13.

ii. Mode of.

Votes taken per capita. |--Where, under a deed of feoffment, lands were granted to fourteen feoffees, for the maintenance of a schoolmaster to instruct the children of all the inhabitants of a parish, and it was provided that no act concerning the lands should be done but in a vestry or meeting of the feoffees, and ten, at least, of the inhabitants, who should be vestrymen and not fcoffees, in a vestry to be held by them; and a power of removal of the schoolmaster was given, so that it was with the consent and agreement of the feoffees and vestrymen, or the major part of them, who should be assembled in vestry, so always as there should be ten, at least, of the vestrymen who were not feoffees voting at the holding of the vestry in which the putting away of any schoolmaster should be agreed upon :-Held, that, in the execution of the power of the removal of the master, the votes were to be taken per capita, and not according to 58 Geo. 3, c. 69. Att. Gen. v. Wilkinson, 7 Moore, 187; 3 Br. & B. 266.

Irrelevant Vote does not prevent subsequent voting.]-An irrelevant vote on a proposition submitted to a vestry meeting does not prevent those who gave it from afterwards voting on any other proposition relating to the same subject proposed at the same meeting. Gosling v. Veley, 4 H. L. Cas. 479; 1 C. L. R. 950; 17 Jur. 939.

Person not "Present" unless voting.]-Where a statute requires a majority consisting of a proportion of the votes of persons present at a meeting to render valid an act, there must be the specified proportion of those present actually voting for the act, and those who refuse to take any part in the proceedings cannot be considered as absent. Eynshaw, In re, 3 New Sess. Cas. 507; 12 Q. B. 398, n.; 18 L. J., Q. B. 210.

Time during which Votes can be taken, -A vestry meeting was convened for considering the question of the adoption of the Small Tenements Act, and after a shew of hands a poll was demanded, and the time agreed upon, viz. upon two conscentive days between twelve and four, and six and eight o'clock in the evening. The voting was slack on the first day, but on the second so great a rush was made that, out of the whole number of 1,100 ratepayers, 800 or 400 were unable to vote :- Held, that the time appointed was reasonable, and that there would have been time for all to vote, had they used due diligence. Reg. v. Sutton, Lancashire, Overseers, 11 L. T. 487; 13 W. R. 187.

Mode of Election.]—Where, upon a vacancy arising in the office of organist to a church, the vestry unanimously resolved that the course followed at the antecedent election should be pursued, and, in pursuance of this intention, appointed a committee to reduce the number of candidates to six, each of whom should take the service on a particular Sunday; and at a subsequent vestry this resolution was unanimously confirmed; and the committee selected six out of sixty candidates who presented themselves; and, at shew of hands, and refused to grant a poll of the the time of the election, a motion was made and seconded that A., a candidate who had not been thus selected, should be eligible, but this was negatived on a division; and where, afterwards, of votes was tendered, and received as tendered only, on behalf of A. than on behalf of any other candidate: — Held, that, it not having been objected at the previous meetings that the votes given for A. were lost or thrown away, this was a reasonable mode of conducting the election. Lecrew, Ex parte, or Reg. v. St. Stephen's, Cole-man-street (Vicar), 2 D. & L. 571; 14 L. J., Q. B. 34; 9 Jur. 255.

Taking Poll.]-The proper way of taking the vote at a vestry is by a poll, the meeting being adjourned for that purpose, if necessary or convenient. Egham Burial Board, In re, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 956.

____ Demand for.]_On the nomination of eight inspectors to act in the election of vestrymen, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, the decision of the chairman, on the shew of hands, that one or the other party has a majority is not conclusive, but he is bound, on requisition from either side, to take steps for ascertaining the numbers. Reg. v. St. Paneras Vestrymen, 11 A. & E. 15; 4 P. & D. 66, n.

At an election of parish officers, a poll, if demanded upon a shew of hands, must be taken. of the ratepayers generally; and the election is a nullity, if the poll is confined to persons present when the poll is demanded. Reg. v. St. Mary, Lambeth, Churchwardens, 3 N. & P. 416; 1 W. W. & H. 398.

Effect of Demand for.]—At a meeting of the vestry of a parish, on the 25th February, 1870, to elect a waywarden, L. and C. were proposed. and seconded; the majority of the ratepayers. present, counting each as a single vote, was infavour of L.; but it was suggested that the votes ought to be counted by giving each ratepayer-his plurality of votes; and, so counting the votes, the majority was in favour of C. A poll was then demanded on behalf of L.; and a poll was appointed to be taken on the 28th February, between ten and two o'clock, at the room in which the vestry was then being held. On the 28th, several ratepayers went to the room to vote; but, in consequence of a notice that C. declined to stand, no one went into the room, and no poll whatever was taken. C. was afterwards informed by the chairman of the meeting; that he was elected by the votes of the meeting, and the chairman gave him a certificate of his election :- Held, that he was not elected; and. that no poll having been taken after it had been duly demanded, the election was void. Reg. v. Cooper, 39 L. J., Q. B. 273; L. R. 5 Q. B.

- Refusal of Demand for.]-A. local act. relating to a parish empowered the "governors and guardians to call a vestry meeting of the inhabitants of the parish on the Easter Tuesday in every year, at which meeting all vacaucies inthe list of governors and guardians shall be filled. np by poll or ballot, or in such way of election as shall be deemed most proper and convenient." At a vestry meeting held in pursuance of this act, the chairman filled up the vacancies by, parish :-Held, that, as a poll of the parish had been demanded by some of the inhabitants present at the vestry, on behalf of some of the candidates, the election by shew of hands a poll having been demanded, a greater number could not be sustained, as it was for the meeting, and not for the chairman, to decide on the mode of election. Reg. v. St. Mary, Newington, Guardians, 2 B. C. C. 303; 6 D. & L. 162; 17

L. J., Q. B. 220; 12 Jur. 918.

Held, also, that a poll had properly been demanded; that the chairman was bound to grant it, and adjourn the vestry for that purpose, so that all the inhabitants might have an opportunity of voting. Ib.

Under 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, —A division of a vestry, to be taken in the manner preserbed by 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, may be taken by a poll of all the ratepayers, such poll being an adjournment of the vestry. At such poll the original proposition and an anendment theonsistent with it being the only one proposed, may be put to the vote, and affirmative and negative votes may be taken upon each, and in that way the sense of the voters may be ascertained. Etc. V. St. Mary's, Islington, Burial Bourd, Kay, 449. See also Reg. v. St. Panerus Vestrymen, ante, col.

- Demand for Second Poll not granted.] At a vestry held under 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, for the purpose of electing surveyors of highways, of which public notice had been given, it was agreed that the vote should be taken by a shew of hands, leaving it open to anyone to propose that the votes should be taken according to the statute. A. and B. were proposed and seconded for the office of surveyor, and on a shew of hands A. had a majority. It was then proposed and seconded on behalf of B, that the votes should be taken according to the statute. No objection was made, and, on the votes being so taken, B. I L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 56. had a majority, and was declared duly elected. A. then demanded a poll of the whole parish :-Held, that, the meeting having agreed to a poll being taken according to the statute, no one was entitled afterwards to demand a poll of the whole parish, that the election of B. was valid, and that a mandamus for another meeting to elect would not lic. Reg. v. Hillingdon (Vicur), 18 Q. B. 718.

e. Audit of Accounts.

Mandamus.]—Where a local statute confers a power of investigating accounts upon auditors to be annually elected, and to be summoned by the vestry clerk at certain stated intervals to audit the accounts, the court will not grant a mandamus to compel the latter, when new auditors have been elected for the succeeding year, to call a meeting of the old auditors to audit the accounts of the past year. St. Giles and St. George's, In re, 1 D. P. C. 540.

Production of Accounts by Church Building Trustees, 1—The trustoes appointed and acting under a local act for building a church, which authories them to key rates upon the finabitants of the parish, and directs that the accounts shall be audited and allowed by the quater sessions, are, nevertheless, compellable, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, 8. 54, to produce and explain their accounts, appointed under, and in consequence of, the adoption of the last-mentioned act. Rev. 8, Paucra New Church Trustees, 5 N. & M. 219; 3 A. & B. 53 A.

Place of Meeting.] — Auditors of parish accounts, appointed under that act, can hold meetings only in the board-room of the vestry. Ib.

3. LIABILITY OF VESTRYMEN.

For Payment of Solicitor employed by them.]—
If several parishioners in the vestry sign a resolution in the vestry minute-book, stating that they approve of an action brought by the surveyor of the highways against A., and that they do thereby guarantee to him all legal expenses that are or may be incurred by him in prosecuting that suit, this binds them personally. Heudehouvels
v. Lengton, 3 Ct. 8. P. 506. Rule for a new trial refused. 10 B. & C. 546.

Vestrymen, who signed a resolution ordering the parish surveyor to take steps for defending an indictment for not repairing a road, were held not to be responsible for the payment of the attorney employed by the surveyor. Sprott v. Pometl, 3 Bing, 478; 11 Moore, 398; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 161; 28 R. R. 665. And see Louchester v. Dreuor, 9 Moore, 688; 2 Bing, 361; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 162.

Right of Churchwarden to Contribution.]—
Where several parishioners joined at a vestry meeting in signing an order, authorising two churchwardens to pat a new roof on the parish church, and both concurred in giving orders for that purpose, and one of them (the plaintiff) paid the artificers; and, a rute for reimbursing them having been quashed, the plaintiff sued the defendant, being the other churchwarden, for a molety of the money so paid:—Held, that the defendant could not insist on those parishioners who had signed the vestry order being joined with him as co-defendants in the action. Launchester v. Tricker, 8 Moore, 20; 1 Bing. 201; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 56.

4. VESTRY CLERK.

Admission to Office of ]—A mandamus will not lie to admit a vestry clerk to his office. Rew v. Croydon, 5 Term Rep. 713; 2 R. R. 688.

Objecting to produce Vestry Book. —A vestry clerk, who is called as a witness, cannot, on the ground that it may criminate himself, object to produce the vestry-book kept under 58 Geo. 3. 6. 69, s. 2. **Dradshavo v. Murphy, 7 Car. & F. 612.

Proof of Ofice, —To an action brought by the vestry eleck of a parish under a local act, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not the vestry elerk :—Held, that evidence of his having acted as vestry elerk was sufficient prima facto evidence of his appointment. Mr Gakey v. Maton, 2 M. & W. 206; 2 Gale, 288; 6 L. J., Bz. 29.

A. WHEN IT LIES. 1. FOR WHAT PROPERTY.

Land.]-Ejectment will lie by an owner of the soil for land which is part of the king's highway; or for an acre of land, described only by the name of land, though there are a wall and porch, and part of a house built upon it. Goodtitle d. Chester v. Alher, 1 Burr. 133; 1 Ld. Ken.

Ejectment lies for land and a beast gate in Suffolk, for it means a certain quantity of land or common appurtenant to the land mentioned. Mellington v. Goodtitle, Andrews, 106; 2 Str.

Messuage "or" Tenement. ]—But not for a messuage "or" tenement: but if it is of a messuage "and" tenement, the court will give leave to strike out the words "and tenement." Goodright d. Welch v. Flood, 3 Wils. 23. And see Doe d. Bradshaw v. Plowman, 1 East, 441; and Doe d. Stewart v. Denton, 1 Term Rep. 11.

Messuage "and" Tenement.]—Where judgment in ejectment for a messuage "and" tenement was entered up generally for the plaintiff, it was no ground for reversal on error. Doe d. Laurie v. Dyball, 8 B. & C. 70; 2 M. & Ry. 184; 1 M. & P. 330; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 317.

Tin-bound.]—A tin-bound is a mere easement for which an ejectment cannot be brought. Doe d. Falmonth (Eurl) v. Alderson, 1 Gale, 441; 1 M. & W. 210; 4 D. P. C. 701; 1 Tyr. & G. 543; 5 L. J., Ex. 153.

Barn, &c.]—A barn and outhouses standing on a close are attached to the freehold and are the subject-matter of an ejectment. Anthony v. Haney, 1 Bing. 186; 1 M. & Sc. 800; 1 L. J., C. P. 81.

Toll-houses and Gates. ] - Trustees under a turnpike act having demised to one of several mortgagees such proportion of the tolls arising from the road and of the toll-houses and tollgates for collecting the same, as the sum advanced by him bore to the whole sum raised on the credit of the tolls, the mortgagee brought ejectment for the toll-houses and toll-gates, in order to repay himself the interest due to him :-Held, that he might well maintain ejectment, notwithstanding a clause in the act that all the mortgagees should be creditors upon the tolls in equal degree. Doe d. Banks v. Booth, 2 Bos. & P. 219 : 5 R. R. 575.

Dower.]—Ejectment does not lie for dower which has not been assigned. Doe d. Nutt v. Nutt. 2 Car. & P. 430.

Rectory.]-Nor for a rectory against a person who has been simoniacally presented. Doe d. Watson v. Fletcher, 8 B. & C. 25; 2 M. & Ry. 206; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 282.

Canonry.]—Nor for a canonry as such. Doe d. Butcher v. Musgrave, 1 Scott (N.R.) 451; I Man. & G. 625; 9 L. J., C. P. 318; 4 Jur. 631.

Prebendal Stall and House. - Nor for the recovery of a prebendal stall of the king's free Butcher v. Musgrave, 1 Man. & Gr. 625; 1 Scott (N.R.) 451; 9 L. J., C. P. 318.

2. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY CLAIMED.

Local Description,]—It is not necessary to aver the premises to be in a parish; if they are described as being in the parish of A. and B., the court will construe it to mean part in the parish of A, and part in B.; B, being the name of a parish. Goodtitle d. Brembridge v. Walter, 4 Taunt. 671.

Lands sought to be discovered were described in a declaration as "situate in the county of S.," without any other local description :- Held, on motion in arrest of indement, that the declara-tion was good. Doe d. Educards v. Gunning, 2 N. & P. 260; 7 A. & E. 240; W. & D. 460. S. P., Doe d. Bassett v. Men, 7 A. & E. 240.

The will in which the demised lands lie may, after verdict, be collected from the vill in which the ejection is laid to have been committed. Goodright d. Smallwood v. Strother, 2 W. Bl.

Semble, that the omission of all local description of the tenement demised, is error, though the county and vill in which the demise was county was stated in the margin, before 15 & 16
Vict. c. 76. Doe d. Rogers v. Bath, 2 N. & M.
440; 3 L. J. K. B. 48.
If the parishes of A. and of B. are united by act of parliament for the maintenance of their poor, and for no other purpose, it is a misdescription to state premises which are actually within the parish of A., as situate in the united parishes of A. & B. Goodtitle d. Pinsent v. Lammiman,

2 Camp. 274; 6 Esp. 128.

Where the premises were described as being in the parish of Westbury, and it was proved that there were two parishes of Westbury, viz. Westbury on Tyrm, and Westbury on Severn :- Held, that this was not a variance. Doe d. Jumes v. Harris, 5 M. & S. 326.

Evidence as to Parish.]—In ejectment from a house, to shew that it is situated in the parish mentioned in the declaration, it is prima facie evidence that the place in which it stands is watched by the watchman of that parish. Doe d. Gunson v. Welch, 4 Camp. 264.

When Plaintiff proves Title to Part only. ]-Where a defendant in ejectment appears to defend for the whole of the land mentioned in the writ, and the plaintiff at the trial proves his title to the possession of part, the verdict is not to be entered in a general form for the plaintiff, but for the part only of the land as to which he has succeeded. Aleoch v. Wilshaw, 2 El. & El. 633; 29 L. J., Q. B. 143; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 2 L. T. 55.

Before the C. L. P. Act, 1852, the plea of not guilty in ejectment was divisible, and therefore a plaintiff was entitled to a verdict for that part of the premises to which he proved title, and the defendant for the other part. Doe d. Booman v. Lewis, 13 M. & W. 241; 2 D. & L. 667; 14 L. J., Ex. 198. S. P., Doe d. Hellyer v. King, 6 Ex. 791; 20 L. J., Ex. 301.

A plaintiff will recover according to his title.

chapel at Windsor, nor for the house allotted but not e contra. Denn d. Burgess v. Purvis, 1 Burr. 326.

A declaration contained two demises by two different lessors of two distinct undivided thirds; judgment was given that the plaintiff "do recover his said terms": it appeared from the facts stated in a bill of exceptions to the judge's directions on a point of law, that the ejectment respected only one undivided third :-Held, well enough on this record, where the point was only raised by bill of exceptions. Rowe v. Power, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 2.

A plaintiff having proved that he was entitled to recover part of the premises, the question of the precise extent of his claim, as defined by particular metes and boundaries, cannot be inquired into. Doe d. Dravers' Co. v. Wilson, 2

Stark. 477; 20 R. R. 724.

Misdescription in Verdict.]—An objection to a verdict in ejectment, as including the entire interest in lands instead of one-third, is no ground of exception, and cannot be entertained upon a writ of error. Faussett v. Carpenter, 5 Bligh (N.S.) 75.

Identity of Premises.]—Whether the premises sought to be recovered in ejectment are identical with those included in an outstanding mortgage, is a question of fact which must be submitted to made were stated in the declaration, and the the jury. Brown v. Armstrong, Ir. R. 7 C. L.

> Undivided Moiety.]—Under a demise of the whole, an undivided moiety may be recovered. Doe d. Bryant v. Wippel, 1 Esp. 360. S. P., Denn d. Burgess v. Purvis, 1 Burr, 326.

B. TITLE OF PLAINTIFF IN ACTION OF.

I. MUST BE A LEGAL TITLE.

In ejectment, the person having the legal title must prevail. Doe d. Da Costa v. Whavlon, 8 Term Rep. 3. R. p. Goodtitle d. Jones v. Jones, 7 Term Rep. 47; Doe d. Hodsden v. Steple, 2 Term Rep. 684; 1 R. R. 545; and live d. Eberall v. Love, 1 R. Bl. 447.

Even in an ejectment by a trustee against his cestni que trust. Roo d. Reade v. Reade, 8 Term Rep. 122; Weakly d. Yea v. Rogers, 5

The plaintiff in an action to recover possession of certain land alleged that, though the legal estate was outstanding in a third person, he had the equitable title to possession by reason of an agreement with the owner of the legal estate for the sale of the land to him. It was alleged that the equitable title was in other persons who were not parties to the action. The owner of the legal estate was not a party to the action:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff could not maintain the action. Allen v. Woods, 4 R. 249; 68 L. T. 143—C. A. See Sunnder v. Merryweather, 3 H. & C. 902; 35 L. J., Ex. 115; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 655; 13 W. R. 814.

Where the assignee of a legal mortgage of lands sub-mortgaged his security, conveying the legal estate to the sub-mortgagee, and afterwards, while the sub-mortgage was subsisting and the principal debt due thereon, brought an ejectment on the title, without the concurrence of the subwhere he demands more than he has a title to, mortgagee, against a person in possession deriving title under the original mortgagor :- | named, A. to pay interest. The purchase was

Trustee for Creditors.]—The trustee of a term to satisfy creditors, not having notice of an agreement for a lease before the grant of the term, may maintain an ejectment against the tenant in possession under the agreement. Goodtitle d. Estwick v. Way, 1 Term Rep. 735.

Bankrupt. ]-A., being tenant in fec-simple of customary land, which passed by bargain and sale, with surrender and admittance, became bankrupt, and the commissioners assigned the land to the assignees. Afterwards the bankrupt died; and after that the assignees were admitted. Ejectment being brought, on the demises of the bankrupt's heir-at-law, and of the assignees, both laid between the bankrupt's death and the admission :- Held, that the plaintiff must recover on one or the other demise, for that the title was on one of the other dentise, for that the latte was not in abeyance; but, if the assignees' title was not perfect, it was in the heir. Dow d. Danson v. Parko, 4 A. & E. 816; 6 L. J., K. B. 272.

An uncertificated bankrupt purchased premises which he had occupied, and which he continued to occupy for the purposes of his business. These premises were conveyed to A., in trust for the bankrupt, by a deed which recited that the legal estate was outstanding in a third person. Subsequently A., on the order of the court of chancery, conveyed the premises to the assignees appointed under the bankruptcy. After this their attorney took possession of the bankrupt's goods, and threatened to turn him out of the premises unless he signed an attornment to the assignees. which he accordingly did :- Held, that they had sufficient title to enable them to maintain the action. Conper v. Lands, 14 L. T. 287; 14 W. R. 610.

Settlement-Power of Appointment. ]-By a deed of settlement premises were limited to such uses as A. B. should appoint; and in default of appointment, to the use of C. D. in fee, in trust for A. B. in fee. In exercise of the power, A. B. denised the premises for a term of years, the desired yielding and paying during the term a yearly rent unto A. B., his heirs and assigns. The lessee covenanted with A. B., his heirs and assigns, for payment of the rent, and also for repair, during the term; and the lease contained a proviso that in case of nonpayment of the rent, or nonperformance of any of the covenants, it should be lawful for A. B., his heirs and assigns, to re-enter :- Held, that as A. B. (having only an equitable estate) was a stranger to the estate, the reservation in the lease to him and his 1366; 23 L. J., C. P. 185; 18 Jur. 1014; 2 W. R. heirs and assigns might be rejected, and that the 498. party entitled under the settlement to the A. reversion had a right to recover in ejectment, under the power of re-entry for breach of any of the covenants. Greenaway v. Hart, 2 C. L. R. 370; 14 C. B. 340; 23 L. J., C. P. 115; 18 Jur. 449 : 2 W. R. 702.

Completed. ]—A., being in possession of land, avoid the deed, and a court of law being agreed by writing that H. should sell, and he, petcht to o perfect justice between the A., should purchase the land for an estate pur Hastle v. Pate, S fr. C. L. B. 35—Ex. Cl autre vie; that A. "shall be entitled to the possession or to the rents on or from this day;" H. to make a good title in twenty-one days; if appeared at the trial that the elegit had issued the purchase should not be completed by a day upon a judgment entered up under a warrant of

Held, that the action could not be sustained.

Fechan v. Mundeville, 28 L. R., Ir. 90. notice to a tenant from year to year :- Held, in the absence of any evidence as to right of possession in A., that H., on those facts, might recover against A. in ejectment. Doe d. Bord v. Burton, 16 Q. B. 807; 15 Jur. 990.

> Possession of Father is Evidence of Title of Son. |-- A plaintiff relied on her own possession for thirteen years, and her husband's before her for eighteen years, but in so doing shewed that her hisband died leaving children. The defen-dant, in whom the legal estate was before the twenty years, had turned the plaintiff out of possession:—Held, first, that the possession of the plaintiff, not being connected by right with that of her husband, s. 34 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c, 27, did not give her the right of possession against the defendant. Due d. Carter v. Barnard, 13 Q. B. 945; 18 L. J., Q. B. 306; 13 Jur. 915. Held. scondly. that the possession of the husband of the plaintiff was prima facie evidence of the title of his heir, against which the possession of the plaintiff could not prevail.

Conveyance from Trustee to Cestni que trust cannot be presumed. |-- A inry is not to be directed to presume a conveyance by a trustee to the cestui que trust, unless it is reasonably probable that such a conveyance was in fact executed. M'Queen v. Meude, 28 L. T. 768.

By a will, trustees were directed to hold a leasehold estate for A. for life, and after the death of A. for the plaintiff absolutely. A. died in September, 1871. The plaintiff brought eject-ment for part of the estate in March, 1873. One of the trustees had died, the survivor was not joined in the writ, nor had he, in fact, assigned the legal estate to the plaintiff. The court held that the jury could not have been directed to presume an assignment of the legal estate to the plaintiff, but made absolute a rule for a new trial, allowing the plaintiff to amend by adding the name of the surviving trustee. Ib.

Title Founded on Fraud-Illegality or Mistake, ]-A. procured B. to grant him a lease of premises, by means of a false representation that he intended to carry on a lawful trade therein. Having obtained possession, A. converted the premises into a common brothel, whereupon B. forcibly expelled him:—Held, that A. might maintain ejectment, the fraudulent misrepresentation and the subsequent illegal use of the premises not being sufficient (at law) to avoid the lease. Feret v. Hill, 15 C. B. 207 ; 2 C. L. R.

A. procured B. to execute to him an assignment of a lease, by means of a false and fraudulent representation, that he, A, was executor and devisee of C., and in that capacity a creditor of B.; B. was, in fact, indebted to C. for part of the alleged consideration-moneys:—Held, that Agreement to Sell to Tenant—Purchase not representations not being sufficient (at law) to avoid the deed, and a court of law being incompetent to do perfect justice between the parties.

> Land of L. having been delivered to H. upon elegit, H. brought ejectment against L. It than twelve months to run, which were given It being upon a loan at usurions interest. objected that, so far as regarded the land, the proviso in 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37, s. 1, took the facts out of the protection of that act, as being a security upon land, and therefore the execution was bad, as being founded on a usurious contract : -Held, that supposing the judgment or execution bad, the objection could not be taken in the ejectment, but that the proper course would have been to move to set the judgment or execution aside. Hughes v. Lumley, 4 El. & Bl. 274; 3 C. L. R. 241; 24 L. J., Q. B. 57; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 422; 3 W. R. 109.

The 6 & 7 Will, 4, c. 115 (extended by the The 0 & 7 Will. 4, 6, 110 (extended by the wines care is formed incredible as subsequent 4 & 5 Vict. 0, 31), authorises the exchange of adverse possession for less than twenty years, lands on conditions therein prescribed. One Asher v. Whitelock, 35 L. J., Q. B. 7, L. B. Q. B. of these is the written consent of the councils [1, 11] Jur. (x.8.) 125; H. B. T. 234; J. H. W., E. S. of the lands intended to be exchanged. The landowners of a parish determined to carry this act into execution, and appointed a commissioner for that purpose. B., one of the landowners, authorised his agent to attend for him at the meetings held for the purpose of carrying the act into execution, but desired him not to exchange a particular wood except for woodland. A.'s lands were to be exchanged against those of B., and this restriction was communicated to A.'s agent, who, being asked to exchange another wood against the wood in question, said that his principal had no power to do so. The answer was communicated to B. who took no further notice of it. The restriction on the anthority of B.'s agent did not appear to have been brought to the knowledge of the commissioner. The commissioner allotted the lands to be exchanged, and among them included the wood, but did not give woodland for it. Possession of the exchanged lands and of this wood (although the award of the commissioner had not been formally executed) was delivered by B.'s agent to N., who immediately began to exercise acts of ownership over B. some time afterwards, discovered what had been done, and brought ejectment against N. for the wood. N. filed his bill in chancery to restrain B. from proceeding with the action, and compel him to perfect the exchange; and B. filed his bill to prevent the commissioner from executing the award, alleging the consent given to him had been signed by mistake :- Held, that N. was entitled to an injunction as prayed by his bill, and that B. had no equity on which to ask for the interference of the court in his favour. Beaufort (Duke) v. Neeld, 12 Cl. & F. 248 : 9 Jur. 813.

2. Possessory Title.

Prior Possession.]-Prior possession, however short, is a sufficient prima facie title in ejectment against a wrongdoer. Doe d. Hughes v. Dyeball, M. & M. 346; 3 Car. & P. 610.

If it is proved that the plaintiff let the locus in que to a tenant, who held peaceable possession for about a year; this is sufficient evidence of title as against a party who came in the night, and forcibly turned such tenant out of possession.

In ejectment against a person who has entered forcibly, without any title, evidence of prior possission is sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to 416; 7 L. T. 795; 11 W. R. 429.

attorney given before 17 & 18 Vict. c. 90 (which | recover; and the plaintiff does not lose his right repeals the usury laws) by L. to secure sums to to insist on such possession by setting up a title become payable on bills of exchange, having less which he fails to establish in proof. Davison v. Gent, 1 H, & N. 744; 26 L, J., Ex. 122; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 342; 5 W. R. 229.

Mere possession is not sufficient to sustain an ejectment against a wrongdoer, where it is shewn that the title is out of the plaintiff. Nagle v.

Shea, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 224.

Possession creates devisable Interest. ]-The mere possession of land for more than twenty years confers upon the possessor a prima facie heritable and devisable interest in fee therein good against all the world but the true owner of the soil, and the devise in fee of such possessor may maintain ejectment against any person whose title is founded merely on subsequent Possession under Deed having Covenant to convey Legal Estate.] — Possession for many years under a deed declaratory of a beneficial interest, in which a covenant to convey the legal estate is inserted, will not raise a presumption that such estate has been conveyed to the possessors, nor entitle them to bring an ejectment. Goodright v. Swymmer, 1 Ld. Ken. 385

Statute of Limitations. ]-A., more than twenty years before, without the permission of the lord, inclosed a small portion of the waste of a manor, on which he built himself a hut. In 1835, the encroachment having been presented at the lord's court, the then lord of the manor, accompanied by his steward, went to the premises, A.'s family being there, and, stating that he took possession, directed that a stone should be taken out of the wall of the hut, and that a portion of the fence should be removed. All this was done in the absence of A. The lord and his steward then retired, and nothing more was done :- Held, that the acts so done by the lord did not amount to a dispossession of A., and a resumption of possession by the lord, so as to entitle the latter to maintain ejectment within twenty years from that time. Doe d. Baker v. Coombes, 9 C. B. 714; 19 L. J., C. P. 306.

A tenant by the curtesy affected to devise the estate to B. for life, with remainder to C. The heir did not interfere, and B. took and held possession under the will for more than twenty years, B. then conveyed the premises in fee to the defendant. Afterwards B. died. The assignee of C. the remainderman, brought ejectment :- Held, that B. had acquired no title by possession under the Statute of Limitations as against persons claiming under the will, and that the defendant was estopped from setting up the invalidity of the will. Board v. Board, 43 L. J., Q. B. 4; L. R. 9 Q. B. 48; 29 L. T. 459; 22 W. R. 206.

Evidence to shew Possession Rightful.]-Parol evidence having been given of the assignment of a lease to the occupier of land, and of the payment to the owner of the fee of the conventionary rents, during several years included in the lease;—Held, that the possession of the occupier must be held to be a rightful possession under the term. Metters v. Brown, 1 H. & C. 686; 32 L. J., Ex. 138; 9 Jur. (N.S.)

3. Under Compulsory Powers of Purchase.

Company taking Land under Act of Parliament. - Ejectment to recover a portion of the land and banks of the Swansea Canal. In 1779, P., being seised of the land, demised the same to M. & Co., for sixty-five years. In 1793 the Swansea Canal Company was formed for making a canal, which was intended to pass in part through the land in question, and they obtained an act for that purpose. In 1797, M. & Co. and B. widened a canal made by M. & Co., and extended the same through part of the land, which canal joined and formed a continuation of the Swansea Canal. The powers for making a portion of the canal which passed through a portion of the lands sought to be recovered, were obtained by B. and M. & Co. By that act it was enacted, that upon payment or tender of certain sums of money adjudged by commissioners, or assessed by juries, for the purchase of any such lands, it should be lawful for the canal company to enter upon such lands, or before such payment or tender, by leave of the owners and occupiers, and thereupon such lands should be vested in such company. The lands sought to be recovered formed part of the lands authorised to be taken by the canal act. No payment or satisfaction was made or agreed to be made to the owners of the lands, but everything was done by B., with the full consent and approbation, and in accordance with the wishes of such owners and proprietors. The defendant in 1835 became the assignee of B. C. in 1800 became the purchaser of the lands, and the interest therein afterwards became vested in the plaintiff at the expiration of the lease in 1845;—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the lands. Doe d. Patrick v. Beaufort (Duke), 6 Ex. 498; 20 L. J., Ex. 251.

Lands Clauses Act. ]-A company took possession of land for the purposes of its railway, by an agreement with R., who was in possession of the land. While the parties were treating for the price, the plaintiff, on the 30th August, 1860, informed them that he was the mortgagee in fee of the land, and claimed compensation from them. The company did not admit, or acknowledge, or dispute his title, but asked for a short delay during the absence of its legal adviser. On the 25th October, 1860, the plaintiff brought ejectment to recover possession of the land :-Held, that as the title was not in dispute, the action could not be maintained, and that the company had a right to the undisturbed possession of the land, under s. 124 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. Jolly v. Wimbledon and Dorking Ry., 1 B. & S. 807; 31 L. J., Q. B. 95; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1037; 5 L. T. 615; 10 W. R. 253—Ex. Ch.

A railway company having complied with the provisions of s. 85 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. entered upon and took land within the time prescribed by s. 123 for exercising their compulsory powers, and continued in possession after the prescribed period, without having had compensation assessed and the land conveyed to them : -Held, that their continuance in possession was not nevertheless unlawful, and that an ejectment could not be maintained against them under such circumstances. Due of Armistead v. North Staffordskire Ry., 16 Q. B. 526; 20 L. J., Q. B. 249; 15 Jur. 944. S. P., Doe d. Hudson v. Leels and Bradford Ry., 16 Q. B. 796; 20 L. J., Q. B. 486; 15 Jur. 946.

4. JOINT-TENANTS, TENANTS IN COMMON. AND COPARCENERS.

Joint-tenants. ]-An ejectment will lie on the several demises of three joint-tenants. Doe d. Lulham v. Fenn, 3 Camp. 190.

The plaintiff in ejectment under the several demises of two, may, after notice to quit, recover the possession of premises held by the defendant as tenant from year to year, upon evidence that the common agent of the two had received rent from the tenant, which was stated in the receipts to be due to the two lessors, even assuming such receipts to be evidence of a jointtenancy; for a several demise severs a jointtenancy; and, supposing the contract with the tenant to have been entire, no objection lies on that account to the plaintiff's recovery in this ease, as he had the whole title in him. Doe d. Marsack v. Read, 12 East, 57.

Where, by an underlease, power was reserved, on nonpayment of rent, to the lessors and the original lessor to enter :- Held, that the demise was properly laid to be by the lessors alone, and that it need not be a joint demise by the lessors and the original lessor. Doe d. Bedford v. White,

4 Bing. 276; 12 Moore, 526; 5 L. J. (O.s.) C. P. 173.
C. and P. leased land jointly to H., who covenanted with the two jointly, and power of re-entry for breach of covenant was reserved to C. and P. jointly; but in the lease it appeared that C. and P. were tenants in common. Quiere, whether ejectment against H. for breach of whether ejectment against H. for breach of covenant could be maintained out the joint demise of C. and P. Per Denman, C.J., and Erle, J., it could. Per Colertige and Wightman, JJ., it could not. Doe d. Compbell v. Hamilton, 13 Q. B. 977; 19 L. J., Q. B. 99. See Beer v. Beer, 12 C. B. 60, 72—per Maule, J.

— Of Copyhold Property.]—One joint-tenant may maintain ejectment for his own share of copyhold, descending by custom to all the children equally of the tenant last seised. Roe d. Roper v. Lonsdale, 12 East, 39.

Tenants in Common.]-In ejectment by one tenant in common against another, it is necessary to prove an actual onster. Doe d. White v. Cuff, 1 Camp. 173.

Where houses had been pulled down by a railway company, and a railway constructed on the site of them :-Held, that this was such an occupation as amounted to an actual ouster of occupation as amounted to an actual observer of a tenant in common of the premises. Doe d. Wawn v. Horn, 5 M. & W. 564; 9 L. J., Ex. 129. Ejectment is not maintainable by one tenant in common against another without actual ouster. Prince v. Heylin, 1 Atk. 494.

Two tenants in common may join in a writ of ejectment, stating that they, or some or one of them claim to be entitled; and the whole of the property to which they are entitled in common may be recovered by such writ. Elliss v. Elliss, El. Bl. & El. 81; 27 L. J., Q. B. 316; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1181.

An ejectment is maintainable by one of two tenants in common, who had agreed to divide their property, if after such agreement the defendant, who held under both as occupier, pays rent under a distress to such co-tenant alone; and it is no defence to such action, that the deeds of partition between the co-tenants have not been executed. Doe d. Pitcher v. Mitchell, 3 Moore, 229; 1 Br. & B. 11. they paying out of the same, into four persons therein named, 101., to be paid to them when they should attain their several ages of twentyone years, by the testator's executrixes, and he appointed E. C. and J. H., two of the devisees in remainder, his executrixes. The survivor of the devisees for life died in 1777, and S. H., one of the devisees in remainder, continued to reside on the premises devised. John H., another of the devisees in remainder, died in November, 1790, having devised his freehold estates to his wife for life, and after her decease to his three daughters. By indentures made in 1791 and 1792, James H., described as heir-at-law of John H., his brother deceased, and the two other devisees in remainder named in the will of J. C., covenanted to levy a fine of the devised premises, to enure to such persons as they should by deed appoint: and afterwards, by indenture, reciting that a fine had been levied, appointed the premises to P., in fee, who, in 1792, entered thereupon, and continued thenceforth in undisturbed possession of the whole :-- Held, in ejectment brought against P. by the heir-at-law of one of James H,'s daughters (which daughter, on the death of her mother, the tenant for life, under the will of James H., was under coverture), that the deeds of 1791 and 1792, under which P. claimed, were, as against him, evidence of the seisin of James H., at the time of making his will and of his death; and that independently of those deeds, the seisin of S. H., the co-tenant in common, being the seisin of John H., there was no ground for presuming an oaster of John H. Doe d. Thorn v. Phillips, 3 B. & Ad. 753; 1 L. J., K. B. 187

— Eridance of.]—In ejectment upon the joint denise of several trustees of a charity, it is not enough for the defendant, who had paid one entire rent to the common clerk of the trustees, to show that the trustees were appointed at different times, as evidence that they were tenants in common i for as against their tenant, his payment of the entire rent to the common agent of all, is at all events sufficient to support the joint demise, without making it necessary for them to shew their title more precisely. Doe d. Clarke v. Grant, 12 East, 221.

— As to Fortion of Fremises entitled to.]
—In ejectment by tenants in common, it appeared, on cross-examination of their witness, that there had been other tenants in common, but there was no evidence of their number:—Held, that they could not recover, if not being shewn to what portion of the premises they were entitled. Dec d. Hellyer v. Kring, 6 Ex. 791; 2 L. M. & F. 493; 20 L. J., Ex. 300.

—— Statute of Limitations.]—In ejectment, by the heir of T. for two acres of land, it appeared, that his father, more than fifty years before, had devised four acres (comprising the two in question) to his widow, for life, and then to T. and his sister S. in remainder in fee. For more, than twenty years T., by arrangement between his mother and S., occupied the two acres in question, and devised them to his widow for life, and on her death or marriage to his daughter; and then there was a devise in similar terms on the same event to his son the heir.

J. C. devised a dwelling-house to his brother and sister for their lives, and the life of the survivor, and after their decease to John H. E. C., and the death, and he, without giving any survivor, and after their decease to John H. E. C., and the survivor and after their decease to John H. E. C., because the paying out of the same, unto four persons therein named, 104, to be paid to them when therein named, 104, to be paid to them when they should attain their several ages of twenty-nevers, by the testator's executrives, and he Johnson, 20 L. J. Ex. 91.

Oppareamers, ]—Semble, that where a power of re-entry for breach of covenant is reserved in a lense, and the reversion descends to copareeners at common law, one alone cannot maintain ejectment for breach of the covenant. José d. Rutzew v. Leuk, 5 A. & E. 277; 2 H. & W. 102.

A testator, in 1804, devised his real property to his brother-in-law, P., but at that time had no interest in the land in question. In 1814 he purchased the land, on which occasion the residue of an ontstanding term of 500 years, created in 1793, was assigned to P. in trust for the testator, to attend the inheritance. The testator died in 1820, when the fee-simple descended, as to one moiety, to the testator's four neices, and, as to the other, to his sister, the wife of P. P. and his wife shortly afterwards entered into possession of the whole of the premises, and received the rents, without accounting to the other coparceners; and in 1823, P. and his wife executed a feoffment, with livery of seisin; and after-wards a fine sur cognisance de droit come ecowas levied with proclamations, in which the feoffee was plaintiff and the feoffers defendants. At the time of the testator's death, and of the fine, his nieces were under coverture. P. died in 1828, having continued in sole possession. By his will, he devised to the defendant, but made no mention therein of the term. The defendant entered and continued in possession to the time of the ejectment brought against him in 1838, In 1837 the wife of P. died, and in the same year administration de bonis non of P. was granted to B., the husband of one of the coparceners. In 1836 one of the coparceners died, leaving her husband surviving; and in 1837 the husband of another copareener died :- Held, that by the feoffment and fine with proclamations, there had been an absolute disseisin of the coparceners, and not a disselsin at election, and that an entry within five years was necessary to avoid the fine. Due d. Blight v. Pett, 11 A. & E. 842; 4 P. & D. 278.

Also, that the enty was too late as to the two-husbands, and being too late as to them, was too late as to their wives, the copareeners, also, during coverture, although they would have five years to enter after discoverture. Ih.

5. OUTSTANDING AND SATISFIED TERMS.

Outstanding Term—Nature of.]—For the nature of a term to attend upon the inheritance, see Willoughby v. Willoughby, 1 Term Rep. 763; 1 R. R. 397.

— When a Bar to Ejectment, ]—A mortgage term outstanding will bar an ejectment, even between heir and devisee claiming subject to the charge: the only remedy, therefore, is in a court of equity. Barnes v. Cron. 4 Brs. C. C. 2.

between his mother and S. occupied the two | The defendants, in an ejectment, were lessees acres in question, and devised them to his widow for life, and on her death or marriage to his reserved under their lease, which contained in daughter; and then there was a devise in similar terms on the same event to his son the heir; nevertheless, to an indenture of lease, bearing date, &c., and made between G. D., of the first the lapse of twenty years from 1812, and the part, J. D., E. D. and R. B. D. of the second right of the lessor of the plaintiff claiming the part, and W. K. of the third part, whereby the premises were demised to W. K., his executors, administrators and assigns, for a term of twentyone years from, &c., subject to the covenants and agreements therein mentioned." At the time of ejectment, which was for breaches of covenants contained in the defendants' lease, the term demised in the previous lease was outstanding in W. K. :-Held, that the defendants were not entitled to set up this outstanding term as a defence to the ejectment. Duke v. Ashby, 7 H. & N. 600; 31 L. J., Ex. 168; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 236; 10 W. R. 273

In 1838, H. mortgaged premises for 1,000 years to D., and in 1839, conveyed the fee, subject to the mortgage term, to her daughter, the wife of defendant; this conveyance was unknown to the parties to the subsequent deeds. In 1842, H. mortgaged the premises in fee to M., and in October, 1844, conveyed the equity of redemption to C. In October, 1844, M. assigned the mort-gage of the fee to R. T., and the representatives of D. assigned the term of 1,000 years to J. T., as trustee, to secure the mortgage-money and afterwards to be reconveyed as C. should direct. In September, 1847, part of the premises being required for a railway, C. received the purchasemoney from the company, and therewith paid off the mortgagees :- Held, that the term had not become attendant upon the inheritance by construction of law, so as to be determined by 8 & 9 Viet. c. 112, s. 2; and therefore C. was entitled to recover upon the demise of J. T. Doe d. Clay v. Jones, 13 Q. B. 774; 18 L. J., Q. B. 260; 13 Jur. 824.

- Set up by one Tenant in Common against another.]-One tenant in common cannot set up an outstanding satisfied term in bar to an ejectment for a moiety by another tenant in common. Doe d. Bristow v. Pegge, 1 Term Rep. 760, n.; 4 Dougl. 309.

In ejectment the tenant will not be allowed to set up an outstanding term in trustees to secure an annuity, provided the lessor of the plaintiff does not seek to disturb the possession of the trustees. Ib.

- Statute of Limitations. ]-A., the devisee of a term for lives in a messuage, in 1793 conveyed it to Richard, his heirs and assigns, during the remainder of the term, with reversion to A., her heirs and assigns, in case Richard should die without children. A. died in 1799. In 1811, Richard purchased the reversion in fee, and at the same time a satisfied outstanding term was for his protection assigned to a trustee to attend the inheritance. In 1812 Richard died without issue, leaving Lewis, the ancestor of the plaintiff, his heir-at-law. Lewis was also the heir-at-law of A. Lewis did not take possession in 1812, and the messuage continued to be occupied by others than those entitled to it. The last life in the lease fell in 1835, when the lessor of the plaintiff, being heir-at-law of Lewis, and also of Richard, brought ejectment :- Held, first, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3, that the title of Lewis to the term accraed in 1812, and by the 5th section his right to the reversion accrued in 1835; that the 5th section applying only to the cases where another person than the termor was the reversioner, and the land not having been recovered be right (which the court greatly doubted), the reversion through him was barred also. Doe d. Hall v. Moulsdale, 16 M. &. W. 689; 16 L. J., Ex. 169.

Where a term has been assigned to a trustee to attend the inheritance more than twenty years before action brought, and no possession has accompanied the legal estate, the right to recover in respect of that term is barred by 3 & 4 Will. c. 27, ss. 2, 3. Doe d. Jacobs v. Phillips, 10
 B. 130; 16 L. J., Q. B. 269; 11 Jur. 692.

Presumption of Satisfaction of Term. - Under certain circumstances, the jury may presume a satisfied term to have been surrendered to the cestui que use; but if no such presumption is made, and it appears in a special verdict in ejectment that such a term is still outstanding in a trustee who is not joined in bringing the ejectment, the cestui que use cannot recover. Good-title d. Jones, v. Jones, 7 Term Rep. 47. S. P., Doe d. Bowerman v. Sybourn, 7 Term Rep. 2; 2 Esp. 499; 4 R. R. 363.

No less time than twenty years will raise a presumption that a mortgaged term has been assigned or surrendered; although the defendant in ejectment, setting up the mortgaged term as a bar, neither proves that interest continues to be paid, nor accounts for his possession of the mortgage deed, Doe d. Brandon v. Culvert, 5 Taunt, 170; 14 R. R. 733.

A term assigned to attend the inheritance will not be presumed to have been surrendered, unless there has been a dealing with the estate in such a manner as reasonable men would not have dealt with it unless the term had been put an end to. Garrard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 231; 18 L. J., C. P. 338; 13 Jur. 871.

The relation of the owner of the estate, who is in possession of the land, to the trustee of a term assigned to attend the inheritance, is that of tenant at will, and it is only on the determination of such tenancy that there is a vested right of entry in the trustee, within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2. Ib.

C. being, under a deed of settlement of 1813, tenant for life, with remainder to such of his children as he should appoint, but covenanting that he was seised in fee, sold the estate in 1840 to the defendant, who had no notice of the settlement; and the residue of two terms, each of 1,000 years, was assigned by the personal representatives of H. to a trustee for the defendant, to attend the inheritance. These terms had originally been created for mortgage purposes, and in 1773, the mortgage debt having been satisfied, were assigned to H. in trust to attend the inheritance, for the benefit of the then owner in fee. The estate had been settled in 1778, and had also been mortgaged in 1836 and the three following years, but in none of the deeds, nor in the settlement of 1813, was any notice taken of the outstanding terms. In 1844, C. duly exercised his power of appointment, limiting the estate after his death (which took place in 1853) to the plaintiff, his eldest son in fee. In an ejectment, a verdict having been taken for the plaintiff, subject to a case disclosing these facts :- Held, first, that the court could not presume a surrender of the terms, which was not stated as a fact; for that, even assuming the decision in Doe d. Put-land v. Hilder (2 B, & Ald. 782; 21 R. R. 488) to by any person, the right of Lewis was barred by presumption, if to be made at all, must be made S. P., Doe d. Egremont (Earl) v. Langdon, 12 Q. B. 711; 18 L. J., Q. B. 17; 13 Jur. 96.

Held, secondly, that as the terms were on the 31st December, 1845, attendant on the inheritance by express declaration, and would, if sub-sisting, have afforded to the defendant such protection against the settlement of 1813 as a court of equity would not have restrained him from setting up in a court of law, they were within the exception of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, s. 1, and must be considered as subsisting terms. Ib.

A term was created in 1813, to secure repayment of a loan, which was repaid in 1837. In 1840 the land was demised for lives by the heirat-law of the creator of the term. In 1843 the term was re-assigned by the satisfied creditor to a new incumbraneer, by the direction of the heirat-law of the creator of the term :-Held, that the term was not satisfied so as to enure to the benefit of the lessee for lives. Owen v. Owen, 3 H. & C. 88; 38 L. J., Ex. 237; 10 Jur. (N.S.)

884; 11 L. T. 137.

In 1829, A. died seised in fee of lands, of which his eldest son, B. was his tenant. B., supposing him to have died intestate, entered on the lands, claiming them as heir-at-law; and in 1830, mortgaged them in fee, and levied a fine to comfirm the mortgage; and, at the same time, an out-standing term of 500 years was, by his direction, assigned to a trustee for the mortgagee. In 1835 B. sold the estate to the defendant, who paid off the mortgage. The legal estate in fee and the equity of redemption were conveyed to the defendant, and the term was assigned to a trustee for him, to attend the inheritance. In 1845 it was discovered that A. had executed a will, whereby he devised the lands in fee to his second son, who thereupon brought ejectment to recover the estate from the defendant, and laid a denise in the name of the trustee to whom the term was assigned in 1835:—Held, that, by the operation of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, the term had absolutely determined; and the plaintiff could not recover upon the demise laid in the name of the trustee. Doe d. Cadwalader v. Price, 16 M. & W. 603; 16 L. J., Ex. 159; 11 Jur. 131.

6. EVIDENCE OF TITLE.

Generally. ]-Where, in ejectment, the plaintiff commenced his title by showing a conveyance in fee from S. in 1807, evidence that S. was in possession of the property in 1806 and 1807, is evidence of his seisin in fee, unless there is something to show that he had a less estate. Doe d. Hall v. Penfold, 8 Car. & P. 536.

A title having been proved in A., who con-tinued in possession from 1809 to 1814, and from whom the plaintiff derived title in 1815, it is not sufficient for the defendant to prove a bare possession by himself during 1814. Doe d. Pitcher v. Anderson, 1 Stark. 262; 5 M. & S. 161.

A defendant, failing to justify under a habere the judgment in ejectment having been set aside as irregular, is entitled, either under a plea that the plaintiff was not possessed, or that a third party else was, to go into proof of the title upon which he recovered in the ejectment. Bikker v. Beeston, 2 F. & F. 410.

Onus of Proof.]-In an ejectment to recover by the jury, and not by the court. Cottrell v. of a lease under which they were held, the plain-Hughes, 15 C. B. 532; S. C. L. R. 496; 24 L. J., tiff proved the lease which was excented by both C. P., 107; I. Jur. (N. S.) 448; 3 W. R. 248. lessor and lessee and the term of which had expired, and also proved that she was heiress at law of the lessor, but gave no further evidence. No evidence was given by the defendants. The original lessee was not a defendant nor in possession at the time of action brought. The judge at the trial having directed a verdiet for the defendants :- Held, that it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to connect by affirmative evidence the possession of the defendants with that of the lessee, but that such possession should, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be presumed Me Gragh to be by devolution from the lessee. McGrav. Dwyer, 12 L. R., Ir. 17. Reversed in C. A.

A plaintiff in ejectment gave evidence of possession for thirteen years, and of acts of ownership by fencing and allowing other persons to use the land; also that the defendant came on the land five or six years before without permission:—Held, that this was sufficient evidence to justify the refusal of a nonsuit. Whale v. Hitchcoch, 34 L. T. 136.

Receipt of Rent.]—A joint demise by husband seised in right of his wife, and his wife, is disproved by evidence of a receipt for rent given by the husband only. Parry v. Hindle, 2 Taunt.

Evidence that the lessor of the plaintiff received rent for the premises from A., who formerly occupied them, and also from the parish officers, is admissible, although the defendant does not claim under A. or the parish officers. Doe d. Lichfield (Earl) v. Stavey, 6 Car. & P. 139.

In ejectment and in trespass, payment of the rent under a lease for a series of years is sufficient prima facie evidence that the leaschold interest has been assigned to the party so paying; and a devise by such party of the tenement is prima facie evidence of title in the executor, notwithstanding a specific bequest of it. Bikker v. Beeston, 1 F. & F. 685.

In an ejectment against two for premises of which the husband of one had formerly been tenant to the plaintiff, evidence that after his death, above twenty years ago, she had remained for some time in possession, but that within the twenty years, the premises being occupied by the other (her son-in-law), she admitted that she had paid rent, is evidence that such other was undertenant to her. Hogg v. Norris, 2 F. & F. 246.

In ejectment annual payments having been made by the defendant and his ancestor to the owners of a manor, it was left to the jury whether such payments were by way of rent. Amphlett

v. Cooke, 1 F. & F. 526.

In ejectment by reversioners, the lessor's counterpart of a lease was received in evidence on their behalf, he stating that he had occupied under it; and though the date was more than twenty years before suit, and no rent had been paid under it by the defendant, and he had not come in under the lessee, yet, it appearing that the lessee's assignee had paid rent under it, and that it had expired within the twenty years :-Held, that the reversioners were entitled to recover. Homes v. Pearce, 1 F. & F. 283.

In ejectment to recover five houses, it was proved that the plaintiff had received the rents of some of them for four quarters, and of the others for five quarters, down to March, 1841, and that in that mouth the plaintiff's receiver of possession of certain lands, upon the expiration rents found the door of one of the houses secured was his freehold :- Held, that this was evidence to go to the jury on the part of the plaintiff ; and if there was no evidence given on the part of the defendant, it would be for the jury to consider whether they were satisfied upon this evidence, that the property really belonged to the plaintiff. Doe d. Humphrey v. Martin, Car. & M. 32.

By Tax-gatherers, |- In ejectment for a house, the land-tax assessment of the parish, in which the collector of taxes charged himself with the receipt of money from A., as tenant of a particular house, is evidence that the latter was tenant at that time. Doe d. Smith v. Curtwright, 1 Car. & P. 218; R. & M. 62; 28 R. R. 774

Declarations of Deceased Occupiers.]-The declarations of a deceased occupier of land, of whom he held the land, are evidence of the seisin of that person. Peaceable d. Unole v. Watson, 4 Taunt, 16; 13 R. R. 552.

But it must first be shewn that the land the deceased occupied was the laud now in the tenant's possession. Ib.

Map.]—In ejectment, the only case in which a map of property is receivable in evidence is. where it is undisputed that, at the time the map was made, the property belonged to the person from whom both parties claim. Doe d. Hughes v. Lakin, 7 Car. & P. 481.

Conversation.]—In ejectment, to prove the grant of a new lease, a witness was called, who deposed to a conversation which took place, fourteen or fifteen years back, with the owner of the property in dispute, under whom the plaintiff claimed, in which conversation such owner admitted the premises had been released, without stating the term or lives, rent or any other particulars:—Held, that such evidence could not be made available as proof of a new lease having been granted. Doe d. Lord v. Crago, 6 C. B. 90; 17 L. J., C. P. 263.

Documentary.]-In ejectment by the reversioner (on the expiration of a building lease) to recover possession of a house, which adjoined one that the lessor of the plaintiff had sold to the defendant, and the description of which in the surrender (it being copyhold) contained the words "as now occupied by A. or his undertenants," an under lease (granted pending the existence of the original building lease), under which A. claimed the ground upon which both houses were built, was received as evidence of the mode in which the property had been enjoyed. Doe d. Tims v. Jordan, 4 Car. & P. 146.

Where a vicar brings ejectment claiming in right of his vicarage, a letter written by a former vicar is admissible for the defendant, and a witness for the lessor of the plaintiff may be asked as to what is inscribed on a tablet fixed up in the church. Doed. Coylev. Cole, 6 Car. & P. 359.

If a lessor, who has only an equitable title, grants a lease, he has, as against his lessee, a good title by estoppel; but if, after the lease, the lessor, by a mortgage deed, grants all his interest in law and in equity to a mortgagee, the lessee may give in evidence this deal, and thus prevent the lessor from recovering in ejectment on a forfeiture of the lease. Doe d. Marriott v. Edwards, 6 Car. & P. 208; 5 B. & Ad. 1065; 3 N. & M. 193.

by a chain, and the defendant in it, who said it into an agreement for the purchase of them. The purchase not being completed, the vendor brought ejectment :- Held, that the agreement was an acknowledgment by A. that the title was in the vendor. Doe d. Bord v. Burton, 16 Q. B. 807; 15 Jur. 990.

Admissions. ]- Ejectment against T., the tenant in possession, and L., who came in to defend as landlord. The lessor of the plaintiff having proved his title against L., the latter set up the title of the tenant T., who paid rent to the lessor of the plaintiff as tenant from year to year. In order to shew the determination of T.'s interest, the lessor of the plaintiff produced an admission, signed by T., after the commission day of the assizes, whereby he acknowledged having attorned to L., upon L.'s executing a writ of possession in a prior ejectment :--Held, that this admission was evidence against L. as well as T. Doe d. Mee v. Litherland, 4 A. & E. 784: 6 N. & M. 313: 6 L. J., K. B. 267.

A, having made a deposit of deeds to B., on an equitable mortgage, gave a schedule of the deeds, in which he described one as the deed of C. :-Held, that in an ejectment by B. against a person. who came in under A., this admission by A. did not dispense with proof of the execution of this deed. Due d. Hall v. Penfold, 8 Car. & P. 536.

In ejectment, brought by a trustee, the question was whether certain freehold premises passed under a mortgage deed. To prove that they did, the defendant produced a deed, containing an admission of that fact by the cestui que trust for life of the premises, under a devise from the mortgagor. It appeared that the cestui que trust, by the deed, procured the forbearance of a loan of 1001, and the advance of 501, more:— Held, that the cestni que trust had an interest both ways, and that the evidence was, therefore, inadmissible. Doe d. Rowlandson v. Waimoright, 3 N. & P. 598 : 5 A. & E. 520 : 1 W. W. & H. 508 : 7 L. J., Q. B. 222.

Evidence in Former Trial. ]-Evidence given by a witness on the trial of a former action of ejectment is not, on the death of such witness, admissible for a plaintiff in a subsequent action brought to recover the same property, if the last action, though against the same defendant, and involving the same question of title, is not brought by the same plaintiff as in the former action, or by one claiming under him, but by the Tather of the plaintiff in such former action.

Where, on a former trial of the title to the same property on an ejectment by the same lessors of the plaintiff against a different defendant, a deed was given in evidence on the part of the defendant, and the limitations in it were stated in court by the defendant's counsel :-Held, that a copy of the shorthand notes of that statement was not receivable, on the part of the same lessors of the plaintiff, in a second ejectment against another party. v. Clifford, 2 Car. & K. 448.

In ejectment on a forfeiture, wrought by breach of condition against assigning without the lessor's consent, it is not necessary as against the assignee, to prove demand of possession or re-entry by the lessor; although, after the assignment and before action brought, and while the assignment and before action brought, and while the assignment may be assigned to the lessor's and the assignment possession under the assignment, negotiations had taken place between the lessor's and the assignee's solicitors upon the subject of the lessor's giving his consent to the assignment. Tabhot are Malchaidar v. Odum, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 302.

Where a lease provided that, on nonpayment of a half-year's rent, the landlord might enter on the premises for the same until it should be fully satisfied:—Held, that the # Geo. 2, c. 28, did not operate to dispense with a formal demand of possession. Due d. Durke v. Bounditch, 8 Q. B. 373, 15 L. J., Q. B. 266; 10 Jun. 637.

The defendants, in 1825, were put in possession of land by the owner, who, in 1827, excented a conveyance of it to them, which was void by reason of the Statute of Mortmain, 9 Geo. 2, e. 36. The devisees of the vendor brought an ejectment in 1843. A demand of possession was made by the attorney, who riterwards brought the action, under a written authority, purporting to be signed by the lessors of the plaintiff; but the attorney being unacquainted with their handwriting, a witness stated that he had, a few days before the trial, called on the lessors, and shewed them the authority, when they acknowledged the signatures to be theirs:—Held, first, that a demand of possession was necessary. Die d. Puther v. Walker, 14 L. J., Q. B. 181.

Held, secondry, that the recognition of the demand by bringing the action was insufficient. Ib. Held, thirdly, that the acknowledgment of the signatures by the lessors afforded no legitimate evidence that it was signed by them. Ib.

A railway act contained clauses giving a company powers for the compulsory purchase of lands, and the company was not, except by the consent of the owner, to enter upon any lands which were required for the purposes of the act until they had paid or deposited in the Bank of England the purchase-money or compensation agreed or awarded to be paid. In 1845 the plaintiff permitted the company to enter upon land, and agreed to refer the amount of compensation to an arbitrator; and in 1847 the company entered, and continued in possession until 1840, when the plaintiff demanded possession:—Held, that such demand of possession did not nake the company trespassers, and that eject-ment could not be maintained against them. His chiest son occupied the house, paying a rent to the widow, for fifteen years after the death of the father, when the widow diet:—Held, that, notwithstanding the infirmity of the testator's title, the son could not insist on retaining possession of the house adversely to the devisees beneficially interested under the will; but that the latter were entitled to require that the property should be sold and distributed according to the directions of the testator. Hawkshee v. Hawkshee, 11 Hane, 231.

Semble, that if a person to whom a particular estate is given by will for his life takes possession, and is allowed to keep, as part of that estate, something not strictly belonging to it, he cannot set up a title as gained by adverse possession against the remainderman. Re-entry no Revivac of Rights.]—The effect of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3, 4, as to land, is, that affer twenty years' possession adverse to a title, it is extinguished, so that it cannot be revived or revested by a re-entry after that period upon the dectrine of remitter, because such an application of that doctrine requires that the former title should be in existence at the time of the re-entry; and the express provision in the statute that no person shall be deemed in possession of lands merely by reason of an entry thereon, applies to cases of such re-entry. Breasington v. Llewellyn. 27 L. J., Ex. 297. S. C., at nis privas, 1 F. & F. 27.

A defendant in an ejectment to recover a piece of woodland, addinced evidence of adverse possession for more than twenty years, and the action was discontinued. Subsequently the plantiff in the action from time to time walked in the wood, and turned his cattle into it, in order to assert his alleged right, and to bar the Statute of Limitations. At length he cut down a tree in the wood, whereupon the defendant filed a bill for an injunction:—Held, that as the result of the action of ejectment shewed the defendant for that action to be in possession of the wood, he was entitled to the injunction prayed for. *Kentford v. #### 1. MORTGAGORS AND MORTGAGEES.

Mortgagor in Possession.]—Where the mortgagor remains in possession and the money is not repaid on the day stipulated, the mortgagor, who has a power of entry and sale on nonjuyment, may eject the mortgagor without notice to quit. Doe d. Fisher v. Giles, 5. Bing. 421; 2 M. & P. 749; 7 L. J. (J. S.) C. P. 134; 301; R. 686, Or denand of possession. Doe d. Robey v. Moisey, 3 M. & R. 740; 2 Sl. & C. 767.

Second Mortgages having the Title-deeds can eject first Mortgages.]—A second mortgages, who takes an assignment of a term to attend the inheritance, and has all the title-deeds, may recover in ejectment against the first mortgage, if he had no notice of such prior mortgage. Goodditte d. Norris v. Margan, 1 Term Rep. 755.

Mortgagee—Against Tenant of Mortgagor.]— and release:—Held, that without surrender to A mortgagee may recover in ejectment (without the lord, this was not sufficient title to support granted after the mortgage, without the privity of the mortgage. Keech d. Warne v. Hall, 1 Dougl. 21. S. P., Hanson v. Burke, Ir. R. 10 Ch.

If a lease is granted by a mortgagor prior to the mortgage, the mortgagee has the same rights against the lessee and those claiming under him that the mortgagor had, and no other than he had; and his remedy must be on the lease as assignee of the reversion, so long as the lease is in existence, and the tenant acknowledges his title. If, however, the lease is subsequent to the mortgage, then the mortgagee may treat the lessee and all those who may be in possession as wrongdoers and may bring ejectment, but he cannot distrain or bring any action for the rent they have contracted to pay, as there is no relation of landlord and tenant between them. If the tenant chooses to pay the rent to the mortgagee, and he accepts it, a relation of landlord and tenaut is created between the mortgagee and the tenant; and the remedy of the mortgagee will depend upon the particular circumstances of each case. Rogers v. Humphreys, 4 A. & E. 299; 5 N. & M. 511; 1 H. & W. 625; 5 L. J., K. B. 65.

A, seised in fee, mortgaged in fee to B., and afterwards leased to the defendant, D. parchased the legal estate from B., and also the equitable estate from a party who derived it from A., which party also joined in the conveyance of the legal estate:—Held, that D., though he had received rent from the defendant, was not bound by A.'s lease, but might recover against the defendant in electment after the expiration of a notice to quit, or sue him for use and occupation after the payment and receipt of rent. Doe d. Downe (Lord) v. Thompson, 9 Q. B. 1037.

A tenant, let into possession by mortgagor before mortgage, subsequently paid his rent to the mortgagee:—Held, in ejectment by mortgagee against the tenant, that the latter might defend himself, by shewing that there had been a prior mortgage, and that he had received notice from the prior mortgagee to pay rent to him, and had paid it accordingly, as the tenant did not thereby deny that the mortgagor, who gave him possession, had title, but simply that the lessor of the plaintiff had not a good derivative title.

Doe d. Higginbotham v. Barton, 11 A. & E. 307;

3 P. & D. 194; 9 L. J., Q. B. 57; 4 Jur. 432. So also a tenant who has been let into possession by the second mortgagee himself. may shew such prior mortgage and notice; for the tenant thereby admits that his lessor with respect to the first mortgagee, was, in substance, mortgagor in possession, not then treated as a tresposser, and so had title to demise : and the tenant is at liberty to go on to shew that his lessor has subsequently been treated as a trespasser by the first mortgagee, whereby his (the lessor's) title, and the tenant's rightful possession under him, have been determined. Ib.

Against Widow of Mortgagor. - Ejectment by mortgagee against the widow of mortgagor. The premises were copyhold, and the mortgagor died in possession in 1828, after which his widow continued in possession up to the time of the ejectment brought. The only title set up by the lessor of the plaintiff was an assignment of the

> How far Title of Mortgagee can be resisted by Third Party.]—A mortgagor cannot defeat his mortgagee's title in ejectment, by setting up the title of a third person. Doe d. Bristwo v. Pegge, 4 Dougl. 309; 1 Term Rep. 760, n. S. P., Good title d. Edwards v. Bailey, Cowp. 601.

> Sufficiency of Mortgage. ]—A railway company was empowered to assign and charge the property of the undertaking, and the rates, tolls and other sums arising by virtue of the act, as a security for money borrowed; and by a deed executed in the form provided, assigned, "the undertaking, and all and singular the rates, tolls and other sums arising by virtue of the act, and all the estate, right, title and interest, of, in and to the same," to a person from whom a sum was borrowed:—Held, that the deed did not convey any interest in the land of the company, or entitle the mortgagee to maintain ejectment. Doc d. Myatt v. St. Helens and Runcorn Ry., 1 G. & D. 663; 2 Railw. Cas. 756; 2 Q. B. 364; 11 L. J., Q. B. 6; 6 Jur. 641.

Mortgagor estopped from denying Title.]-V. mortgaged land in fee to O; afterwards, and while V. remained in possession, S., claiming by a title anterior to the mortgage, brought ejectment against V., and a verdiet was taken against him by consent, subject to arbitration as to what lease S, should grant to V, in pursuance of the award made:—Held, that V, was estopped from setting up such lease as an answer to an ejectment by O. Doe d. Oyle v. Vickers, 4 A. & E. 782: 6 N. & M. 437; 6 L. J., K. B. 266.

A., by a deed which recited that he was seised in fee of an estate, conveyed the same by way of mortgage to B. By an endorsement of a subsequent date upon this deed, C. wrote and signed the following:—" Memorandum, that, by indenture of surcharge, the within premises were charged by me, C., the purchaser of the equity of redemption of the within-mentioned premises, with the further sum of 3251." :- Held, in cjectment, in which B. was one of the plaintiffs, that this menorandum operated as an admission by C. that he was in possession under A., and that as A. was estopped from disputing B.'s title, so therefore was C. Doc d. Guisford v. Stone, 3 C. B. 176; 15 L. J., C. P. 234; 10 Jur. 480;

Mortgagee against Third Party.]-In ejectment on the several demises of a mortgagor and mortgagee, the defendant offered to prove that, seven or eight years back, and after the execution of the mortgage, he brought ejectment against the mortgagor (at that time in possesssion) ; that the cause was referred to arbitration ; and that the award was in favour of the now defendant, who thereupon entered under a writ of possession, and had occupied the premises ever since :- Held, that these proceedings were not copyhold by a common-law conveyance of lease admissible for the defendant against the mortgagee, although he was present at one meeting before the arbitrator; it not appearing that he took any part in the proceedings. Dor d. Smith v. Webber, I A, & E, 119; 3 N. & M, 746; 3 L. J., K B. 148.

Assignment by Mortgagor giving no right of Entry.]—A demise by a mortgagor and a mortgage of leasehold premises contained a proviso for re-entry for either of them, if the lessee should assign without the mortgagor's consent. After several mesne assignments with the mortgagor's consent, the premises were assigned to M. by a deed to which S. (assignee of the mortgage) and the mortgagor were parties, and which contained a proviso for re-entry by the mortgagor on M.'s assigning without his consent. M. paid rent to the mortgagor, and subsequently assigned without his consent, whereupon S. and the mortgagor brought ejectment :- Held, that M. was not estopped from shewing that the mortgagor was not the legal reversioner; and also, that neither the mortgagor nor S. could recoverthe one having only an equitable title to the premises, and the other having no right of entry reserved to him. Saunders v. Merryweather, 3 H. & C. 902; 35 L. J., Ex. 115; 11 Jun. (N.S.) 655: 13 W. R. 814.

By indenture of the 31st March, 1852, H. demised to B., for ninety-nine years, a piece of land and four unfinished houses, and B. covenanted that he would, on or before the 25th June, 1852, finish the houses, under the direction and to the satisfaction of the surveyor of H., provided that, if default should be made, it should be lawful for H, to enter into the demised premises or any part thereof in the name of the whole, and repossess, retain and enjoy the same as of his former estate. By a subsequent indenture of the same date, B. mortgaged the premises to the plaintiff. By indenture of the 30th July, 1852, between H. of the one part, and the defendant of the other part, reciting that H. had entered into several underleases affecting the premises, the particulars of which were known to the defendant H, assigned to the defendant the leashful premises, and all estate, right, title, and interest of him, H., into or out of the premises, for the residue of the term of years granted by the aforesaid indenture of lease, subject, nevertheless, to the underleases therein referred to. B. did not complete the houses on the 25th June, and no surveyor was ever appointed. In July, 1852, B. gave up possession of the premises to the defendant. The plaintiff having brought ejectment as mortgagee :—Held, that, assuming there was a sufficient clause of re-entry, and also a forfeiture of which H. might have availed himself, the indenture of assignment did not shew any intention, or use sufficient words, to pass a right of entry to the defendant, even if such a right is assignable under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 5, which, semble, it is not. Hunt v. Romnant, 9 Ex. 635; 23 L. J., Ex. 135; 18 Jur. 335; 2 W. R. 276—Ex. Ch.

Mortgage Term outstanding. ]—C. demised lands to B. as a yearly tenant, and subsequently mortgaged them. B. paid rent to C., and, after the mortgage, gave up possession to A., who continued to pay rent to C. and his executors:— Held, that the mortgage term granted to B. was outstanding, and that the mortgagee could not bring ejectment against A. without a notice to quit.

Acceptance by Mortgagee of Mortgagor's Tenant. The attorney of a mortgagee, who was also the attorney of the mortgager, applied to the tenant in possession of the mortgaged premises for rent to pay the interest due on the mortgage, and threatened to distrain if the rent was not paid :- Held, that the mortgagee thereby recognised the possession as legal, and that he could not maintain ejectment on a demise laid previously to such application by his attorney. Doe d. Whitaker v. Hales, 5 M. & P. 132; 7 Bing. 322; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 110.

In ejectment by a mortgagee, the mere fact of his having received interest on the mortgage down to a time later than the day of the demise in the declaration, does not amount to a recognition by him that the mortgagor was in lawful possession of the premises, till the time when such interest was paid, and consequently is no defence to the ejectment. Doed. Rogers v. Cud-wallader, 2 B. & Ad. 473.

If a person who has an estate borrows money on it upon mortgage, and the mortgagor afterwards grants a lease to a tenant for twenty-one years, that lease, being made after the mortgage, cannot be set up by the tenant to prevent the mortgagee from recovering possession, and the mortgagee may put the tenant out of possession by an ejectment; and the only remedy the tenant has for thus being put out of possession is against the mortgagor. But if, instead of the mortgagee turning the tenant out of possession, he consents to take the tenant as his tenant, the mortgagee will not thereby set up the twentyone years' lease, but will make the tenant his tenant from year to year only. Doe d. Hughes v. Buchnell, 8 Car. & P. 567.

The father of the defendant mortgaged premises, consisting of two estates, called A. & B., and the defendant joined in the deed, and covenanted for the payment of the money. After the death of the mortgagor, the defendant, to whom the property had been devised by him, remained in possession of estate A., estate B. being in possession of tenants who had paid rent to the mortgagor, and to whom no notice to quit had been given. The defendant afterwards appointed one of the plaintiffs a receiver of both estates, which were recited to be in the defendant's occupation, empowering him to receive the rents, to proceed by action or distress for the recovery thereof, and to bring ejectments. defendant defended as tenant :- Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover estate B., which was in possession of the tenants, as no notice to quit had been given to them; and that the defendant was not estopped from setting up this defence. Doe d. Bowman v. Lewis, 13 M. & W. 241; 14 L. J., Ex. 198.

Where a mortgagor, who continues in posses-sion of the premises with the consent of the mortgagee, makes a lease to a third party who expends money in improving them, the circumstance of the mortgagee's having occasionally gone to look at the improvements is not of itself evidence for a jury that he has accepted the lessee as his tenant. Doe d. Parry v. Hughes, 11 Jur. 698.

Acceptance by Mortgagee of Mortgagor as Tenant.]—Where a mortgage deed for securing payment of an annuity conveyed the land in trust, to permit the mortgagor to receive the rents until default made for sixty days in pay-Calle v. Moody, 30 L. J., Ex. 385; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1249. ment of the annuity :- Held, that the conby him in his own name to a tenant let into possession by him before the mortgage, enabled him to recover in ejectment on his own demise. Doe d. Lyster v. Goldwin, 2 Q. B. 143; 1 G. & D. 463; 10 L. J., Q. B. 275.

The defendant, by indentures of mortgage of the 4th and 5th April, 1837, conveyed freehold land in fee, and assigned leasehold premises for ninety-nine years, with a proviso for reconveyance on payment of principal and interest on the 5th October next ensuing; and with a covenant, that, on default of payment, it should be lawful for the mortgagee, after giving one month's notice, demanding payment, to enter, and, whether in or out of possession, to sell or lease; and the mortgagee covenanted that no sale or lease should be made until one month's notice had been given to the mortgagor :- Held, that there was no re-demise to the mortgagor, and that the mortgagee might bring ejectment without giving notice to him. Doe d. Parsley v. Day, 2 Q. B. 147; 2 G. & D. 757; 12 L. J., Q. B. 86; 6 Jur. 913.

A mortgage deed reciting a loan of 8501. at 51. per cent. interest, contained an agreement that the mortgagor, during his occupation of the premises, should yield and pay for the same to the mortgagee the rent of 50L, payable halfyearly; and that it should be lawful for the mortgagee to use such remedies, by distress and sale, for the recovery of the rent as landlords have on common demises; provided that the reservation of such rent should not prejudice the mortgagee's right to enter and evict the mortgagor at any time after default made in payment of the moneys secured, or any part thereof :-Held, that after default made in payment of the principal and of one half-year's rent, the mortgagee might eject the mortgagor without any notice to quit, though he had treated the mortgagor as fenant by distraining on him for a previous year's rent. Doe d. Garrod v. Olley, 12 A. & E. 481; 4 P. & D. 275; 9 L. J., Q. B. 379; 4 Jur. 1084.

T. mortgaged land to B., and, by the deed, attorned to B. as tenant, at a quarterly rent, which was stated to be done for the purpose of securing the principal and interest, and in contemplation and part discharge thereof. The deed also gave B. a power of entry in default of payment:—Held, that B., or his assignee, might bring ejectment against T., without giving him notice to quit. Doe d. Snell v. 70m, 4 Q. B. 615; 3 G. & D. 637; 12 L. J., Q. B. 264; 7 Jun. 847.

Ejectment by mortgagee against mortgagor. The deed contained a power to the mortgagee to enter and distrain upon the premises for interest, if unpaid as for rent, and the mortgagee had so entered and distrained at a period later than that of the demise laid in the declaration, but for interest accruing before the day of demise :-Held, that the power to enter and distrain was not inconsistent with the right of the mortgagee to recover in ejectment, and the exercise of it was no recognition of the mortgagor as tenant Doe d. Wilkinson v. Goodier, 10 Q. B. 957; 16 L. J., Q. B. 435; 11 Jur. 892.

Tenancy at Will.]—A mortgage deed contained the following clause: — "C. (the mortgager) the following clause: — "C. (the mortgager) agrees to become tenant to B. (the mortgagee) of the premises hereby assigned, from henceforth Hughes v. Jones, 1 D. (N.S.) 352; 9 M. & W. during the will and pleasure of B., at and after 372; 11 L. J., Ex. 50; 6 Jur. 302.

veyance operated as a re-demise to the mortgagor the rent of 24l. 10s, payable quarterly in every until default; and that a notice to quit, given year":—Held, that the tenancy thereby created was a tenancy at will. Doe d. Barstow v. Cox, 12 Q. B. 122; 17 L. J., Q. B. 8; 11 Jur. 991.

H., seised in fee of a house and land, died in 1798, leaving a widow and his son, a minor above fourteen years of age. The widow (with whom the son lived) continued to occupy the house and land in 1798. The son being still a minor, the widow married the defendant, who continued thenceforward to occupy the house and land in 1805. The son left the premises, but occasionally resided there afterwards, for two or three weeks at a time with defendant and his wife. The wife died in 1841. In 1842, the son mortgaged the premises in fee to the plaintiff for money, which was paid to the defendant, the defendant himself being present at the execution of the deed, and privy to its contents, and receiving the money from the son :- Held, that in ejectment by the mortgagee the jury was warranted in presuming that the defendant occupied as tenant at will to H. Doe d. Groves v. Groves, 10 Q. B. 486; 16 L. J., Q. B. 297; 11 Jur. 558.

A mortgage contained a power of sale and a provise and covenant by the mortgagee, that no sale should take place, nor any means of obtaining possession of the premises be taken until the expiration of twelve calendar months after notice in writing of such intention had been given to the mortgagor. It also contained a covenant by the mortgagee for quiet enjoyment by the mortgagor as tenant at will to the mortgages, on payment of a yearly rent in lien of and as interest upon the mortgage money. The mortgagor remained in possession of the premises, but no livery of seisin was made to the mortgagor. Prior to the action, there was a demand of possession; but no notice to quit was ever given to the mortgagor:-Held, that the effect of the deed was to create a tenancy at will only, and that a demand of possession without any notice to quit was sufficient to entitle the mortgagee or his assignces to maintain ejectment. Due d. Dixie v. Davies, 7 Ex. 89; 21 L. J., Ex. 60.

Restraining Action-Breach of Agreement.]-Agreement in writing not to call in a mortgage for two years, the mortgagor fulfilling his covenants. On one occasion, within two years, interest was not paid on the day, and the mortgagor shortly afterwards, after giving notice that was no longer bound by the agreement, demanded and received payment of the interest and incidental costs:—Held, that this was a waiver of the default, and injunction granted to restrain an ejectment brought within the two years. Langridge v. Payne, 2 Johns. & H. 423; 10 W. R. 726.

Sale by Sheriff-Position of Purchaser. -A sheriff having taken in execution a term of years, the judgment creditor became the purchaser, took possession and paid rent to the owner in fee. but no assignment was executed to him :-Held, that the term remained in the debtor, and he was entitled to recover it by ejectment. Doe d.

If a sheriff sells a term under a fi. fa. which is afterwards set aside for irregularity, and the produce of the sale directed to be returned to the termor, the termor cannot maintain ejectment to recover his term against the vendee under the sheriff. Doe d. Emmett v. Thorne, 1 M. & S. 425; 14 R. R. 485.

A lessor in ejectment, who claims title as a purchaser from the sheriff, who sells by virtue of a fi. fa, at the suit of such lessor must prove the judgment as well as the writ. Doe d. Bland v. Smith, 2 Stark, 199; Holt, N. P. 589; 19 R. R. 702. S. P., Hoffman v. Pitt, 5 Esp. 22.

In ejectment by a vendee of a term, sold under a fi. fa. against the defendant, it is sufficient to produce the fi. fa. without proving a copy of the judgment. Doe d. Batten v. Murless, 6 M. & S. 110; 18 R. R. 325.

Where it appeared that the term had been granted to the defendant's father, and that on his death, intestate, his son B. entered and took out administration, and was possessed till his death, and that, on his death, the defendant, his brother, entered, and that by indenture between the defendant and M. (concerning other premises) it was recited that the defendant was legal personal representative of B. :- Held, that this was prima facie evidence that the term was vested in the defendant. Ib.

Against Tenant of Judgment Debtor. ]-A plaintiff who claims under an elegit, subsequently to a lease granted to the tenant in possession. cannot recover in ejectment, though he gives the tenant notice that he does not mean to disturb his possession, only wishing to get into the receipt of the rents and profits of the estate. Doe d. Da Costa v. Wharton, 8 Term Rep. 2.

Where an elegit creditor brings ejectment against a debtor, whose prima facie title to the whole property sought to be recovered is proved, it is incumbent on other parties in possession as under tenants or otherwise, to shew their better title (e.g. by tenancy anterior to the judgment or the like), or the elegit creditor must recover against all. Doe d. Ecans v. Owen, 2 Tyr, 149; 2 C. & J. 71; 1 L. J., Ex. 43.

Action by-Evidence in. |- In ejectment by a judgment creditor on a writ of elegit, the writ, with the inquisition and the return therenpon, stating that the judgment debtor was possessed of the property, constitutes sufficient evidence of the plaintiff's title to recover; and as between the elegit creditor and the judgment debtor the return to the inquisition is conclusive, at all events down to the date of the return, so that the judgment debtor cannot set up a title in a third party arising prior to that date. Martin v. Smith, 27 L. J., Ex. 317.

- Defence to. |- In ejectment by an execution creditor under an elegit, it is no defence to say that the elegit was executed upon a judgment founded on a warrant of attorney given to secure upon land an usurious loan, because even though the warrant was voidable on the ground alleged, yet the proper mode of avoiding it would be by application to set it aside, it being too late to do so on such grounds at the trial of the ejectment. where the judgment, appearing to be in existence, must be taken to be valid. Hughes v. Lumley, 4 El. & Bl. 274; 3 C. L. R. 241; 24 L. J., Q. B. 57; 1 Jur. (8,8.) 422; 3 W. R. 109.

3. HEIRS AND DEVISEES.

When Action Maintainable by. - An heir, on whom a contingent remainder in a copyhold has devolved, may bring ejectment before admittance. Doe d. Hinton v. Rolfe, 3 N. & P. 648.

A will recited that the devisor had charged the land with 3,000%, on his daughter's marriage; then followed a devise to trustees to keep down the interest, and apply the surplus rents as directed till the lessor of plaintiff should come to the age of twenty-three; and then to him, subject to the charge:—Held, that this did not shew a legal estate out of the lessor of the plaintiff. Doe d. Beek v. Heahin, 6 A. & E. 495 : 2 N. & P. 660.

Where J., who was tenant at will to W., died, and the heir-at-law to J. entered into possession, and claimed the land as his own :-Held, that the devisees of W, might bring an electment against him, without giving him notice to quit, or demanding possession. Doe d. Burgess v. Thompson, 1 N. & P. 215; 5 A. & E. 582; 2 H. & W. 451; 6 L. J., K. B. 57.

A testator, after giving a life estate to his daughter-in-law in his real estates, devised the remainder to her son T. (who was his heir), in fee, upon condition that he should within three mouths after the death of the testator convey certain leaseholds to his three sisters ; but in case he should refuse to do so, upon failure thereof, he devised his real estates to his three grand-daughters. The testator died in 1808; his daughter-in-law then entered upon her life estate, and continued in possession till her death in 1827; the three grand-daughters then entered and continued in possession up to an ejectment brought by the heirs of T. —Held, on a special ease stating the will and the above facts, that as it was not expressly stated that T, had notice of the will within three months of the testator's death, the court could not infer the fact : and. therefore, as it did not appear that the conditional limitation had taken effect, the lessors were entitled to maintain ejectment. Doe d. Taylor v. Crisp, 1 P. & D. 37; 8 A. & E. 779; 8 L. J., Q. B. 41.

T., being seised in fee of premises, devised the same to his son, W., for life, with remainder to the issue of W. as tenants in common in fee. In April, 1845, W. died, having by will appointed executors, who managed the estate for the infant children of W., and in 1845 and 1846 received rent from the defendant, who had been in possession prior to the death of W .: - Held, that the acts of the executors did not bind the infant children; and that the latter might maintain ejectment against the defendant, without a previous notice to quit or a demand of possession. Doe d. Thomas v. Roberts, 16 M. & W. 779.

Ejecting Tenant-at-will of Devisor. ] - The owner of a cottage, divided into two parts, in 1808 put in two servants, H. & W., to occupy it, who occupied each part severally till his death in 1814, without paying any rent. They continued to occupy, undisturbed, after his death, till 1821, when H. died, having devised his moiety to W.; H., some time before his death, tool, in I to live with him tool. took in L to live with him as a servant, and after H.'s death L. continued in possession :-Held, on ejectment brought by W., that, by proving L. to have come in under H., he had shown a primă facie title. Doe d. Willis v. Birehmore, 1 P. & D. 448; 9 A. & E. 662; 8 L. J., Q. B. 108.

When Estopped ]—In ejectment, the plaintiff | pecuniary position and circumstances before and claimed as devises of  $A_\ell$ . The defendant claimed | at the time of the forgeries was admissible on the as heir-at-law of A., but had come into possession by agreement with B., who was originally tenant to A., but had attorned to the plaintiff :- Held, that the defendant was estopped from disputing the title of the plaintiff. Doe d. Marlow v. Wiggins, 4 Q. B. 367; 3 G. & D. 504; 7 Jur.

Possession creates Devisable Interest. - A person in possession of land without title has a devisable interest, and the heir of his devisee can maintain ejectment against a person who has entered upon the land, and cannot shew title or possession in any one prior to the testator. Asher v. Whitelock, 35 L. J., Q. B. 17; L. R. 1 Q. R. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 925; 13 L. T. 254; 14 W. R. 26,

W. in 1842, inclosed some waste land; in 1850 he inclosed more land adjoining, and built a cottage. He occupied the whole till 1860, when he died, having devised it to his wife, so long as she remained unmarried, with remainder to his daughter in fee. On his death the widow and daughter continued to reside on the property. and in 1861 the defendant married the widow, and came to reside with them. Early in 1863 the daughter died, aged eighteen years, and the mother died soon after. The defendant continued to occupy the property, and in 1865 the daughter's heir-at-law brought ejectment against him :-Held, that she was entitled to recover the whole property. Ih.

Evidence in Action, of Possession.] - The receipt by a party, claiming as heir, of rent accruing due on a day preceding the payment, is not evidence of seisin on such day, Doe d. Lidybird v. Lawson, 8 B. & C. 606; 3 M. & Ry. 114; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 119.

Death of Elder Brothers. |- In ejectment, where the lessor of the plaintiff claims as heir by descent, the death of his elder brothers, and also that they died without issue, must be proved. Richards v. Hichards, 15 East, 294, n.; 13 R. R.

---- Competency of Testator.]-Where, in an ejectment by heir against devisee, the testator's competency was disputed, and the defendant, after proving that the testator had given a reasonable account of the real property left to him by his father, offered, in confirmation of his account, to put in the father's will, which was in court; but on an objection to its admissibility on the part of the plaintiff, it was withdrawn, and the judge adverted to the fact in his summing up, and told the jury they might infer from the plaintiff's objecting to the will being put in, that it was conformable to the statement made by the testator :-- Held, that there was no misdirection. Satton v. Decomport, 27 L. J., C. P.

Forgery of Will. ]-In ejectment by heirat-law, claiming also under a will, against parties claiming under a dead of grant, and also setting up a later will, the plaintiff undertaking, by anticipation, to prove that the deed and the later testator, who had confessed and been convicted of the forgeries, and was called as a witness to of that will, and that the plaintiff was prima prove them :- Held, first, that evidence as to his facie entitled under it, and proposed to set up a part of the plaintiff. Roupell v. Haws, 3 F. & F.

Held, secondly, that evidence of forgery by him of other deeds (leases of the same property at enhanced rents, to increase the apparent value) in the course of the transaction, and in pursuance of the same design, was also admissible for the plaintiff. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that evidence of the forgery by him of a letter of authority, purporting to be from his father to the attorney who drew such other deeds, and also the deed in question, was admissible for the plaintiff. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that evidence on the part of the plaintiff, to prove the later will a forgery, although the defendants disclaimed it, was admissible. Ib.

Held, fifthly, that the onus of proof being on the defendants, who relied on the deed, of proving its execution (as against the heir-at-law, who was prima facie entitled to it), if the jury was not satisfied of its execution, they ought to find for the heir. Ib.

proved to have died seised, and also under a devise, revoked by what purported to be a later will, forged; the defendant setting up such forged will, and also claiming as purchaser from the forger mider a forged deed of grant to himself, the deed of conveyance to the defendant not reciting the forged deed, but falsely reciting that the pretended grantor, the forger, was seised and the forged deed reciting the deeds of the testator's title:—Held, that all the deeds might properly be presumed to be in the possession of the defendant claiming to hold the estate as purchaser, and that the plaintiff, on a noticeto produce, was entitled to call for them, and, that the defendant would, at his peril, decline-to produce them. Roupell v. Waite, 3 F. & F.

- Other Matters. In ejectment, the plaintiff made out his title as the heir of W. G. Thedefendant put in the will of W. G., made in 1837, devising the property to the plaintiff and T. G.: —Held, that the plaintiff might put in another will of W. G., made in 1838, devising the whole property to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was not bound to make this will part of his original case. Doe d. Gusley v. Gosley, 9 Car. & P. 46; 2 M, & Rob, 243.

In ejectment by the heir-at-law of F, against a devisee under F,'s will for the devised estates, the plaintiff may give parol evidence that the property was purchased by J., as agent for F., the testator, although J. had contracted in writing for the purchase in his own name. Murston v. Ros d. Fox. 8 A. & E. 14; 2 N. & P. 501; 8 L. J., Ex. 293.

Practice at Trial.]—In ejectment by heir against devisee, the heirship being admitted, the defendant is entitled to begin. Sutton v. Sadler,. 3 C. B. (N.S.) 87. S. P., Martin v. Johnston, 1 F. & F. 122.

The lessor of the plaintiff claimed as deviseewill were forgeries by an illegitimate son of the under a will of S. At the trial the defendant admitted the seisin of S. and the execution. dant began:—Held, that the plaintiff should sessed of the term. Doe d. Woodhouse v. Powell, have been permitted to begin. Doe d. Bather v. 8 Q. B. 576; 15 L. J., Q. B. 189; 10 Jur. 635. Brayne, 5 C. B. 655.

4. PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES.

Administrator. ]-An administrator of a tenant from year to year may maintain an ejectment. Doe d. Porter v. Shore, 3 Term Rep. 13.

Where a tenant died intestate, in the possession of premises, and his widow, after continuing to occupy them for several years, and paying rent to the landlord, married a second time, and her husband entered into possession, and paid rent for several years to the landlord, and, upon the death of the wife, the personal representative of the first husband obtained administration of his estate and effects, and brought ejectment to evict the second husband :- Held, that the action was maintainable, without giving a formal notice to quit. Doe v. Bradbury, 2 D. & R. 706.
In ejectment by an administrator to recover possession of land leased to the intestate, it was proved that the lease had been burnt, and then that the intestate had been in possession, and had paid rent :- Held, that the evidence of the lease was sufficient to entitle the administrator to recover. Metters v. Brown, 1 H. & C. 686; 32 L. J., Ex. 138; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 416; 7 L. T. 795; 11 W. R. 429, Lease by Administratrix-Action by Administrator de bonis non.]—An administratrix made a lease, in 1854, of premises forming portion of the intestate's assets for a term of twenty-one years. The lease did not purport to be made by her in her representative capacity. The lessee admit-tedly went into possession under the lease, but never paid any rent. He continued in possession until 1883, when the administrator de bonis non of the intestate brought an ejectment for non-payment of rent. The jury having found that the defendant had continued in possession on the terms of the lease :- Held, that the plaintiff (the administrator de bonis non) was entitled to a verdict for possession and arrears of rent. Doyle v. Maguire, 14 L. R., Ir. 24.

Executrix. ]—An executrix may lay a demise in ejectment before probate granted. Roe d. Bendall v. Summerset, 2 W. Bl. 694; 5 Burr. 2608.

Two out of three Executors.]-Two of three co-executors may recover lands of their testator in ejectment on a joint demise. Doe d. Stace v. Wheeler, 15 M. & W. 623; 16 L. J., Ex. 312.

Evidence-Of Probate or Letters of Administration.]-In ejectment for leasehold property, the plaintiff, after proving the creation of the term in 1730, shewed it to be vested in E. in 1760; he then proved a deed-poll executed by W. in 1784, by which (after reciting the deed of 1760, the death of E., and that E. had duly published her will in 1778, and that under the will the premises had vested in M.) W. released to M. No probate of E.'s will, nor any letters of administration, were produced, nor was any excuse given for their non-production. The plaintiff then deduced title from M., and showed the enjoyment of the property since 1784 to have been consistent with the documentary title :of administration could be presumed, and that

5. GRANTEES OF RENT-CHARGES.

Where a rent-charge is granted with power to the grantee, in case the rent should be in arrear for a certain space of time, to enter and enjoy the lands charged, and to receive and take the rents, issues and profits for his own use and benefit, until satisfaction of the arrears of rent, with all costs; the grantee may, upon the rent becoming in arrear, maintain ejectment against the terre-tenant, without proof of a previous demand of the reut. Dos d. Biuss v. Horsley, 3 N. & M. 567; 1 A. & E. 766; 3 L. J., K. B. 183.

When an annuity is secured, not only by a right of entry and distress, and by a right of entry and perception of the profits given to the grantee, but also by a term limited by the same deed to a trustee for him to raise arrears by devise, sale or mortgage, the rights of entry will not destroy the term, nor will the term defeat the right of entry—both kinds of remedies may coexist. Doe d. Butler v. Krasington (Lord), 8 Q. B. 429; 15 L. J., Q. B. 153; 10 Jur. 158. An owner of a first rent-charge on house property, which had fallen into decay, entered into possession, his rent-charge being in arrear, and having expended a considerable sum of money in repairs, he received rout sufficient to pay all arrears of the rent-charge. Thereupon the owner of a second rent-charge, whose rent-charge was in arrear, brought ejectment to recover possession. A bill in equity by the defendant to restrain the action, except upon payment of the money expended in repairs, was dismissed for want of equity. Hooper v. Cooke, 25 L. J., Ch. 467; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 527.

D. BETWEEN LANDLORD AND TENANT,

1. WHEN TENANT HOLDS OVER.

Recognisances to pay Costs — Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 213.]—The statute did not apply where the tenant holds under a lease which has not expired by lapse of time; but a right of re-entry is claimed for nonperformance of the covenants. Doe d. Cundey v. Sharpley, 15 M. & W. 558; 15 L. J., Ex. 341.

A tenant holding from quarter to quarter, subject to a determination of the tenancy by three months' notice to quit, cannot be compelled to enter into the recognisance to pay costs. Doe d. Carter v. Roc, 10 M. & W. 670; 2 D. (N.S.) 449;

12 L. J., Ex. 27.

If a tenancy from year to year has been executed by a written agreement, the fact that a supplemental agreement is entered into, whereby the landlord agrees that the tenant shall continue tenant so long as landlord shall continue the vicar of A., does not make the tenancy uncertain so as to preclude the tenant from entering into recognisances. Doe d. Newstend v. Roc, 1 B. C.

Rep. 86; 10 Jur. 925.

The statute only applied to cases where the tenancy is under a lease, and had expired by effluxion of time; or under an agreement from enjoyment of the property since 1784 to have been consistent with the documentary title. When the documentary title the documentary

A tenant who had surrendered his term, but refused to quit the premises, could not, on eject- | signed "A. B., agent for the plaintiff," is suffiment brought by the laudlord, be compelled to enter into the recognisance. Ib.

And where a tenant holds from year to year, without a lease or an agreement in writing, not within the statute. Doc d. Bradford (Eurl) v. Roc, 5 B. & Ald. 770.

An agreement, in writing, of apartments for three months certain, comes within the statute. Doe d. Phillips v. Roe, 1 D. & R. 433; 5 B. & Ald.

A letter from the tenant claiming title as son of the last yearly tenant, at his death, and requesting leave to keep possession for two years, which was granted, is not an agreement within the statute. Roed, Stepney v. Thrustout, M'Clel.

A tenancy for years determinable on lives is not a holding within the statute. Doe d. Pemberton v. Roe, 7 B. & C. 2; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 289; 31 R. R. 135.

In ejectment by landlord against tenant, if the title to the premises is disputed between them, the latter is not compellable to give the undertaking, and enter into the recognisances required by the statute. Doe d. Saunders v. Roc, 1 D. P. C. 4.

It is immaterial in an application under 1 Geo. 4, c. 87, s. 1, that the lessor of the plaintiff is the original lessee, and the tenant his sub-lessee. Doe d. Watts v. Roc, 5 D. P. C. 213; 2 H. & W.

If a landlord allows his tenant to hold over above a year, without taking any step to recover the premises, he is not entitled to the benefit of the I Geo. 4, c. 87, s. 1. Doe d. Thomas v. Field, 2 D. P. C. 542.

Practice-For what Security may be Given. ] The court will not include, in the security to be given by the tenant, damages alleged to have been caused by the tenant, or those under him, to the trade of the premises, Doe d. Marks v. Roe, 6 D. & L. 87.

The recognisance is to be taken for one year's value of the premises, and a reasonable sum, to be settled by the master, for the costs of the action. Dae d. Levi v. Roc, 6 C. B. 272.

- Affidavits used in Application for Security. ? -An affidavit in support of a rule stating that the tenancy was determined by a certain notice to quit, and not by a regular notice to quit, is insufficient. Doe d. Platter v. Bell, 8 Jur. 1100.

An affidavit referring to the agreement required by the statute (such agreement being certified by the signature of the commissioner administering the oath) is sufficiently identified. Ib.

The affidavit should show that the tenancy was determined by a regular notice to quit. Doe d. Topping v. Boast, 7 D. P. C. 487.

The lease or agreement which the landlord must produce in court on motion calling upon the tenant to enter into the undertaking, and give the bail prescribed, should be annexed to the affidavits in support of the motion. Doe d. Foucan v. Roc, 2 L. M. & P. 322.

Sufficiency of Notice. ] - A demand of possession is sufficient notice, so as to entitle the plaintiff to the benefit of the undertaking and security required by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 213.

Doe d. Anglesey (Marquis) v. Roc, 2 D. & R. 565; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 137.

cient. Such a notice is sufficient, although it only requires the tenant to appear and be made defendant, and find such bail, &c., "and for such purposes as are specified in the act of parliament," without going on to state those purposes in detail. Doe d. Beard v. Roe, 1 M. & W. 360; 2 Gale 48; 1 Tyr. & G. 870.

If the notice given to the tenant has been signed by an agent, it is not necessary that there should be an affidavit, that the person signing it is agent. Doe d. Geldart v. Roe, 1 W. W. & H. H. 346.

- Who can Apply. ]-An application that the defendant should give security may be made by one of several tenants in common. Doe d. Morgan v. Rotherham, 3 D. P. C. 690; 1 Gale, 157.

- Attesting Witness to Execution of Lease.] -It is not necessary that the attesting witness should depose to the execution of the lease-it is sufficiently proved by other witnesses. Ib, S. P., Doe d. Gowland v. Roe, 6 D. P. C. 35; W. W. &

Where the attesting witness to the execution of the lease is an attorney, the court will compel him to depose to such execution, though he is an attorney of the defendant. Doe d. Avery v. Roc, 6 D. P. C. 518; 1 W. W. & H. 178; 2 Jur, 468.

Rule Nisi. ] - The rule nisi need not specify all the particulars thereby required, as the court may mould the rule conformably to 15 & 16 Viet. c. 76, s. 213, in shewing cause. Doe

d. Phillips v. Roe, 1 D. & R. 483; 5 B. & Ald. 766. To entitle a lessor of the plaintiff to call for bail, he must move on production of the original lease or a counterpart, or a duplicate, and the instrument must be stamped at the time. It is not sufficient to move on a copy, or on an instru-ment stamped after the rule nisi, and before cause shewn. Doe d. Cuuldfield v. Itoe, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 329; 5 D. P. C. 365; 6 L. J., C. P. 40; 3 Scott, 756; 2 Hodges, 279.

- Allegation of Reletting.] - Where the lessor of the plaintiff upon affidavit that a tenancy under a written instrument has been duly determined, moves that the defendant may give security for costs, a subsequent retaking, if an answer to the motion, must be alleged with particularity and precision. Rue d. Durant v. Doe, 6 Bing. 574; 4 M. & P. 391.

 Defendant bringing Error—Sureties.] A defendant in ejectment must give two addi-tional sureties on bringing error, although he has before given two streties on commencing the action. Roe d. Durant v. Moore, 7 Bing. 124; 4 M. & P. 761; 1 D. P. C. 203; 9 L. J. (0.8.) C. P. 38.

2. RIGHT OF RE-ENTRY.

Entry whether Necessary.]-An actual entry is not necessary to take advantage by ejectment of a clause in a lease to re-enter for nonpayment of rent. Goodright d. Hare v. Cutor, 2 Dougl, 477.

A., tenant for life, remainder to P. in fee, leased for her life, and died in 1799, and the ov d. Anglessy (Marquis) v. Roc, 2 D. & R. lessee continued in possession, without paying rent, till his death in 1805, when his son took A notice given by a landlerd in ejectment and in 1807 levied a fine with proclamations :- | distress on the premises on some day in May, the Held, that the heir of P., the remainderman, might maintain ejectment against the son, without an actual entry to avoid the fine, or a notice to determine the tenancy. Doe d. Burrell v. Perkins, 3 M. & S. 271.

Sufficiency of .] -- A lessor, finding the demised premises out of repair, intending to take advantage of a clause of forfeiture contained in the lease, entered into an agreement with an undertenant, and subsequently received rent from him: —Held, a sufficient re-entry to avoid the lease. Baylis v. Le Gros, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 537; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 513.

On Nonpayment of Rent. ]-The rule that a tenant holding over, after the expiration of his lease, without entering into a new contract, continues to hold, upon the terms of the lease, so far as they are applicable to a tenancy from year to year, applies to a proviso for re-entry for nonby marker of the rent. Thomas v. Packer, 1 H. & N. 669; 26 L. J., Ex. 207; 3 Jur. (N.s.) 143; 5 W. R. 816.

In ejectment brought upon a right of re-entry, it must appear that the landlord had a power to re-enter, in respect of the nonpayment of half a year's rent, at the time of affixing the declaration and notice upon the premises. Doe d. Dixon v. Roe, 7 C. B. 134.

An agent of the lessor of the plaintiff may make affidavit of rent in arrear, required in cjectment on a vacant possession. Doe d. Charles

v. Rac, 2 D. P. C. 752; 3 M. & Scott, 751.

Three quarters' rent being in arrear under a lease containing a clause of re-entry on nonpayment of rent within twenty-one days after each quarter-day, the lessors, on the 2nd of October, distrained, and after sale of the distress, there remained due more than a quarter's, but less than a half-year's rent. The lessors, on the 2nd of November, served the lessec with a writ in ejectment :- Held, that the action was not maintainable, there not being half a year's rent The arrest at the time of the service of the writ. Cotesworth v. Spokes, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 103: 30 L. J., C. P. 220; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 803; 4 L. T. 214; 9 W. R. 436,

After Demand. ]-P. let premises to B. on an agreement that rent was to be payable at the usual quarter days, with right of re-entry reserved to P. if default should be made "in payment of the rent or any part thereof within twenty-one days after the same shall become due (being demanded)." In an ejectment by P, to enforce forfeiture for default in payment of rent :- Held, that the period of twenty-one days' grace must clapse before a demand could be made, for noncompliance with which ejectment could be brought, and that therefore a demand made during the running of the twenty-one days was not the demand contemplated by the parties according to the terms of the agreement, noncompliance with which would create a forfeiture. Phillips v. Bridge, 43 L. J., C. P. 13; L. R. 9 C. P. 48; 29 L. T. 692; 22 W. R. 237.

Necessity of Demand.]—Under a provise in a lease for the entry of the landlord, in ease the demise being laid on the 2nd of May, and the declaration served on the 6th of June; the defendant giving no evidence to rebut the inference, that there was no sufficient distress on the premises within the terms of the proviso; as by shewing that there was a sufficient distress on the premises in May, up to the date of the demise inclusive, or on the 6th of June, when the declaration was served, if that were material with reference to the 4 Geo, 2, c, 28. On such proof. by the plaintiff, the statute dispenses with proof of a demand of the rent on the day it became due. Doe d. Smelt v. Fuchau, 15 East, 286; 13 R. R. 472.

Sufficiency of Demand.]-By a lease rent was reserved payable on the usual quarter-days, provided that if the rent should be in arrear for the space of twenty-eight days next after any of the days appointed for payment after the same had been lawfully demanded, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter and take possession of the premises without bringing an ejectment. The rent being unpaid :- Held, that a demand made on the premises at half-past ten o'clock on the morning of the last day was not sufficient to entitle the lessor to re-enter without action. Acocks v. Phillips, 5 H. & N. 183,

A lease for years contained a covenant to pay rent, and a proviso for re-entry on nonpayment, the rent being first lawfully demanded. The property being vacant, the landlord usked for payment of rent from the person liable to pay it. and not receiving it re-entered :-Held, that there had been sufficient demand, and that the lease was effectually determined. Manser v. Diw,

3 Jur. (N.S.) 252-I.JJ.

Insufficiency of Distress. ]-Goods sufficient to countervail arrears of reut are not to be found in the premises, unless they are so visibly there that a broker going to distrain would, using reasonable diligence, find them so as to be able to distrain them. Doe d. Haverson v. Franks, 2 Car. & K. 679.

Under a clause of forfeiture, upon a distress previously to a re-entry, on the ground that no sufficient distress can be found upon the premises, every part of the premises must be scarched. Rees d. Powell v. King, Forrest, 19; 2 Br. & B. 514.

A laudlord may recover without shewing that there was no sufficient distress, if he shews that he was prevented by the tenant from entering on the premises to distrain, by his locking up the doors. Doe d. Chippendale v. Dyson, M. & M.

If a tenant leaves the premises locked up the landlord may recover, as no sufficient distress can be found. Hammond v. Mather, 3 F. & F. 151.

In ejectment for forfeiture of a lease of a house by reason of there being no distrainable goods to countervail the arrears, it is not sufficient to shew that there were no goods on the ground floor, but the search must extend throughout the premises. Price v. Worwood, 4 H. & N. 512: 28 L. J., Ex. 329; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 472; 7 W. R. 506

In ejectment for a forfeiture, the lessor sought rent should be in arrear for fourteen days, and to recover possession of two houses, numbered 13 no sufficient distress found upon the premises, he and 14, which, in 1849, with two other houses, is entitled to recover in ejectment, on proof of numbered 15 and 16, were demised by him to half a year's rent due at Lady-day, and no L. for twenty-one years, at an annual rent of 73l. 10s., payable quarterly. The lease contained | Midsummer, 1858, a year's rent was due, and in July, 1858, the houses, Nos. 15 and 16, were deserted, and a police constable entered, and for some time kept possession of them, but afterwards, by the direction of the lessor's agent, gave possession to T. to take care of them for him; but upon a verbal understanding that if he could get possession of Nos. 13 and 14, the four houses should be let to T. In December, 1859, a distress for 73*l*., one year's rent, due Michaelmas, 1858, was put in on Nos. 13 and 14, which were then occupied by the defendant. At that time the property on the premises was only worth a few shillings, and there never was, up to the commencement of the action, a sufficient distress to satisfy the arrears of rent. No distress or search was made in Nos. 15 and 16, after T. took possession, and it was uncertain whether, at the time of the service of the writ, there were or were not goods on those premises sufficient in value, if distrainable, to satisfy the arrears of rent :- Held, that there was evidence of no sufficient distress, since the lessor was not bound to show that there were no goods of sufficient value in Nos. 15 and 16, inasmuch as the possession of T. must be considered as the lessor's possession, and, under the circumstances, justitable. Wheeler v. Stevenson, 6 H. & N. 155; 30 L. J., Ex. 46; 3 L. T. 702; 9 W. R. 233.

In ejectment for breach of covenant, brought by a landlord against his tenant, it appeared that the plaintiff had sought to re-enter on the premises for a forfeiture for breach of a covenant not to assign without consent, but found them shut up and empty :-Held, that in order to entitle the plaintiff to recover, it was not necessary for him to shew that there was no sufficient distress found on the premises at the time when he attempted to re-enter. Wedgwood v. Hart, 2

Jnr. (N.S.) 288.

Effect of Distress after Action is a Waiver of. -When a landlord brought ejectment against his tenant on the 21st of July, claiming as from that day, and after action, distrained for rent due on 24th of June previous :- Held, that he might still rely, in the action of ejectment, on a forfeiture accruing before the 24th of June. Grimwood v. Moss, 41 L. J., C. P. 239; L. R. 7 C. P. 360; 27 L. T. 268; 20 W. R. 972.

Affidavit-No sufficient Distress.]-An affidavit of there being no sufficient distress on the premises must be positive; the deponent's belief will not do. Dor v. Roe, 2 D. P. C. 413.

Where premises are kept locked, and access refused by the parties in possession, so that it cannot be ascertained whether there is a sufficient distress thereon or not, an affidavit stating those facts is sufficiently positive, if it states a belief only that there is no sufficient distress on the premises. Doe d. Cow v. Roe, 5 D. & L. 272. S. P., Ramily v. Fyeroft, 4 W. R. 26.

Quare, whether upon a motion for judgment against the casual ejector, under 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 2, an affidavit stating that an amount exceed ing half a year's rent was in arrear, and that there was no sufficient distress to be found upon the premises countervailing the arrears of rent due, was sufficient; or whether the afficiavit should have stated that the property upon the premises was insufficient to countervail half a

Where judgment had been obtained upon an a provise for re-entry on nonpayment of rent. At affidavit which the party was apprehensive might be held to be defective in this respect, the court allowed such judgment to be superseded, and another judgment to be signed upon an amended affidavit. Ib.

Upon a motion for judgment on a writ of ejectment, an affidavit, which states that three quarters of a year's rent were due from the tenant before the copy of the writ was affixed to the premises, and that at the time the copy was affixed no sufficient distress was to be found upon the premises, countervailing the arrears of rent is sufficient. Cross v. Jordan, 8 Ex. 149; 22 L. J., Ex. 70; 17 Jur. 93.

Proof of Service of Writ.]—Upon trial of an ejectment under the 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 2, for a forfeiture for nonpayment of rent, it was essential that the plaintiff should prove the date and the fact of the service of the declaration. Doe d. Gooth or Gooch v. Knowles, 1 D. & L. 198; 12 L. J., Q. B. 332; 8 Jur. 19.

The record in the action was not sufficient evidence of the time of the service of the declaration. Ib.

Judgment and Execution. ] - A motion for leave to sign judgment and issue execution under the 210th section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, may be made to the court, and is absolute in the first instance. Youens v. Keen, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 384.

Where half a year's rent was due before service of the declaration in ejectment, and no sufficient distress was found on the premises; if the defendant, having entered into a consent rule, did not appear at the trial, and the plaintiff was thereupon nonsuited, he might, under 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 2, have judgment, although there had been no formal demand of rent or re-entry; but the judgment was only against the casual ejector, not the defendant. Doe d. Bedford Charity v. Payne, 7 Q. B. 287; 14 L. J., Q. B. 246; 9 Jur. 869.

Staying Proceedings. ] - A sub-lessee of the original tenant, or his assignee, may apply to stay proceedings upon payment of the rent and costs in ejectment, brought upon a forfeiture by reason of the nonpayment of the rent reserved by the original lease. Doe d. Nott v. Byron, 1 C. B. 623; 3 D. & L. 31; 14 L. J., C. P. 207.

In ejectment upon the forfeiture of a lease for nonpayment of rent, where the proviso was, that, if the rent was in arrear for twenty-one days, the lessor might re-enter, "although no formal or legal demand should be made for payment there-:-Held, that an ejectment for nonpayment of the rent within the time stipulated, might be maintained against the lessee, without demanding the rent or actually re-entering the premises; and although this case might not be strictly within the statute, yet the court refused to relieve the tenant by staying proceedings apon bringing the rent in arrear and the costs of the ejectment into court after trial. Doe d. Harris v. Masters, 4 D. & R. 45; 2 B. & C. 490; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 117; 26 R. R. 422.

- Previous to 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 212.7-The court will not, after a trial, stay the proceedings on payment of the rent and costs ; 4 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 4, only warranting such application before trial. Ros d. West v. Davies, 7 East, 363.

The 4 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 4, was not confined to year's rent. Doe d. Gretton v. Roc, 4 C. B. 577. | cases of ejectment brought after half a year's rent due, where no sufficient distress was to be found on the premises. Ib.

A tender of rent before the declaration was delivered would stay the proceedings under 4 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 4. Goodright d. Stevenson v. Noright, 2 W. Bl. 746.

Upon a motion to set aside an ejectment, and restore the possession upon payment of the rent due and costs, the rent must be calculated only to the last rent-day, not to the day of computing. Dog d. Harcourt v. Ro. 4 Tannt. 883.

After execution in an ejectment, the court will not set the proceedings aside on payment of the rent due and costs of the action, if there are other grounds of forfeiture besides the non-payment of rent. Dee d. Lambert v. Roe., 3 D. P. O. 557.

E. PROCEDURE.

1. PARTIES.

Adding Plaintiffs.]—In an ejectment by a mortgage of trust property, the judge may amend the record by adding the numes of the trustees as claimants. Bluke v. Done, 7 H. & N. 465; 3 H. A.J., Ex. 100; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1306; 5 L. T. 499; 10 W. R. 175.

If there is a dispute as to the inheritance, the court will not compel the trustee of an outstanding term attending the inheritance to lend his name to either party in an ejectment. Doe d. Prosser v. King, 2 D. P. C. 580.

Use of Name Unauthorised.]—Where a plaintiff obtained a vertilet on a count on a supposed demise by a party, without his authority, and without his concurring in the action, the court set asile the vertilet. Due d. Hammek v. Fillis, 2 Chit. 170.

Ejectment was brought against the tenant in possession of the several demises of A. and B. Application was made to strike out B.'s name, on affidavit that the tenant claimed under B. that the action was idended to protect B.'s interest against A., and that A. claimed under a conveyance from B., which was asserted to be invalid by reason of fraud. The court granted the application, though B., who was in the East Indies, had not expressly authorised it, grounds being shewn for inferring a general authority, in the party making the application, to act for B.'s interest with respect to the premises. Dae d. Hunt v. Clifton, 4 A. & E. 809; 6 L. J., K. B. 274.

Partnership. — If A lets part of a house to a firm, consisting of himself and B., for the carrying on of the business of the firm, and the partnership of A. and B. is dissolved, A. may bring an ejectment against B., and recover possession of the part of the house thus let, without giving B. a notice to quit. Doe d. Connaghi v. Hinch, 8 Car. & P. 464.

A., having let premises to a company from year obtaining the trenary by a notice to quit, and brought an ejectment to recover possession; A., on the day of the demise laid in the declaration, was a partner in the company—Held, that the fact of his being a member of the company, was no objection to an ejectment on a demise by him. Francis v. Doe d. Harrey, 4 M., & W. 881; 1 H. & H. 362; 8 L. J., Ex.

Where Defendant is a Servant.]—The plaintiff is entitled to recover, although the defendant in possession is the servant of another. Doe d.

Cuff v. Stradling, 2 Stark. 187.

A mere servant of a beneficial occupier cannot be made a defendant in an ejectment; but where a servant, in the visible occupation of premises, assumes the character of tenant in possession, he is liable to be made defendant, and his conduct is evidence to go to the jury, to presume that he is tenant in possession, unless the fact is rebuilted by other evidence. Due d. James v. Stanuton, 1 Chit. 119; 2 B. & Ald. 371. S. P., Gulliver v. Soft, 2 Ld. Kon. 511.

Defendant Wife of one Plaintiff.]—It is no defended to ne ejectment that the defendant is the wife of one of the plaintiffs. Doe d. Daley v. Daley, 8 Q. B. 934; 15 L. J., Q. B. 295; 10 Jur. 691.

2. WRIT OF SUMMONS.

Form.]—In ejectment for a vacant possession, a writ directed to the assigness and personal representatives of B., deceased, is good. Harrington v. Bythum, 2 C. L. R. 1033.

Joinder of Causes of Action.]—An application for leave to join another action with an action for the recovery of land must be made before the writ is issued. Pilcher In re, Pilcher v. Hinds, 48 L. J., Ch. 587; 11 Ch. D. 305; 40 L. T. 882; 27 W. Il. 789—C. A.

Where another action had been joined with an action for the recovery of land without leave, the court refused to grant leave to continue the action in that form, although the defendants had appeared. Ib.

— Applies to Counter-claim.]—The provision of z. 2 of Ord. XVII., that no cause of action, except those specified in that rule, shall, unless by leave of the court, be joined with an action for the recovery of land, applies to a counter-claim as well as to an original action. Compton or Counten x. Previou, 51 L. J., Ch. 680; 21 Ch. D. 138; 47 L. T. 122: 30 W. R. 658.

When Leave Necessary.]—An action to establish title to hand is an action for the recovery of land so as to require the leave of the court for its joinder with another cause of action. Whattone. Device, 45 L. J., Ch. 49; 1 Ch. D. 99; 33 L. T. 501; 24 W. R. 93.

An action "to establish title to land," not claiming possession, is not an action "for the recovery of land," so as to require the leave of the court, under Rules of S. C., r. 2 of Ord. XYII, for its jointer with another cause of action. Whetsiene v. Deubs (1 Ch. D. 99) not followed. Gledhill v. Henter, 49 L. J., Ch. 333; 14 Ch. D. 492; 42 L. T. 392; 28 W. R. 530.

Where the writ was indorsed for declaration of title, declaration that a lease was granted under a mistake, recovery of rents and profits, and a receiver, and the statement of claim asked also for possession:—Held, that this was an action for the recovery of land and nothing elsa, and that there was no joinder of any cause of action which required the leave of the court.

An action was brought by the plaintiffs to establish their title to certain waste lands, and that they might be quieted in the possession agreement to grant a lease and build a house thereof; and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from trespassing on the lands, and from interfering with the plaintiff's rights or molesting their tenants and agents:—Held, that, having regard to Gledhill v. Hunter (14 Ch. D. 422), the action was well founded. Norwich Corporation v. Brown, 48 L. T. 898.

A foreclosure action was not an action for the recovery of land with Ord. XVII. r. 2, of the Rules of 1875. Tawell v. Slate Co., 3 Ch. D.

629. Sec Ord. XVIII. r. 2.

What Claims may be Joined.]—A purchaser of real property brought an action claiming quiet possession of the property purchased, and an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with such possession :- Held, that the claim for an injunction was not a separate cause of action, and could be joined with that for possession without the leave of the court. Kendrick v. Roberts, 46 L. T. 59; 30 W. R. 865.

An action for the administration of personal estate may be joined with an action to establish title to real estate where the plaintiff claims both estates under a common gift in the same will.

Whetstone v. Dewis, supra.

Leave will be given to join with an action for the recovery of land an action for the recovery or delivery up of a deed relating to the land also for the recovery of personal estate comprised in the same instrument. Cook v. Enchmarch, 45 L. J., Ch. 504; 2 Ch. D. 111; 24 W. R. 293.

In an action by the heir-at-law, who was also one of the next of kin of an intestate, against the administratrix, who was in possession of the intestate's real estate, leave was given to join a claim for the recovery of the land, and a claim for the administration of the estate. Kitchina v. Kitching, 24 W. R. 901.

Leave was given to join with an action for the recovery of land, a claim for a receiver. Allen

v. Kennet, 24 W. R. 845.

Where an agreement for a tenancy had failed and the plaintiff brought an action for recovery of the land, and the defendant, who had entered into possession of the land, set up the agreement as a defence; on summons brought by the plaintiff for leave to amend the indorsement on the writ by claiming a valuation which he alleged that the defendant had agreed to pay on entering into possession of the land, but had not paid :-Held, that the plaintiff had a right to claim the valuation under the agreement as an alternative, in case he failed in recovering the land, and that the amendment should be allowed. brooke v. Farley, 54 L. J., Ch. 1079; 52 L. T. 572: 33 W. R. 557.

2; 33 W. R. 557. A mortgage was created of certain land by A., who subsequently went into liquidation. trustee in the liquidation sold the equity of redemption to B. An action was brought by the mortgagee against B. for foreclosure. The security was insufficient, and it was necessary to obtain possession as soon as possible. On demanding possession, however, the mortgagee found that A. was in possession and refused to go out. The mortgagee asked for leave to amend the writ in the action by adding the name of A. as a defendant, and by including, as part of the relief sought, a claim for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property:—Held, that the leave could not be granted. Satellife v. Wood, 53 L. J., Ch. 970; 50 L. T. 705.

issue had been joined, the pleadings shewed no real dispute between the parties, and the action had been set down for trial. The plaintiff had taken possession under the agreement :-- Held, that leave ought not to be given to the defendant to amend his counter-claim by adding thereto a claim for recovery of the land agreed to be let. Clark v. Wray, 55 L. J., Ch. 119; 31 Ch. D. 68; 53 L. T. 485; 34 W. R. 69.

Irregularity-Objection by Defence. ] - The plaintiff, without obtaining leave of the court, joined a claim for recovery of land with other claims. By his statement of claim he altered his claim for relief by omitting the claim for recovery of land. The defendant by his defence raised the objection that the writ of summons was issued without leave of the court :- Held, that the defence ought not to be struck out as embarrassing. Wilmott v. Freehold House Property Co., 51 L. T. 552—C. A.

Semble, that such an objection is properly pleaded in the defence, that the plaintiff cannot cure the irregularity in his writ by omitting his claim for recovery of land from his statement of claim, that to cure the irregularity the writ of summons must be amended, and that such amendment cannot be made without the consent of the defendant. Ib.

- Time for taking Objection. ]-An action was commenced against a trustee and the executors of his deceased co-trustee for the administration of the estate of a testatrix. The plaintiffs subsequently amended their statement of claim without the leave of the court, and asked that one of the executors of the deceased trustee might be ordered to give up possession of a certain inn belonging to the trust estate. It was pleaded by the defence and urged at the trial that this pleading was irregular, as joining two causes of action without leave:—Held, that the defendant should have applied at once to have the pleadings set right, and the objection was now untenable. Derhon, In re, Derbon v. Collis, 58 L. T. 519; 36 W. R. 667.

Special Indorsement - Ord, XIV. ] - See PRACTICE.

Date of Title. - When the writ contains no retrospective words the only question is, whether the plaintiff was entitled to possession at the time of the date of the writ. And although the defendant may have entered before then, that entry will not sustain the action, though it might sustain an action of trespass. Longhurst v. Elworthy, 3 F. & F. 323.

In ejectment by an heir by descent, the demise laid on the day his ancestor died was well enough after verdict. Roe d. Wrangham v. Hersey, 1

Wils. 274.

Where a notice given by a rector to the tenant of his glebe land expired previously to the time when a sequestration was read :-Held, that the rector might, after receiving a weekly allowance from the tenant, still maintain an ejectment, laying the demise between the time of the expiration of the notice and the reading of the sequestration. Doe d. Morgan v. Bluck, 3 Camp. 447; 14 R. R. 804.

ave could not be granted. Sutelife v. Wood, Where an entry was necessary, the demise 3. J., Ch. 970; fou L. T. 705.

In an action for specific performance of an Hickey Term Rep. 435, 727.

A demise laid on a day on which the forfeiture of a lease was incurred, to commence from two days previously, was good. Doe d. Grares v. Wells, 2 P. & D. 396; 10 A. & E. 427; 8 L. J., O. B. 265.

Striking out Part.]-Where parties had been served, the court would not, before appearance, entertain an application to strike out some of the demises on the ground that the lessors of the plaintiff named in those demises were dead. d. King William the Fourth v. Roe, 13 L. J., Ex. 304 ; 8 Jur. 476.

3. SERVICE OF WRIT.

On Tenant. ]-It is unnecessary, on serving a writ of ejectment, to read over or explain its purport or object, as all that can be said by way of explanation is, that the writ means what it says. Fothergill v. White, 14 L. T. 768. See Edwards v. Griffith, 15 C. B. 397.

Where a writ of ejectment has not been addressed to, but has been served on the tenant in possession, it is questionable whether the tenant can apply to set the writ aside as irregular. Thompson v. Slade, 25 L. J., Ex. 306. But if, instead of so applying, he applies for particulars, or for other information, and allows ten days to elapse, he will be deemed to have waived the irregularity, supposing it to be such, and his application should then be not to set aside the writ, but to be allowed to appear and defend. Ib.

Where a process server, after stating his business, was ejected from the presence of the tenant by parties on the premises, whereby the tenant was not personally served :—Held, good service. Due d. Mann v. Roc, 11 Man. & W. 77.

- When Lunatic. Service upon a lunatic in an asylum is sufficient. Doe d. Gibbard v. Roe, 3 Scott (N.R.) 368; 3 Man, & G. 87.
- On Agents.]-If the tenant resides abroad, service on an agent who resides on the premises is sufficient. Dov d. Treat v. Rae, 4 D. P. C. 278; 1 H. & W. 526.

But service on an agent of a tenant who is in the kingdom, is not. Doe d. Tomkins v. Roc. W. W. & D. 49, Service on a person appointed by the Court of Chancery to manage an estate for an infant is insufficient. Goodtitle d. Roberts v. Budtitle, 1 Bos. & P. 385.

Service on a person described as a mortgagee in possession, by delivering it to his attorney, who undertook to appear for him, is not sufficient without an acknowledgment by the mortgagee. Dos d. Collins v. Roc. 1 D. P. C. 613.

On Joint or Several Tenants.]—Service on an under joint tenant is good service on him and a joint tenant. Doe d. Hutchinson v. Roe, 2 D. P. C. 418.

Service on one of two tenants in possession is good service on both. Doe d. Builey v. Roe, 1 Bos. & P. 369.

Personal service on one of two joint tenants is sufficient. Doe d. Williamson v. Roe, 10 Moore, 493. S. P., Doe d. Clothier v. Roe, 6 D. P. C.

Service upon one of two joint tenants, the notice being addressed to that one only, was not sufficient. Doe d. Braby v. Roe, 10 C. B. 663,

Where there are three several tenants, each copy of the notice might be directed to the individual tenant on whom it was served. Doe v. Roe, 8 Jur. 360.

On Wife.]—Service of a declaration in ejectment on the wife of the tenant in possession is good, Goodright d. Waddington v. Thrustout, 2 W. Bl. 800.

And it may be served on the wife either on the premises, or at the husband's house elsewhere. Doe d. Morland v. Bayliss, 6 Term Rep. 765. S. P., Doe d. Wingheld v. Doe, 1 D. P. C.

But service on the wife of the tenant is not sufficient, unless it appears that she is on the premises at the time she receives it. Due d. Royle v. Roe, 4 C. B. 258; 16 L. J., C. P. 249.

Service on the wife in a shed, where the husband carried on his business, is a good service, although not forming part of the premises sought to be recovered, but closely adjoining them. Doe v. Roe, 1 D. P. C. 67.

Service on a woman upon the premises, who represented herself to be the wife of the tenant in possession, was sufficient. Doe d. Walker v. Roe, 4 M. & P. 11.

- On Members of Family.]-Service upon the mother of the tenant in possession is not sufficient. Doe d. Smith v. Roe, 1 D. P. C. 614.
- On Personal Representatives.]—Service upon one of two joint executors is sufficient. Doe d. Strickland v. Roc., 1 B. C. Rep. 210; 4 D. & L. 431 : 11 Jur. 89.

Where a tenant had died, service on his widow in possession, who was administratrix, is suffi-cient. Doe d. Pamphilon v. Roe, 1 D. (N.S.) 186.

On Officers of Public Companies. - In ejectment against a railway company, personal service of the declaration upon the secretary of the company was good under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, S. 135. Doe d. Bayes v. Roe, 16 M. & W. 98; 16 L. J., Ex. 273. S. P., Doe d. Burgess v. Roe, 4 D. & L. 311; 10 Jur. 984.

Premises Vacant. -- Where a landlord or a lessor proceeds by ejectment for the recovery of a dwelling-house and other premises demised by one lease, if the dwelling-house is unoccupied and the rest of the premises is in the occupation of a tenant, service of the writ may be effected by personally serving the tenant with a copy, and affixing another on the front door of the house, Clinton (Lord) v. Wales, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1096; 5 W. R. 113.

Affidavit of Service. ]—An affidavit of service on two persons, tenants of different parts of the premises, must distinctly allege a service on each of them. Doe d. Cock v. Roe, 6 Man. & G. 273; 6-Scott (N.R.) 961.

4. TENANT'S NOTICE OF WRIT TO LANDLORD. C. L. P. Act, 1852, s. 209, Liability to Penalty-Mortgage. -A tenant to a mortgagor, who does not give him notice of an ejectment brought by the mortgagee to enforce an attornment, is not liable to the penalties. Buckley v. Buckley, 1 Term Rep. 617 ; 1 R. R. 338.

liberty to dig for ore in other mines under the surface of other lands not demised: the tenant fraudulently concealed a declaration in ejectment delivered to him, and suffered judgment to go by default; the declaration did not mention mines at all, but the sheriff in executing the writ of possession, by the concurrence of the tenant, delivered possession of the premises demised to the tenant, and also of those mines in which he had liberty to dig :- Held, that although the latter could not be recovered under the declaration, still that the tenant, by his own act, had estopped himself from taking that objection; and that in an action for the value of three years' improved rent, the landlord might recover the treble rent, in respect not only of the demised premises, but of the mines in which the tenant had only a liberty to dig. Crocker v. Fothergill, 2 B. & Ald. 652; 21 R. R. 438.

The improved or rack-rent is not the rent reserved, but such a rent as the landlord and tenant might fairly agree on at the time of delivering the declaration in ejectment, in case the premises were then to be let. Ib.

- Setting aside Judgment.]-A regular judgment against the casual ejector was set aside upon terms, where the tenant had neglected to give notice to his landlord, who was an infant. Doe d. Thoughton v. Roc, 4 Burr. 1996.

The court will not, after a plaintiff has obtained judgment and possession in an undefended ejectment, without collasion, and has sold part of the premises, and transferred the possession, let in a landlord to defend, from whom his tenant had concealed the ejectment. Goodtitle v. Badtitle, 4 Taunt, 820 : 14 R. R. 674.

Where a tenant, without giving notice to his landlord, suffered judgment by default in ejectment, the court let in the landlord to defend, upon payment of costs. Doe d. Meyrick v. Roe,

C. & J. 682. Where judgment and execution were regularly obtained without collusion with the tenants in possession, the court refused to set it aside at the instance of a party who stated that he was landlord of the premises, and had not received any notice of the declaration in ejectment. Doe d. Martin v. Roy, 1 Hodges, 223. S. C., nom. Doe d. Thompson v. Roy, 2 Scott, 181; 4 D. P. C. 115.

The court, in its discretion, will set uside a writ of habere facias possessionem executed, and let in a landlord to try an ejectment on sugges-tion of collusion, Due d. Grocers' Co. v. Roc. 5 Taunt, 205; 14 R, R, 742,

5. APPEARANCE AND DEFENCE.

By Landlord-Right of ]-A landlord, on complying with the requisites of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 172, is entitled as a matter of right to be let in to defend, and the court or a judge has no power in the case of a landlord residing out of the jurisdiction to impose upon him the condition of finding security for costs. Butler v. Meredith, 11 Ex. 85; 24 L. J., Ex. 239; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 451; 3 W. R. 113.

- Effect of. |- Ejectment by one tenant in common against his three co-tenants in common. and a railway company, to whom the other three had demised the premises in question. The three co-tenants in common defended as landlords, and to appear and defend. Ib.

No Notice given.]-Demise by lease of lands, the company as tenant. It was proved on the together with the mines under them, with trial that rent had formerly been paid to all the tenants in common by certain other persons; and there was no evidence to shew that any notice to quit had been given, or that the tenancy had been otherwise determined :- Held, that the railway company, who defended as tenant, was not procluded, by the order admitting the landlords to defend, from insisting that the former tenancy still existed, and therefore, that the legal title was not in the lessor of the plaintiff on the day of the demise. Due d. Wawn v. Horn, 3 M. & W. 333; 1 H. & H. 75; 7 L. J., Ex. 98. Where a copyhold tenant makes a lease under a licence from the lord, and afterwards is guilty of forfeiture, the lease continues to subsist as against the lord, and a defendant actually in possession by receipt of rent, defending as land-lord, is entitled to set up the lease in an ejectment by the lord. Clarke v. Arden, 16 C. B. 227; 3 C. L. R. 781; 24 L. J., C. P. 162; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 710; 3 W. R. 444.

In ejectment by A. against B. and C., where B. defends as landlord of C., a right of possession either in B. or in C. will defeat the action. Doe d. Mee v. Litherland, 6 N. & M. 313; 4 A. & E. 784; 6 L. J., K. B. 267.

But if it appears that B. has no title, and that C. has no right to the possession, except as tenant under A., evidence of a disclaimer by C. of such holding under A. rebuts the defence, both as to B. and C. Ib.

Where a defendant came in as landlord, it was necessary to shew that he was in the receipt of the rents and profits of the premises to which the lessor of the plaintiff made title, or that the declaration in ejectment was served upon the tenant in possession of the premises. Frun d. Phillips v. Cooke, 3 Camp. 512. And see Doe d. Schoffeld v. Alexander, 3 Camp. 516; 2 M. & S. 525 ; 14 R. R. 830.

A third person cannot defend as landlord, where it appears that the tenant in possession came in as tenant to the lessor of plaintiff, and paid rent to him, under an agreement which has expired. Due d. Knight v. Smythe, 4 M. & S. 347; 16 R. R. 486.

By Tenant—When allowed.]—Upon an application to be allowed to appear and defend, it is enough if the affidavit shews a prima facie case of possession by the applicant or his tenant. Craft v. Lumley, 4 El. & Bl. 608; 24 L. J., Q. B. 78; 1 Jnr. (N.S.) 424; 3 W. R. 284.

Therefore, in an ejectment to recover the Opera House, in the Haymarket, an affidavit in support of an application to appear and defend in respect of part of the premises mentioned in the writ, which stated that one of the boxes had been demised by deed to the applicant for a term of years, with free and uninterrupted admission, egress and regress, and the full use of the same, by tickets of admission during the nights of public performances, and all profits, advantages, and appurtenances to the box belonging, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, and that after the execution of the deed the applicant entered into possession of and had ever since continued in possession of the box, with all the rights, privileges, and appurtenances, is sufficient. Ib

But where an applicant was a tenant by elegit, who had recovered the premises in ejectment against the defendant, but had not been put into actual possession, the court refused to allow him

The court will not allow a lessee to defend (alone) an ejectment against his landlord, or those claiming under him, on a supposed defect of title. Driver d. Oxenden v. Lauvence, 2 W. Bl. 1252.

By Devisee, Heir and Remainderman,]—The court will not permit a devisee, not having been in possession, to be made defendant in ejectment instead of the tenant, as landlovd. Lovelock d. Norris v. Dancaster, 3 Term Rep. 783.

But they will permit the heir-at-law, or remainderman, claiming under the same title.

Or a devisee in trust. Lovelock d. Norris v. Dancaster, 4 Term Rep. 122. And see Doe d. Heblethwaite v. Roc, 3 Term Rep. 783, n.

W. having been in possession of certain land by her tennuts, died in 1855 without issue. The plaintiff, claiming as devisee under her will, hrought ejectment against the tennuts who attorned to him. Certain parties alleging that G. had been seised in fee, and had devised the land to W. for life, claimed as heits of G. The seishin free of G. and the title of the applications as his heirs were denied by the plaintiff —Held, that these persons were not entitled to be let in to appear and defend, as having been in possession by themselves or by their tennuts, under 15 & 172. Wistorent v. Hawphrey, 5 H. & N. 185; 29 L. J., Ex. 118; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 231; J. L. T. 301; 8 W. R. 215.

Party who has obtained Judgment but not Possession. 1—A person who has recovered judgment in ejectment upon a forfeiture of a lease, but has not actually obtained possession, is not by 15 & 16 Vete. 6.76, s. 172, enabled to come in and defend an action of ejectment. Thompson v. Tombisson. 11 Ex. 442.

By Mortgagees.]—So the court permitted a mortgagee to be made defendant with the mortgager. Dae d. Tilyard v. Cooper, 8 Term Rep. 645.

But not a mortgagee to come in and defend as landlord, unless he is interested in the result of the suit. Dae d. Pearson v. Hoe, 6 Bing. 613; 4 M. & P. 437; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C; P. 228.

After Judgment and Execution.]—The court will not set aside a judgment and execution, in order to let in a person to defend, though he makes an affidavit setting forth a clear title, and offers to pay costs. Doe d. Ledger v. Rec., 3 Taunt. 508.

The plantiff is abous, and signed judgment in default of appearance. The sheriff ejected H., who was in possession, and put the plantiff in. H. had no knowledge of the action, and did not claim to hold through J. H. applied to have the writ und subsequent proceedings set saide for irregularity —Held, that the right order was that the judgment and subsequent proceedings be set aside, the plaintiff to go out of any possession obtained under the judgment; the order to take effect only if H. within twelve days elect to be acticed as defendant; H. to be at their time of the issue of the write have an in possession by himself or his temant; the order to be without prejudice to any right the plantiff without prejudice to any right the plantiff inglight threather have to sign judgment against 5. upon filing a proper affidavit, Minet y. Alatona, 63 1. T. 507—C. Matona, 63 1. T. 507—C. Maton Mistake in Order.]—Where a defendant defended as owner, but, by mistake, was desoribed in the consent rule as landbud!—Held, that he was not thereby precluded from shewing that a third party had been recognised by the plaintiff as his tenant. Doe d. Fellowes v. Alford, I. D. & L. 470; 13 B. J., Ex. 47.

Administration Action—Costs.]—In an action to administer real and personal estate, cross summonses, for leave to defend at the cost of the estate certain actions of ejectment, were taken out—first, by the plaintiff, who was the sole acting trustee (three others named in the bill lawing dischained), and second, by the equitable tenant for life, who was in possession of the rents under an order of the court —relied, that the court could not refuse the claim of the thenant for life to defend the actions of ejectment. Leave given accordingly, with liberty to use the name of the trustee for that purpose. Longhourne v. Fisher, 47 L. J., Ch. 379; 88 L. T. 216; 26 W. R. 276.

6. PARTICULARS.

Order for. —In ejectment by remainderman against lessee of the late tenant for life, on the ground that the lease was granted under a power not properly executed, the court will order the plaintiff to give particulars of the alleged defects in the execution. Due d. Egyremont (Lard) v. Williams, 7 Q. B. 688,

In an ejectment for a forfeiture of a lease, the court will compale the plaintiff to deliver a particular of the breaches of covenant on which he intends to rely. Doe d. Birch v. Phillips, 6 Term Rep. 507.

In an action for recovery of land, where the plantiff sets up a claim to possession as heir-atlaw without further detail, a defendant in possession is cutified to particulars of the pedigree on which such leitship is based. Palmer v. Palmer, 61 L. J., Q. B. 236; [1892] 1 Q. B. 319.

— How far a Stay of Proceedings.]—Inejectment a party elatining to be lamtiloral took out a summons for particulars of the premises, and also a summons for time to appear and plead. An order was made for the fellvery of particulars, but containing no clause for a stay of proceedings; on the other summons, am order for a week's time to plead:—Hold, that the order for particulars did not operate as a stay of proceedings. Due d. Roberts v. Rue, 2 D. & L.
678; 13 M. & W. 691; 14 L. J., Ex. 101.

The court will stay proceedings until the plaintiff specifies the particulars for which his writ is served. Doe d. Saunders v. Newcustle (Duko), 7 Term Rep. 332, u. See Ord. XIX. r. 8.

Application for.]—Semble, an application for particulars may be made before appearance. Doe d. Vernon v. Roe, 7 A. & E. 14; 6 L. J., K. B. 194; 2 N. & P. 237.

Payment into Court.]—In ejectment by a lessur for breach of covenant by the lessee, he delivered as particulars of breaches, first, the morpayment of three years' rent from 1887 to 1870; secondly, the permitting a sate by public auction on the premises in 1867, contrary to the covenants in the lesse. The lessee them took out a summons for relief under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1862, a 212, and obtained an order that, upon payment of the amount found unauthorised, may be referred to his legal right, to be due for rent, &c., proceedings should be stayed with reference to the breach for uponpayment of rent. He afterwards paid into court the amount found to be due to the lessor :-Held, that the fact that the lessor had in his particulars asserted his right to rent due after the first forfeiture, and that the lessee had paid this rent into court, did not constitute a waiver of this forfeiture, as the lessor was no party to the payment into court, and had merely stated in his particulars that if he failed on one ground m in particulars each i ne idnes on one ground of forfeit proper another. Toleman v. Porthury, 41 L. J., Q. B. 98; L. R. 7 Q. B. 344; 26 L. T. 292; 20 W. R. 441—Ex. Ch.

Proof. - In ejectment to recover premises for nonpayment of rent, a variance between the amount of rent stated in the particulars of demand, and the amount proved at the trial to the due, is inumaterial. Tenny d. Gibbs v. Moody, 10 Moore, 252; 3 Bing. 3; 3 L. J. (o.s.) G. P. 122; 28 R. R. 552.

Where in ejectment by landlord against tenant, particulars of breaches of covenant are delivered. for selling hay and straw off the land, removing manure, and non-cultivation, evidence of a breach of covenant by mismanagement in over-cropping, or by deviating from the usual rotation of crops, is inadmissible. Doe d. Winnall v. Broad, 2 Man. & G. 523; 2 Scott (N.B.) 685; 1 Drink.113;

10 L. J., C. P. 80. Where an ejectment is brought to recover possession of premises, under a clause of re-entry for brench of covenant in a lease, if the lessor of the plaintiff is himself in possession of a part of the premises, it is unnecessary to demand possession of that part in the particulars of the breaches delivered, Doe d. Hills v. Morris, 6

7. NEW TRIAL.

Appeal-Discretion, |-Where, mon an appeal, in an ejectment, against a judgment discharging a rule, it appeared that there was matter which would have justified the court in granting a new trial, it refused to exercise its discretion and power in that behalf, upon the ground that the court below had not granted a new trial, and that there were defects in the equity of the appellant's claim. Gibbson v. Doeg, 10 W. R.

8. JUDGMENT.

Regularity of.]-After verdict for the plaintiff in ejectment, the defendant having grounds to move for a new trial, within the first four days of the term, it was arranged that the verdiet and judgment in an action of trespass pending between the same parties should determine the verdiet and judgment in the ejectment. On the action of trespass coming on for trial a juror was withdrawn, on terms, no costs on either side. Judgment having been afterwards signed in the ejectment:—Held, that such judgment was irregular, Dow d. Boeston v. Bibber, 5 H. & N.

If there has been judgment by default in ejectment against several, the fact that the of them, who were unnecessary parties, does not vitiate the proceedings. Le Clere v. Greene, 22 W. R. 428; Ir. R. 7 Eq. 371.

The entry of a plaintiff in ejectment, under

Effect of. ]-The reason why in ejectment one trial does not bind the inheritance, is not from any rule or maxim of law that one trial caunot any fine or maxim or law that one triat caution conclude the right—for in proper actions that may be done—but from the peculiar nature of an ejectto firms, in which no judgment as to the inheritance can be given. Lunaw v. Ryder, 7 Bro. P. C. 145.

Possession under a judgment in ejectment can never amount to a disselsin of the freehold : but will enure according to the right of the party recovering, whether it is a right of freehold in possession, in tail, or in fee, Doc d. Atkins v. Horde, Cowp. 702,

How far Evidence-Estoppel. ]-A judgment in ejectment is evidence to go to the jury in a subsequent ejectment brought upon the demise of the same lessor against the same defendant. Doe d. Strode v. Seton or Seaton, 2 C. M. & R. 728; 1 Tyr. & G. 19; 1 Gale, 303; 5 L. J., Ex. 73.

In ejectment against A., on the demise of B., mortgagee, a recovery in a former ejectment subsequently to the mortgage, on the demise of A., against C. the mortgager, is inadmissible for the defendant. Doe d. Smith v. Webber, 3, N. & M. 746; 1 A, & E, 119; 3 L. J., K. B, 148.

A judgment in ejectment upon the several demises of two is evidence to support trespass quare clausum fregit, brought by them jointly.

Chamier v. Clingo, 5 M. & S. 64; 17 R. R. 276.

A., B. and C., being successive tenants in tail of property held under an inalienable parliamentary title, and B. having, after the death of A., entered into possession of the estates, and, together with them, of certain leaseholds formerly in the possession of A., his executors brought an ejectment against B. to recover possession of the leaseholds as part of his estate.

B. having died before trial of the action, another action was brought against C., the successor in title. C., who was also executor of B., compromised the action on terms of giving judgment and buying the leaseholds at a certain price, with a further stipulation that 4,000%, should be allowed as a debt from B.'s estate in respect of rents received by B. Before the compromise, a creditor's suit was instituted, and a decree made for the administration of B.'s estate, which was insolvent. On a summons by A.'s executors toprove against B.'s estate for the amount of the rents actually received by him :- Held, that the judgment in the action against C, was not evidence of wrongful possession by B., which could serve as a foundation for the claim. Tulbot v. Shrewsbury (Eurl), L. R. 14 Eq. 503; 20 W. R. 854.

A judgment in ejectment is not conclusive evidence of title in an action for mesne profits, unless pleaded by way of estoppel. Doe v. Hud-dart, 2 C. M. & R. 316; 4 D. P. C. 437; 1 Gale, 260 ; 5 Tyr. 846.

A recovery in ejectment against the wife cannot be given in evidence in an action against the husband and wife for mesne profits. Denn v. White, 7 Term Rep. 112.

The judgment in an ejectment is evidence against a defendant who comes into possession under the defendant in the ejectment. Doe v. Whiteombe, 8 Bing. 46; 1 M. & Scott, 107.

Where premises are in the possession of a colour of an habere afterwards held to be tenant, and there is judgment in ejectment against the casual ejector; in an action against the landlord for the mesne profits and costs of the ejectment, the judgment in ejectment is no evidence against him, without proof that he had notice of the ejectment, so that he night have come in to defend it; but a subsequent promise by him to pay the rent and costs amounts to an admission that he is liable to the action. Hunter V. Britta, 8 Camp. 455; 14 R. R. 807.

A judgment by default in ejectment is, per se, no evidence of the defendant's possession at LI is prima facie evidence of his possession at the date of the writ, though not for any period anterior to it, Pearse v. Chaler, 38 L.J., Ex. 82; L.R. & Ex. 92; 20 L. T. 82.

Since the Common Law Procedure Act, 1853 (Ireland), a judgment by default in ejectment is not an estoppel; and, therefore, in an action for mesue rates, is not conclusive as to the time at which the plaintiff's title accrued. Kenna Nugent, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 464—Ex. Ch.

To an action for mesue profits the defendants pleaded title to the lands in themselves during the time for which mesue profits were claimed. The plaintiff replied, by way of estopped, as to so much of the mesue profits as had accrued since a certain day named, that he sued out a writ of ejectment, for the purpose of recovering possession of the lands, wherein lue claimed to be entitled from such day, and that thereupon such proceedings were had that he recovered the lands and possession of them:—Held, that the lands made possession of them:—Held, that the pladfield in the spectra of an estopped with respect to the duration of the plaintiffs title, and the replication was therefore bad. Harris v. Malhern, 45 L. J., Ex., 244; 1 Ex. D. 31; 43 L. T. 39; 24 W. R. 208.

A plaintiff in ejectment, who enters judgment by default against several, is not estopped by the record from shewing that some of them were not in possession, and were unnecessary parties. Le **Olere v. Greene, 23 W. R. 428; Ir. J. 7. Id., 371.

9. Costs.

Who Liable to Pay.]—An appearance had been entered in the annes of the tenuts in possession, and the deferree had been conducted by an attemey employed by H. and S., who had no beneficial interest in the premises, but defended as trustees. Upon motion after verdict for the plaintiffs against H. and S. for payment of the costs of the action—Held, that the court could make the real parties pay the costs, since 15 & 16 Vict. o.76, s. 169, as well as before, and therefore the rule should be made absolute. Hatchisson v. Greentcoul, 4 El. & Bl. 824; 3 C. L. R. 118.

To entitle a plaintiff in ejectment to call upon parties who are strangers to the record to pay the costs, it must be clearly shewn that the defence was conducted by them for their own benefit in the name of a pauper defendant; it is not enough to shew that they are interested as equitable mortgagees of part of the premises, and that they have endeavoured to make terms with the plaintiff after judgment signed. Anstey v. Edwards, 16 C. R. 212.

The court has jurisdiction to order, by rule, the party really interested in bringing an ejectment to pay the costs of the defendant. Mabbs v. Vandorbrande, 4 B. & S. 904; 33 L. J., Q. B. 177; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 745; 9 L. T. 760; 12 W. R. 465

The court, notwithstanding the 15 & 16 Viet, c. 76, possesses the power to order one not a party to the action to pay the costs in an ejectment, Thornton v. B'Hheimon, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 606; 8 L. T. 507; 11 W. R. 916.

When the real defendant in an action of ejectment appears and consents that the plaintiff shall sign judgment, the plaintiff is entitled to costs, though the case is not specifically provided for by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, Dubbiac v. Delacaurt, 44 L. J., Ex. 129; L. R. 10 Ex. 210; 23 W. R. 632.

— One of several Defendants.]—Where three ejectments were brought against a hardlord and his two tenants, and the landlord obtained a rule for the consolidation of the three actions, and that the ejectment against one of the tenants (who was a pumper) should abide the event of the ejectment against the other; and that action was tried, and the plaintiff obtained judgment, and took passession of all the tenuments, the court compelled the landlord to jay the costs of that ejectment. Threatont the Jones v. Sheaton, 10 B. & C. 110. Where one of several defendants has appeared separately, and limited his defence to part of the property claimed, he is answerable for the whole costs, whether occasioned by his own defence or by the defence of the other defendants, miless he has confessed the claimant's title. Johnson v. Mills, 87 L. J., G. P., 57; L. R. 3 C. P. 23; 17 L. T. 15; 16 W. R. 132.

Out of Estate.]—The costs of a suit in the nature of an ejectment bill to recover devised property on a certain construction of a will, though doubtfal, are not within the rule in administration suits, and they come out of the estate. Johnson v. Brady, 11 Ir. Ed. R. 386, Compelling Delivery of Bill of.]—When a plaintiff has obtained judgment in ejectment, and executed a writ of possession, the defendant is entitled to call upon him to deliver a bill of costs. Laker v. Keunders, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 858; 29 L. J., C. P. 158; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 637; 1 L. T. 403; 8 W. R. 190.

10. RECEIVER.

Disputed Title—Jurisdiction.]—Under s. 25, snb-s. 8, of the Judicature Act, 1873, the court has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver wherever it shall appear just or convenient so to do, and consequently in an ejectment action, where the title to real property is in dispute. Found to Van Grutten, 66 L. J., Ch. 53; [1897] 1 Ch. 64; 75 L. T. 898—C. A.

Defendant in Possession—Judicial Discretion.]—It is not a proper case for the exercise of this judicial discretion where the defendant in an action for ejectment is the admirted heirat-law of the last owner, and has as such taken possession of the property in dispute, and there appears to be a question to be decided between the parties, and the property is safe, and there is no evidence of waste; and the more fact that such defendant is impountious is not a ground for the appointment of a receiver. IL.

Form of Order. ]—Per Kekewich, J.: An order appointing a receiver in a case of disputed title to real estate should be made subject to the some occurrence subsequent to action brought. rights of any incumbrancer. Ib.

Proceedings by. ]-A receiver who is about to bring an ejectment for nonpayment of rent against a tenant, is not required to obtain the discharge of a general order for liberty to distrain, as against the tenant be seeks to eject. as it may become prudent to distrain if more than a year's rent is due. Sturgeon v. Douglas, 1 Hog. 400.

A receiver cannot proceed in electment. Wunn v. Newborough (Lord), 3 Bro. C. C. 88.

Ejectment when Receiver in Possession. !-Where a receiver is in possession, an ejectment cannot be brought without leave of the court, Angel v. Smith, 9 Ves. 335; 7 R. R. 214.

Where a receiver has been appointed over lands held at a rent, the landlord must obtain leave of the court before he can commence an action to recover possession for nonpayment of rent; and, in granting such application, the court has jurisdiction to impose terms, such as that the proceedings shall not be commenced for a specified time. In disposing of such applications the court will be slow to interfere with the rights of the hindlord, and will only impose conditions when necessary for the benefit of the estate for sale, and not likely to occasion the landlord any Battershi's Estate, In re. appreciable injury. 31 L. R., Ir. 73.

A party who had commenced proceedings by ejectment, before he got notice of the appointment of a receiver over the land, need not make any application to the court, until he is ready to execute his habere. Townsend v. Somerville, 1 Hog. 99.

A judgment creditor, who is not a party in the cause, may proceed by ejectment without leave of the court, at any time before the general order is served on the tenants to pay their rents to the receiver. Hemsworth v. Maunsell, 1 Hog.

11. EXECUTION.

Writ of Possession, ]-Under Ord, XLVIII, a writ of possession is now substituted for the writ of assistance, whether between parties or as against strangers to the action. Hall v. Hall, 47 L. J., Ch. 680.

When Plaintiff's Title has expired. ]-A claimant in ejectment is entitled to a writ of possession, notwithstanding the lease under which he claims, though in force at the time the action was commenced, has expired before the time of trial, nuless the defendant shows affirmatively that the claimant has notific whatever. Gibbins v. Buchland, 1 H. & C. 736; 32 L. J., Ex. 156; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 207; 8 L. T. 87; 11 W. R. 380.

Where a landlord has recovered judgment in an action against his tenant for the possession of premises which had been held over after the expiration of the tenancy, he will be allowed to issue the writ of possession notwithstanding that his estate in the premises terminated after the commencement of the action and before the trial, unless it be unjust and futile to issue such writ, and it is for the defendant to shew affirmatively that this will be the result of issuing such writ. Knight v. Clarke, 54 L. J., Q. B. 509; 15 Q. B. D. 294; 50 J. P. 84—C. A.

If a person, having title to the possession of land, bring an ejectment, and lose his title by writ of restitution to a portion of the lands taken some occurrence subsequent to accound prougate, the is entitled to judgment and costs, but not to a habore. Tobia v. Cleary, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 17. Cf. Doe d. Morgan v. Bluck, 3 Camp. 447; 14 R. R.

Time for. ] - Where in an ejectment after defence taken, the plaintiff obtains a verdict for possession, mesne rates and costs, execution cannot issue until the judgment is complete, and the plaintiff is therefore not entitled to a writ of possession until the costs are taxed and added to the judgment, or are waived by him. Beusley v. Chapman, 6 L. R. Ir. 393.

Defendant retaking Possession.]—When, after writ of possession executed, the defendant foreibly retook possession, the Queen's Bench Division made an order renewing the writ. Stacpoole v. Walsh, 6 L. R., Ir. 444.

Where a writ of habere facias possessionem has been executed, and possession has been given to the plaintiff, but the tenant subsequently forcibly dispossesses him, the court will grant a new writ, but the rule for such writ is only nisi in the first instance. Doe d. Lloyd v. Roe, 2 D. (N.S.) 407; 7 Jur. 352.

After possession once given under a writ the plaintiff cannot sue out another writ of possession, though he is disturbed by the same defendant, and though the sheriff has not yet returned the former writ. Doe d. Pate v. Roe, 1 Taunt.

After possession of premises recovered in ejectment has been delivered to the owner by the sheriff, and the writ of possession returned, the power of the court in the sait is at an end, and if the defendant retakes possession afterwards, the court will not summarily interfere. Wilson v. Chanton, 6 L. T. 255; 10 W. R. 465.

Where a defendant, having been put out of possession by the sheriff, and possession given to the lessor of the plaintiff, afterwards, on the same day, forcibly resumed possession of the premises, the court ordered a writ of restitution to issue within a week, the defendant paying the costs of the application for the writ. Due d. Pitcher v. Roc. 9 D. P. C. 971.

Judgment for Recovery of Possession of Land.]
-A judgment for forcelosure absolute is not a judgment for the recovery of the possession of land within the meaning of Ord. XLII. r. 3, of rules of court, 1875. Wood v. Wheater, 52 L. J., Ch. 144; 22 Ch. D. 281; 47 L. T. 440; 31 W. R.

Order-Attachment. ]-Where a rule of court in ejectment required possession to be delivered up, but did not mention by whom, the court refused to make a rule absolute for an attachment against the tenant for not delivering up; and, as he was a stranger to the ejectment, also refused to grant a rule requiring him to deliver up possession. Doe d. Lewis v. Ellis, 9 D. P. C. 944

Possession of too much Land given.]-Where, in ejectment for five-eighths of a cottage, the sheriff gives possession of the whole :- Held, that the tenant should be restored to his possession of three-eighths of the premises. Roe d. Saul v. Dawson, 3 Wils. 49.

Motion on the 8th of November, 1873, for a

1871:—Held, that the delay was a bar to the application, inasmuch as it was perfectly clear that more had been taken under the writ than ought to have been taken, and the delay was not accounted for. Rockfort v. Bermingham, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 508.

Tenant Holding Over-Value of Crops Seized.] -Several crops having been taken under an habere facins possessionem, issued against a tenant for holding over, the court refused a rule for the lessors of the plaintiff to pay over the value of them to the defendant after deducting the amount of rent due. Doe d. Upton v. Witherwick, 3 Bing, 11; 10 Moore, 287; 3 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 126.

Staying Proceedings Distress after Verdict. -The landlord of premises, after notice to quit brought ejectment against the tenant, and obtained a verdict; the latter still continuing in possession, the landlord afterwards distrained on him for reut, which became due after the verdict, and which he paid :-Held, that the execution in the ejectment could not be stayed, as the tenant should have disputed the distress. Doe d. Holmes v. Davies, 2 Moore, 581,

Liability of Sheriff |- Judgment had been signed for the plaintiff in ejectment. He caused to be issued and delivered to the sheriff a habere facias; then made an appointment with the sheriff for the purpose of executing the writ. The sheriff, having been informed by the defendant's attorney that the proceedings were irregular, and would be set aside, did not execute the writ. The judgment was afterwards set aside on an affidavit of merits :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in an action against the sheriff the easts he had incurred in preparing to assist the sheriff to execute the writ. Mason v. Paynter, 1 G. & D. 381; 1 Q. B. 974; 10 L. J., Q. B. 299.

Taking Possession on Strength of Verdict. After verdict and judgment, where the landlord defends, execution may be issued against him without any further order of the court. Doe d.

Lucy v. Bennett, 7 D. & R. 61; 4 B. & C. 897.
Semble, per Patteson, J., that a party having recovered in an ejectment, cannot, by his own act only, and without the authority of the court, take possession. Doe d. Stephens v. Lord, 6 D. P. C. 257.

12. WRIT OF RESTITUTION.

Who Entitled to.]—The plaintiff obtained an irregular judgment, under which possession was delivered to him. The judgment was afterwards set aside, and a rule was obtained for restoring possession to H., whose tenant had been dispossessed; and that H, should be admitted to defend as landlord. H, entered into the consent rule, and delivered a plea. The rule could not be served upon the plaintiff, by reason of his absconding :-Held, first, that H. was entitled to a writ of restitution. Doe d. Whittington v. Hards, 20 L. J., Q. B. 406; 15 Jur. 771.

Held, secondly, that H. was sufficiently made a party to the record. Ib.

Where judgment is set aside and possession ordered to be restored by the plaintiff if he does nature and amount of such demands, not proceed to trial and establish his title at the title d. Leon v Lonsdown, 3 Anst. 937. next assizes, a writ of restitution will be awarded under an habere execution on the 21st of April, | if the plaintiff fails to do so, although he was alone prevented by the misconduct of his own attorney, and although the title be still undetermined. Doe d. Stratford v. Shaill, 2 D. & L. 161; 13 L. J., Q. B. 321; 8 Jur. 538. Such order to restore possession need not be specifically directed to the party. Ib.

Judgment was signed for the plaintiff as for want of a plea, and writs of possession were exeented. The defendant had left a plea at the judge's chambers. The defendant obtained a judge's order to set aside the judgment and writs of possession, and commanding the sheriff to restore possession :- Held, that the order ought not to have been on the sheriff, and that writs of restitution issued upon the order were irregular. Doc d. Williams v. Williams, 4 N. & M. 259; 2 A. & E. 381; 4 L. J., K. B. 39.

The lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment, who was a mortgagee, obtained judgment, and after more than a year and a day had elapsed, without reviving the judgment by sel. fa., issued a hab. fac. poss., and had possession thereunder; the execution was afterwards set aside by a judge's order, but the judgment left in force. On motion for a rule for a writ of restitution:—Held, that the lessor of the plaintiff could not retain possession on the ground of his being mortgagee, independently of the writ of possession, and that, although a writ of restitution could not issue, the rule might be moulded so as to order the lessor. of the plaintiff to restore possession. Doe d. Stephens v. Lord, 7 A. & E. 610; 2 N. & P. 604; 6 D. P. C. 257.

- Defendant retaking Possession. - See

Demand under.]- Where a rule of court ordered possession of lands to be restored to A., B. and C., or to D., their tenant, a demand by A. alone, without any special authority from B. and C., held sufficient. Corbett v. Nicholls, 2 L. M. & P. 87.

Refusal to Comply with.]-Upon a refusal to comply with that demand the court granted an attachment, though the affidavits in support of the rule nisi did not negative that possession had been delivered to B. and C. or to D. Ih.

Set-off of Costs.]-The court refused to allow the costs of the judgment to be set off against the costs of the motion. Doe d. Stephens v. Lord, 7 A. & E. 610; 2 N. & P. 604; 6 D. P. C. 257; 8 L. J., Q. B. 97. See Gondtitle d. Murvall. v. Badtitle, 9 D. P. C. 1000; 5 Jur. 990.

13. STAYING PROCEEDINGS.

Ejectment by Mortgagees. ]—The court will not stay proceedings in an ejectment by a mortgagee against a mortgagor, on the latter paying principal, interest, and costs, if the latter has agreed to convey the equity of redemption to the Goodtitle d. Taysum v. Pope, 7 Term mortgagee. Rep. 185.

Where a mortgagee brings an ejectment to get possession, and the mortgagor moves to stay proceedings on payment of what is due and costs; if the mortgagee gives notice of other demands, as cause against the order, he must specify the mortgage-money, the defendant is entitled to have the proceedings stayed upon the payment of the principal and interest due on the mortgage deed, with the costs incurred at law and in equity, without paying any bygone interest, or the expense of preparing the mortgage deed, or any assignment of it. Due d. Blagg v. Sterd, I. D. P. C. 352.

In an ejectment for a forfeiture, in not paying

In ejectment by a mortgagee the court will not interfere to direct a reconveyance to the mortgagor on payment of the mortgagor—money and costs, unless he has himself appeared and become defendant in the action. Duckl. Orchard v. Skubbs, 6 N. & M. 857. S. C., nom. Duckl. Hurst v. Chiffan.

4 A. & E. 814.

Where the principal was advanced by the mortgagee to the mortgagor for three years from the date of the deed, the interest to be payable quarterly, and the deed contained a proviso, that, if default should be made in payment of interest on any of the days appointed for the payment, the mortgagee might sell the premises assigned; the mortgagor having made default in the payment of one quartor's interest, the mortgagee brought ejectment-the court refused to stay the proceedings on payment of the arrears of interest and costs by the mortgagor, as the case did not fall within the provisions of the statute, the principal becoming payable on default of pay-Guodtitle d. Green v. ment of the interest. Notitle, 11 Moore, 491.

If a mortgage receivers possession of the mortaged premises under a judgment in an undefended ejectment, the court has no jurisdiction to restore, on payment of the debt, interest, and costs, the possession to the mortgager, who has not appeared. But if the receivery is against a tennit of the mortgager, the centr will set aside the judgment, and let in the mortgager to defend as handlord, that he may be in a condition to apply to the court to stay proceedings on the terms of the statute. Due d. Tubb Y. Roe, 4

Taunt. 887.

— Two Mortgages.]—Where there are two mortgages, the court will not stay proceedings and comple a redemption of one mortgage only, upon payment of the principal, interest, and costs on that mortgage, without paying the rest. Roe d. Ruy v. Sulen, 2 W. Bl. 726.

Right to Redeem Disputed.]—Or if the mortgagee has delivered a notice in writing that he disputes the right of the mortgagor to redeem. Filbee v. Hupkins, 6 D. & L. 264.

—— Suit Pending to Administer Estate.]—
The court will not stay an action of ejectment by a mortgagee against his tenants at the desire of an executor who has come in as co-defendant and seeks to restrain the action on the ground that a suit is pending to administer the estate of his testator of which the premises mortgaged formed part. Crowlet v. Russell, 48 L. J., C. P. 76; 4 C. P. D. 186; 39 L. T. 250; 27 W. R. 84—C. A.

— Costs.]—The court will not, on staying proceedings in an ejectment by a mortgage, compel the nortgage to pay the costs of the rule, because he had refused a tender of the sun due. Doe d. Simpson v. Bunn, 1 W. W. & H. 49.

In ejectment by mortgagee, the court, or a judge, can include as a condition of an order for stay of proceedings the payment of the costs of an abortive attempt at sale under a power. Doucle v. Neale, 10 W. R. 627.

The costs are taxed as between party and party, and not as between attorney and client. Due d. Cupps v. Cupps, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 768; 4 Scott, 468; 5 D. P. C. 634; 6 L. J., C. P. 237.

— Jurisdiction of Judge at Chambers.]—A judge at chambers has jurisdiction meder 15 & 16 Vict. c. 75, s. 219, to order a stay of proceedings on payment of principal, interest, and costs. Lawrence v. Hogben, 26 L. J., Ex. 55.

— Delivery up of Deeds.]—An action on a mortgage deed was within the 7 Geo. 2, 0. 9, 1, 1; and a judge has power to make an order for the delivering up of the deed. Succton v. Collier, 5 D. & L. 184; 1 Ex. 457; 17 L. J., Ex. 57.

Next Friend — Action not beneficial to Plaintiff.]—An action for the recovery of land may be brought under Ord. XVI. r. I7, by the next friend of a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition; and a writ issued in such an action by the next friend, in the name of the person of unsound mind, is regular. But where the court is of opinion on the facts of the case that such action is not a beneficial one to the unatic plaintiff, it will be stayed by the court on that ground. Waterhouse v. Wormop, 59 L. T. 140.

Distress after Verdict.]—See Doe d. Holmes v. Davies, ante, col. 1523.

F. MESNE PROFITS.

1. ACTION FOR.

Who can Bring. ]—An action for mesne profits (including the costs of the ejectment) may be brought in the mame of the lessee against the tenant in possession, after judgment by default. Jatin v. Parkin, 2 Burr. 665; 2 Ld. Ken. 376. S. P., Gulliter v. Drinkouter, 2 Term Rep. 261; Due d. — v. Davis, 1 Esp. 358.

A joint action for mesne profits may be supported by several lessors of a plaintiff in ejectment, after a recovery therein, although there were only separate demises by each. Chamier

v. Llingon, 2 Chit. 410.

Against whom it will Lie.]—An action for mesne profits lies where one tenant in common recovers against another in ejectment by default. Goodtitle v. Tombs, 3 Wils, 168.

The action lies against a person who comes in under the party against whom there has been recovered a previous integenent in ejectment which was afterwards excented. Due v. Whitwomb, 8 Bing, 46; 1 M. & Sc. 107; 1 L.J., C. P. 9. See Due v. Harrey, 8 Bing, 239; 1 M. & Sc. 374; 1 L.J., C. P. 9.

No action of mesue profits lies against an executor. Pulteney v. Warren, 6 Ves. 80.

By s. 51 of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, the right to mesne profits is given only against the tenant, and not against any other person in possession. Campbell v. Loader, 3 H. & C. 520; 34 L. J., Ex. 50; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 286; 11 L. T. 608; 13 W. R. 348.

When Maintainable.]—On the trial of an ejectment between landlord and tenant, the landlord is entitled to mesne profits, although the writ and issue do not contain any claim in respect of them. Smith v. Telt, 9 Ex. 307; 2 C. L. R. 509; 23 L. J., Ex. 93; 2 W. R. 159.

And without proving notice of trial. Doe d. Thompson v. Hodson, 12 A, & E. 135; 2 M. & Rob. 283; 4 P, & D. 142; 9 L. J., Q. B. 327;

4 Jun. 1202.

In trespass for mesne profits, a veriliet may be found against the defendant, though he never actually occupied during the time of the truspass, if it is proved that before the trespass the defendant, who then held lawfully, underlet to H; that the defendant's and H.'s interest beenne determined, and the right of possession vested in the plaintiff; that H. held on; and that the defendant afterwards continued to receive rent of him, and declared him to be his tenant, when the plaintiff demanded possession; the defendant and H. both alleging title in the party under whom the defendant formerly held, Doe v. Hurton, 12 A. & K. 40. See Newport v. Hardy, 10 Jun. 338.

An ejectment for land taken possession of by a railway company, for the purposes of the rail way, under incomplete proceedings, was referred to arbitration, the order of reference providing that the cause and all matters in difference between the parties should be referred, and that the arbitrator should decide what sum should be paid by the company to the plaintiff, as the price of or compensation for the lands of the plaintiff which the company had taken for the purpose of their railway; the plaintiff agreeing to execute such a conveyance as the arbitrator might direct, and that the money paid into the Bank of England should be disposed of as the arbitrator should direct. The arbitrator directed that the verdict entered for the plaintiff should stand, and awarded a sum to be paid to the plaintiff as the price of and compensation for the land of the plaintiff which the company had, at the time of making the order of reference, taken for the purposes of their railway, and directed the amount to be paid to the plaintiff out of the money in the Bank of England, and the residue to be paid to the company; and he awarded that there were no other matters in difference between the parties, and that the above payments were to be made and taken in full satisfaction and discharge of all matters in difference between them. The money in the bank included the purchase-money of other lands of the plaintiff of which the company had lawful possession, and the plaintiff treating the sum awarded as applicable to that, issued a writ of habere facias possessionem, and was put in possession, and brought an action for mesne profits :- Held, that the action was not maintainable, the mesne profits being included in the reference and award. Smalley v. Blackburn Ry, 2 H. & N. 158; 27 L. J., Ex. 65; 5 W. R.

To entitle a party to maintain an action for the mesne profits, it is not necessary to execute an habere, if the plaintiff has been let into possession by the defendant. Calvart v. Hursfall, 4 Esp. 167.

A mortgages out of possession, who gives notice of the mortgage to the tenant who has occupied since the mortgage, cannot maintain trespars for mesne profits against the tenant for the rents accuract due since the date of the mortgage, by mere entry upon the land after the notice. Litelyfield v. Ready, 5 Ex. 939; 20

Where the mortgagee gave notice of the mortgage to the tenant in possession, who had become remart since the mortgage and made an entry, and subsequently served a notice of ejectment upon the tenant, who gave a judge's order, by which it was agreed that the action should be stayed upon the tenant's madertaking to give up possession on a day named therein; and, in default thereof, the mortgagee was to be at liberty to sign final judgment, and to issue execution against the tenant for the whole costs of the action:—Held, that the mortgagee was not in a position to minimain trespass to recover the messue profits from the date of the mortgage, inasmuch as he never had such a possession as is necessary to support the action. Jb.

Remittitur damna entered on Record—Effect of ]—In an action for mesne profits by flue plaintiff, after recovery in ejectment, it is no answer to the action, that a remittitur damna has been entered on the record in the ejectment. Harper v. Epics, 8 Dongl. 399.

2. WHAT RECOVERABLE.

Costs of Ejectment,]—The costs of an ejectment may be recovered in an action for nuesne profits, where the defendant has appeared and pleaded to the ejectment, but afterwards withdrawn the plea, and judgment is signed, although no costs have been taxed. Symonds v. Page, 1 C. & J. 29.

O. & J. 20.

Where an ejectment is defended, and the plaintiff obtains a verdiet, he cannot, on the exceeding of a writ of inquiry to assess damages in an action for mesne profits, give in evidence the extra costs beyond his taxed custs, in order to increase the damages, but after judgment by default in ejectment, the costs of such judgment may be recovered as well as the mescu profits, Brooke v. Bridges, T. Moore, 471; 1. L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 11. S. P., Dae v. Daeta, 1. Esp., 364.

In an action for mesne profits, the plaintiff is entitled to recover only the taxed costs of the ejectment, and not the extra costs. Doe v. Hare, 2 D. P. C. 245.

Where there is judgment by default in an ejectment, the plaintiff may, in the action for meane profits, recover all the expenses he has been necessarily put to in the ejectment, and is not limited to the taxel costs, as between party and party. Dov. Hudderf, 2 C. M. & R. 316; 4 D. P. C. 437; I Gale, 260; 5 Tyr.

Under a claim for "expenses in recovering possession" of the premises, the plaintiff in an action for messue profits may recover the costs of the prior action of ejectment, Pearse v. Challer, 38 L. J., Ex. 82; L. R. 4 Ex. 92; 20 L. T. 82.

When the costs of an ejectment have been taxed, the plaintiff cannot in an action for measu profits recover costs as between intorney and client; and it makes no difference that the costs have been taxed on the application of the defendant. Doe v. Filliter; 13 M. & W.

In an action for entry, expulsion and mesne profits, the plaintiff may recover the costs of the reversal in error of a judgment in ejectment for the defendant, as between attorney and client. Nancell v. Hoake, 1 M. & Ry. 170; 7 B. & C. 404; 6 L. J. (O.8) K. B. 26.

Loss occasioned by Closing an Inn.]—In an action for mesne profits, after ejectment for the recovery of a hones used as an inn, the plaintiff cannot recover the loss which he has sustained by the defendant slutting up the inn and destroying the custom, unless such damage is specially stated in the declaration. Dunn v. Large, 3 Dougl. 335.

Right of Defendant to Deduction.]-Where A, took possession of premises on the 2nd of June, and a sum of money became due for ground-rent on the 24th for the quarter ending on that day, which A. paid :-Held, in an action for mesne profits against A., that he was entitled to deduct the money so paid from the damages. Doe v. Hare, 2 C. & M. 145: 4 Tyr. 29: 3 L. J., Ex. 17.

3. PLEADINGS AND EVIDENCE.

Pleadings - Judgment - Estoppel.] - In an action for the mesne profits of a copyhold, to which the defendant plends not possessed, the plaintiff may reply, by way of estoppel, a judg-ment in ejectment in his favour, and if he does not reply it, the judgment is not conclusive evidence of his title. Matthew v. Oshorne, 13 C. B. 919: 22 L. J., C. P. 241; 17 Jur. 696; 1 W. R. 151.

To a declaration for mesue profits, stating the entry and expulsion on the 10th of December, 1844, and the expulsion and taking of profits to have been continued till the 10th of March, 1846, the defendant pleaded that the closes in which, &c. were not, nor were any of them, or any part thereof, the plaintiff's. The plaintiff replied to the whole plea, by way of estoppel, a recovery by him against the casual ejector, on a declaration in ejectment, stating the denise to have been on the lath of Ostellar 1917 for the 14th of October, 1845, for a term of twenty years; and the replication concluded with a prayer of judgment, if the defendant during that term ought to be admitted, against the recovery, record and proceedings, to plead that plea:-Held, that the replication applied only to part of the time of the trespass complained of in the declaration, and was therefore bad, Doe v. Wedlsman, 2 Ex. 368; 6 D. & L. 179; 18 L. J., Ex. 277. See Turner v. Coalbrook Steam Co., 5 Ex. 932.

Trespass for mesne profits: pleas, first, not possessed; and secondly, that W. was seised in fee and demised for twenty-one years to T., who demised to the defendant, who entered by virtue of the demise. Replication by way of estoppel as to the tresposses since the 26th of October, 1853, setting out a writ in ejectment, in which the plaintiff was claiment, and dated the 26th of October, 1853, directed to the defendant as tenant in possession. Averment of judgment thereon by default, and entry by the plaintiff, by virtue of the judgment :- Held, a good replication to both pleas; and that it was not necessary to aver notice of the proceedings in ejectment to the defendant, or that a writ of possession was issued or executed, and that entry by the plantiff, if necessary, was sufficiently averred. Wilkinson v. Kirby, 15 C. B. 430; 2 C. L. R. 1387; 23 L. J., C. P. 224; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 161; 2 W. R. 570.

Held, also, that the estoppel was from the date of the writ, and that the plaintiff's title would be presumed to continue until by rejoinder it was shewn to have determined. Ib.

Bankruptcy. ]-Bankruptcy is no plea in Evidence-Admission by Executor. -A., B. and C., being successive tenants in tail of property held under an inalienable parliamentary title, and B. having, after the death of A., entered into possession of the estates, and, together with them, of certain leaseholds formerly in the possession sion of A., his executors brought an ejectment against B. to recover possession of the leascholds as part of his estate. B. having died before trial of the action, another action was brought against C., the successor in title. C., who was also executor of B., compromised the action on terms of giving judgment and buying the leaseholds at a certain price, with a further stipulation that 4,000L should be allowed as a debt from B.'s estate in respect of rents received by B. Before the compromise, a creditor's suit was instituted, and a decree made, for the administration of B's estate, which was insolvent. On a summons by A.'s executors to prove against B's estate for the amount of the rents actually received by him :-Held, that the admission by the executor as to mesne profits in the compromise was inoperative, being unde after the decree. Tulbot v. Shrews-bury (Earl), L. R. 14 Eq. 503; 20 W. R. 854.

--- Possession -- Evidence of Title. ] -- In an action for mesne profits, proof that the defendanthas had a lease of the premises at a certain yearly rent, and that he had suffered judgment by default in a previous action of ejectment for the same premises, is sufficient to shew that he was in possession at the date of the writ of ejectment, Pearse v. Coaker, 38 L. J., Ex. 82; L. R. 4 Ex. 92; 20 L. T. 82. And see cases, ante, col.

A judge's order cannot be considered as equivalent to a judgment by default, or as any evidence of occupation of premises. Literipiela v. Ready, 5 Ex. 939; 20 L. J., Ex. 51.

A county court order for the possession of premises, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 50, is not conclusive evidence of title in an action for conclusive evaluates of that it all action for mesne profits. Campbell v. Loader, 3 H. & C. 520; 34 L. J., Ex. 50; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 286; 11 L. T. 608; 13 W. B. 348.

12. EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO RAISE ELEC-TION, 1590.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Intention, - The doctrine of election is founded on the presumption of a general intention that every part of an instrument shall take effect, and the presumption of such general intention may be rebutted by an inconsistent particular intention apparent in the instrument. Vardon's Trusts, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 259; 31
 Ch. D. 275; 53 L. T. 895; 34 W. R. 185.

Instruments to which Rule applicable.]-The rule of election, by which a person taking a benefit under any instrument must also accept the burden laid on him by it, applies in the case of deeds as well as of wills, and where one of the properties is not bound by the instrument, as well as between properties which are bound by it, and although no intention that the party should be put to election appear on the face of should be put to election appear on the face of the firstrument, or by necessary implication from its terms or language. Codrington v. Lindsay, 42 L. J., Ch. 526; L. R. S. Ch. 573; 28 L. T., 177; 21 W. R. 182. Affirmed, nom. Codrington v. Codrington, 45 L. J., Ch. 660; L. R. 7 H. L. 854; 34 L. T. 221; 24 W. R. 648.

The rule of election is equally applicable to every species of instrument, whether deed or will, and is a rule of law as well as equity. Birmingham v. Kirwan, 2 Sch. & Lef. 450.

In cases of election, it is not the custom of the court to order the deed elected against, to be delivered up to be cancelled. Wedle v. Rice, 4 L. J., Ch. 39.

When Obligation arises. ]-An obligation to elect arises whenever an object of testamentary bounty is at the testator's death the true owner of other property disposed of by the will. Couper v. Cooper, 44 L. J., Ch. 6; L. R. 7 H. L. 53; 30 L. T. 409; 22 W. R. 713.

For the purposes of election there is no distinction between personal estate and real estate, between specific and residuary legatees, or between legatees and next of kin of an intestate.

The principle of election applies to the next of kin of an intestate, although his estate has not been wound up at the time that the will comes into operation. Ib.

The rule as to election is to be applied as between a gift under any instrument and a claim dehors that instrument and adverse to it, and is not to be applied as between one clause in an instrument and another clause in the same instrument. Wollaston v. King, 38 L. J., Ch. 392; L. R. 8 Eq. 165; 20 L. T. 1003; 17 W. R. 641.

Semble, that the doctrine of election cannot be applied so as to give effect to a disposition which transgresses the rule against perpetuity. Th.

testator has a limited interest in property forming the subject of a devise or bequest, the intention to make a disposition extending beyond that interest cannot be made clear by anything short of positive declaration. The context of the will and the aptitude of the testamentary limitations to the testator's interest ought to be regarded. Wintour v. Clifton, 8 De G. M. & G. 641; 26 L. J., Ch. 218; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 75; 5 W. R. 129.

When it was not apparent on the face of the will that a general devise in trust to sell was intended to include a particular estate, of which the testatrix had been wrongfully in possession up to the time of her death, the rightful owner of that estate was put to his election in respect of an interest bequeathed to him in the money to be produced by the sale of the estate. Blommart v. Player, 2 Sim. & S. 597; 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 74.

A testatrix advanced 900l, to M, on an assignment by him of a covenant by F. to transfer to M. 1,000%, stock, and to pay interest in the meantime. By her will she gave F, 3,000L, and all sums due to her by him, and directed her executors not to require payment of the 900%, due from M., but out of the 3,000l. given to F. to retain enough to purchase 1,000l. stock, in satisfaction of the covenant by F., and to pay the surplus thereof beyond the 900%, and interest to M. F., having predecensed her, she by a codicil directed the 3.000L to form part of her residuary estate. but directed her executors not to call on F.'s representatives for transfer of the 1,000%, stock nor to enforce payment by M. of the 900l. :against F.'s estate the covenant to transfer the against 1. Section the eventual to transfer transfer the 1,0007, stock, except as to the difference between the 9007, and the value of the stock. Synge v. Synge, L. R. 9 Ch. 128; 29 L. T. 855; 22 W. R. 227.

No person can take by a will, and at the same time do anything that shall destroy the will. Morrisv. Burrows, 2 Atk. 629; 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 272. S. P., Noys v. Mordaunt, 2 Vern, 581. Streatfield v. Streatfield, 1 Swanst, 447; Ca. t. Talb. 176.

A person cannot take by custom and under a will. S. C., 1 Atk. 404.

The ground of doctrine of election is, that no person puts himself in a capacity to take under an instrument, without performing the condi-tions of it, express or implied. Moore v. Butler, 2 Sch. & Lef, 267.

In considering a question of election raised by a will, the court must have regard to the whole scope of the will to ascertain if the language of the testator can be fairly interpreted as disposing of an interest which he himself possesses. Prima facie, the court must construe the words of disposition as applying to an estate which the testator had power to dispose of, if the words will fairly apply to it; and in order to raise a question of election it must be clearly seen that the words used point to an estate which is not the testator's own, but that of another. Rancliffe (Lord) v. Parkyns (6 Dow, 149), discussed. Minchin v. Gabbett, [1896] 1 Ir. R. 1.

The doctrine of election does not apply when the testator leaves nothing of his own property. M. Donnell v. M. Donnell, 2 Con. & L. 481; 4 Dr. & War. 376.

To raise a case of election there must be a In determining what are cases of election, although a testator must be taken primă faci form of a gift as to property, which the donor had no power to dispose of. Att. Gen. v. Lonsto have intended to dispose only of what belongs to him, there is no such rule as that where a 27 R, R. 176. When testator bemeaths present wift to And see Baily v. Llayd, 7 L. J. (0.8.) Ch. 98.
The doctrine of election does not extend to grants from the Grown, semble. Cumming v. Forrester, 2 J. & W. 334; 22 R. R. 157.

A person shall not claim an interest under an instrument without giving a full effect to it, as far as he can; renonneing any right or property, which would defeat the disposition. Thellusson v. Woodford, 13 Ves. 220; 9 R. R. 175.

The only instances of limiting the principle of election are, an attempt to devise by a will not duly executed; or an attempt to devise by au infant. Ib. 223.

Semble, the doctrine of election ought not to be applied to the case of a revocation by a recovery merely. Tennant v. Tennant, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 531.

The rule of election ought to be confined to simple and plain devises of the inheritance, and not where there are limitations. Forcester v. Cotton, Amb. 388; 1 Eden, 532. But see 1 Swanst.

A Rule not of Positive Law but of Practice. ]-The doctrine of election is not properly a rule of positive law, but a rule of practice in equity. The knowledge of it is not, therefore, to be imputed as a matter of legal obligation. Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas, 588; 6 N. R. 269; 13 L. T. 164.

Where a case of election arises, the person who ought to make it must be shewn to have known of his duty to do so, and must be proved to have done such acts as amounted to an election. . Ib.

A party having an equity to compel an election, does not forfeit that equity by delay in enforcing it. 1b.

An election gives a right to compensation. Assuming such compensation to be in the nature of a simple contract debt, the Statute of Limitations can only begin to run against it when the election has been made. Ib.

Doctrine of Compensation. ]-Doctrine of election or compensation explained. Pickersgill v. Rodger, 5 Ch. D. 163.

The engrafted doctrine of compensation does not apply to the case of a person electing to take under the justrament which gives rise to the election, Wilson v. Townshead (Lord) (2 Ves. 693), discussed and not followed, Chesham (Lord), In rv, Cacendish v. Dacre, 55 L. J., Ch. 401; 31 Ch. D. 466; 54 L. T. 154; 34 W. R. 321. And see Curter v. Silber, 61 L. J., Ch. 401; [1892] 2 Ch. 278; 66 L. T. 478—G. A.

Exceptions to Rule. -- Where devisee takes gift under will, law annexes a condition to gift, that he shall not dispute any other part of will, even though that other part gives away from him something to which he had an undoubted right; he must therefore make his election whether he will renounce particular gift to him by will, or abide by will altogether; but this rule has many exceptions, viz. 1, Where testator himself annexes condition to gift; 2, Where devisee does not disturb devise in toto, but only claims and excreseent interest out of estate (its dower), and then suffers it to go necontling to disposition that for R., G. and J., for their lives, and after made thereof by will; 3 Mercri is may be collected from whole will that it was not testator's inter-ton to exclude devisee, claiming contrary right provided that if the legacies and the shares of and 4, When testator bequeaths present gift to remainderman after estate tail, and by same will either gives the lands to another, having no power to give them, or subjects the remainder to a charge to which he had no power to subject In neither of these cases is remainderman subject to equity of making his election, whether he will renounce all benefit under will, or do all in his power to make good devise of remainder on one hand, or confirm charge on other; and court said, these tacit conditions are to be considered as they stood at death of testator, and implication of them must be necessary one; something as if written in will. Stewart v. Henry, Vern. & S. 53.

Where a testator conceiving himself entitled to the property of another person, makes a general disposition of all his estate, and gives some benefit to that person, he must elect. Rutter v. Maclean, 4 Ves. 531. S. P., Whistler v. Webster, 3 Ves. 371; 2 R. R. 260: Blake v. Bunbury, 1 Ves. 523; 4 Bro. C. C. 21; 1 R. R. 111. But see Ayres v. Willis, 1 Ves. Sen. 230.

Election can only exist where a person has a decided interest, and something is left him by will. Crosbie v. Murray, 1 Ves. 561.

To raise a question of satisfaction or election the intent must be clear; if it is, devisee cannot take under the will, and also in opposition to it even his own property intended by testator to go otherwise. Finch v. Finch, 1 Ves. 534; 4 Bro. C. C. 38. And see Browne v. Monch, 10 Ves. 597: 8 R. R. 48.

Election to take under or in opposition to a will, can only be compelled upon something in the will, not dehors. Stratton v. Bost, 1 Ves. 286; 2 R. R. 196. And see Kirkham v. Smith, 1 Ves. Sen. 260; Wilson v. Month, 2 Ves. 191; Wollen v. Tanner, 5 Ves. 218; Blount v. Bestland, 5 Ves. 515.

2. CASES OF NO ELECTION.

Valid Appointment followed by Invalid Trust or Direction. ]-A testator, in exercise of a special power, appointed a fund to his three daughters, who were objects of the power, in equal shares, and he gave his residuary personal estate to the same daughters in equal shares, and he directed the share to which each daughter should become entitled under his will and the appointment to be held in trust for the daughter for life, with remainder for her children, who were not objects of the power: -Held, that the daughters took absolute in-terests in the appointed fund, and that no case of election was raised against them in favour of their children. Moriarty v. Martin (3 Ir. Ch. R. 26) disapproved; Churchill v. Churchill, 37 L. J., Ch. 92; L. R. 5 Eq. 44; 16 W. R. 182.

A testatrix having, under her marriage settlement, power to appoint 10,000%, amongsther children, appointed to R., G. and J., three of her children, the one-sixth part of this fund each, and bequeathed to each of them 1,000% and directed that the legacies, and also their shares of the appointed fund, should, within twelve months after her decease, be settled upon the appointed fund were not settled as prescribed, | issue, as against her husband, be put to her personal estate :- Held, that the direction to settle the shares amounted to a superadded condition, attempting to qualify a previous absolute appointment, and that no question of election was thereby raised. King v. King, 15 Ir. Ch. R.

Held, also, that owing to the express clause of forfeiture, the legatees could not take the legacies without settling their shares in the appointed fund, according to the directions of the testatrix.

Where there is an absolute appointment by will in favour of a proper object of the power, and that appointment is followed by attempts to modify the interest so appointed, in a manner which the law will not allow, the court reads the will as if all the passages in which such attempts are made were swept out of it, for all intents and purposes, i.e. not only so far as they attempt to regulate the quantum of interest to be enjoyed by the appointee in the settled property, but also so far as they might otherwise have been relied upon as raising a case of election. Wooldridge, V. Wooldridge, Johns. 63; 28 L. J., Ch. 689; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 566. But see White, In re, White v. White, 22 Ch. D. 555, infra, col. 1559.

A testatrix having under her brother's will a special power to appoint his property, gave all the real and personal estate, of which she might be selsed or possessed at her death, or over which she might have any testamentary power of disposition, to trustees upon trust to pay her debts and funeral expenses and certain legacies, and then upon trust as to two one-fourth parts of her trust fauds for persons who were objects of the power, and as to the other two one-fourth parts for persons who were not objects of the power. And she declared that, in case of the failure of any of the trusts thereinbefore declared of any of the one-fourth parts of her trust funds, the one-fourth part or so much thereof of which the trust should fail, should be held upon the trusts thereinbefore declared of the others or other of the one-fourth parts of which the trust should not fail:-Held, that as to one molety of the brother's property, the power was well exercised:

—Held also, that, by virtue of the gift-over "in case of the failure of any of the trusts thereinbefore declared," the other moiety went to the persons to whom the first moiety was appointed; and that, consequently, no case of election arose. Swinburne, In re, Swinburne v. Pitt, 54 L. J., Ch. 229; 27 Ch. D. 696; 33 W. R. 394.

A testator duly appointed a fund in favour of objects of the power absolutely, and he also bequeathed to them his own property, "especially requesting them" to leave the appointed fund to persons not objects of the power :-Held, that this did not raise a case for election : -Held, also, that the result would have been different, if there had been a direct appointment of the subject of the power to strangers. Blacket v. Lamb, 14 Beav. 482; 21 L. J., Ch. 46; 16 Jur. 142. S. P., Bate v. Willats, 37 L. T.

Where a party has a power of appointment over a fund in favour of his children, and he appoints to a child (a married woman) for life, and afterwards upon trust for that child's issue, and gives his own personal estate in the same manner, the child of the appointor cannot, where the court declares the appointment bad as to the the legacies should become absolutely forfeited, election, nor can the husband be forced to elect, and should sink into the residue of the testatrix's Carrer v. Bowles, 2 Russ. & M. 301; 9 L. J., (o.s.) Ch. 91.

> Appointment which might have taken effect. -By the marriage settlement of A., a term of years was limited to trustees, upon trust to raise 16,0001, to be paid to the children of the marriage, or to the issue, born in the lifetime of A, of any such children, in such shares as A. should by deed or will appoint; and in default of appointment, to the children in equal shares. A., by his will, after devising certain real estates to his first and other sons, in strict settlement, and reciting the power of appointment in the marriage settlement, appointed 4,000l. to each of his children, other than the child who should under the preceding limitations be entitled, as tenant for life, to the rents of the devised premises : and as to the residue, if any, of the 16,000L, he appointed the same unto such grandchild of his body as should, by the regular course of events, become entitled as tenant in tail in possession of the devised premises. A. died, leaving three sons, the eldest of whom was tenant for life of the devised estates, and no grandehild :- Held, that, as there might have been a grandchild born in A.'s lifetime, and as such grandchild would have been among the objects of the power, the appointment to a grandchild, who, in the events that had happened, was not an object of the power, did not raise a case of election against the children, and that they were entitled to have the appointment of the residue declared invalid, and yet to retain all the benefits given them by the will. Bulwer v. Hoare, 3 L. J. (0.8.) Ch. 227.

> A., having power under her father's will to appoint a fund amongst her children, or more remote issue, to be born before such appointment, by her will, appointed the fund, and bequeathed her personal estate, to her four children. By a codicil, she, in case she had power so to do, under her father's will, or other-wise, directed that the share which one of her daughters would derive under her will, should be in trust for that daughter for life, and, after her death, for her children generally, and not those only that were then born, as prescribed by the power:—Held, that A. did not intend the codicil to affect her own property, but only that which was subject to the power; and that she did not mean to make the appointment unless she had power to do so; which she had not, and, therefore, no case of election arose. Church v. Kemble, 5 Sim. 525; 3 L. J., Ch. 65. S. P., Cull v. Showel, Amb. 727.

No free disposable Property of Appointor. ]-Parties taking nuder a will, executing a power of appointment, dispute part of it; there being no fund but that to be appointed, it is not a case of election. Bristow v. Warde, 2 Ves. 336; 2 R. R. 235.

Where donce, having a power over two sums of different stock, appointed a gross amount, part of one of them, and afterwards appointed aliquot parts of both funds as one subject, without noticing the prior appointment, exceeding the entirety of one of the funds :- Held, that the earlier appointees ought not to be put to their election, and that the loss arising from the deficiency of the one fund fell upon the last appointees; and held also, that appointing to

A testator had an exclusive power of appointment over an estate to his children and grandchildren, and an exclusive power to appoint a fund amongst his children only. He appointed the estate to some of his children, and the fund to his children, and to a grandchild (who was not an object) :- Held, that this was not a case of election, and that the children were not compellable to elect either to give effect to the appointment of the fund to the grandchild, or reject the benefits appointed under the first power. Fowler's Trusts, In re, 27 Beav, 362.

A testator who had a special power of appointment under his marriage settlement by deed or will of a moiety of funds which in default of appointment vested in his daughter, and who was also entitled at his death to the other moiety, gave all the residue of his estate, including the funds which should be in the names of the trustees of his marriage settlement, and which he directed should be considered as part of his personal estate, in trust for his wife for life, and afterwards for his daughter, her husband and children, and upon other trusts not within the special power :- Held, that the daughter was not put to her election, the testator only intending to dispose of the moiety to which he was himself entitled. Bidwell's Settlement, In re, 1 N. B. 176; 32 L. J., Ch. 71; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 37; 8 L. T. 107; 11 W. R. 161.

An owner of the freehold lands of B., subject to two rent-charges thereon of 1001, a venr each (over one of which he had a power of appointment among his children, and the other of which had been settled on his son at his marriage), and being also owner of an undivided seventh of the freehold lands of D. (which share stood charged as from the date of his death, with a life annuity for his daughter, and 500%, for her surviving children), and being also absolutely seised of freeholds in A., made his will as set out :- Held, that no election arose in the case of his son such as to prevent his retaining his 100%, rent-charge, as well as his share of the lands of B., jointly with his brother. Henry v. Henry, Ir. R. 6 Eq.

Held, also, that no ease of election by the unmarried daughters arose in connection with the devise to them of "my property in D.," as these words were referrible to the testator's oneseventh share of D. Ih.

Leaseholds were settled on A. B. for life, with remainder to his wife for life, with remainder to such child or children as he should appoint, and in default, amongst them equally. A. B. renowed the leases in his own name, and by his will confirmed the settlement, and gave all "his freeholds and leaseholds" to his son, and a legacy to his daughter; he died, having other leaseholds, besides those settled :--Held, that the will was not an execution of the power, and, secondly, that the daughter was not to be put to her election. Tanner v. Elworthy, 4 Beav. 487; 5 Jur. 1099.

By marriage articles the settlor agreed to settle lands specifically named, of which some were recited to be held in fee and for lives, and others to be leaseholds, on himself for life, with remainder to his first and other sons, &c., in strict softlement, that they should be charged with containing no Power of Revocation.]—Where a testator, ointure of 100%, a year for his wife, and that

Know v. Know, Beat. 501.

The testator, part of his estate being in settle-ment, devised all his estates, &c., whereof he was seised or entitled, or had any power to dispose :-Held, the general devise did not indicate such intention of testator to dispose of that part over which he had not a power as to put the devisee to elect. Forrester v. Cotton, Amb. 389; 1 Eden,

C., by will, devised all his freeholds and convholds to his two daughters, A. and M., and all other daughters that he might thereafter have, as tenants in common in fee; he had afterwards another daughter, L. He then gave directions for another will, by which he gave all his real estates to A. and M., and 15,000l. to L. The attorney took the minutes of the second will in writing, but before it was prepared the testator died; the minutes were proved in the spiritual court as a testamentary paper :-Held, first, the paper being proved in the spiritual court, was sufficient to pass copyholds; second, but was so totally void as to the freeholds, that it would not put L. to her election, and she would take her share of the freeholds under the first will, as well as the 15,000*l. Carry* v. Askew, 2 Bro. C. C. 58; 1 Cax, 241. And see 8 Ves. 492.

Person Claiming in Two Characters. ] - A testator, having freeholds and copyholds in fee, gave an annulty to his wife in lieu of all dower and thirds, or other claims and demands which she might otherwise have had npon his estate, and died intestate as to his real estates. His widow was his customary heir :- Held, that she was not bound to elect between the annuity and copy-holds, but was entitled to both:—Held, also, the assets being deficient, that the annuity was to be paid in priority to the pecuniary legacies given by the will. Norcott v. Gordon, 14 Sim. 258; 8 Jur. 679.

A testator being entitled under a settlement. subject to a life interest, to a moiety of a fund, by will, after reciting (erroneously) that he was, under the settlement, "subject to the trusts therein contained," entitled to the whole, parported to bequeath the whole, and to give one moiety to the husband of the lady who was really entitled under the settlement to a moiety of the fund :- Held, that the husband, who had become his wife's administrator, was not bound to elect between the legacy and his wife's moiety. Grissell v. Swinkae, L. R. 7 Eq. 291; 17 W. B. 438.

aside and avoided all other wills, settlements in the family arrangement, no ease of election and agreements for settlements which he had at any time theretofore made and executed :-Held, that no ease of election arose. Booker, In re, Booker v. Booker, 54 L. T. 239; 34 W. R.

Appointment partly Inoperative. |-A woman, having a general power of appointment notwithstanding coverture over fund 1, and also by her marriage settlement power to appoint funds 2 and 3 in case she died in her husband's lifetime, by her will, made in her husband's lifetime, appointed all the funds amongst several persons, some of whom were her next of kin. By the death of her husband in her lifetime, she became absolutely entitled to 2 and 3, but she did not republish her will. Fund I was insufficient to pay the legacies in full:—Held, that those of the legaces who were also next of kin were not put to their election, but were entitled both to their shares of the residue (as to which, in the events that had happened, the appointment had failed), and also to proportionate parts of their legacies. Blaiklock v. Grindle, 38 L. J., Ch. 247; L. R. 7 Eq. 215; 17 W. R. 114.

A grandfather, having made a will of real and personal estate in 1808, cancelled it in 1810, but wrote on the back of it a letter addressed to his only daughter, stating that she was his heiress, and charging her to fulfil his wishes at her death by a disposition of a specific freehold estate to her eldest son, and, by an equal disposition "of his property" equally amongst his grandchildren, her eldest and youngest son and daughter, her three only children. The letter was unaftested; and thought to be inoperative as to either real or personal estate. The daughter became administratrix to her father, and took possession of his real estate, and she and her husband received his personal estate in right of the daughter, as sole next of kin. By a settlement in 1811, between the husband of the daughter, and the daughter and two trustees, and the three children of the daughter, reciting the will, its cancellation, and the letter, and that the testator had died wholly intestate, but that the daughter was desirous of fulfilling the intention of the grandfather, his real estates were settled in accordance with the terms contained in the letter. The daughter died in 1827, her husband became her administrator de bouis non of the grandfather. The husband of the daughter died in 1840, having previously, by will, after reciting the wish to carry into effect the desires of the grandfather, disposed of the grandfather's and his own real and personal property, between the two grandsons and the property, between one two grand-daughter (his children) accordingly. The grand-daughter, who had married in 1843, obtained letters of administration to the grandfather with his letter to his daughter, which was then admitted as a will, annexed, and instituted a suit against the personal representative of her father, claiming that the personal estate of the Ir. 34-C. A. grandfather should be accounted for to her; but the benefits she received under the settlement of 1811 and will of 1837 were greater than those she claimed under the testamentary paper, the that the deed of 1811 and will of 1837 were grandfather in respect of his real estate only, and that, even after the acquiescence since 1811 not thereinbefore appointed to her daughter:—

arose. Egremont v. Lee, Lee v. Egremont, 5 De G. & Sm. 348; 16 Jur. 352.

A., being entitled to one-third of real and personal estates, settled such share upon her marriage, with power of appointment to herself (in events that happened) over one-third thereof, by deed or will, and over the other two-thirds by will, subject to the husband's life interest therein, and in default of issue. Becoming entitled to a moiety of another third of the same estates, she settled it to such uses as she should appoint, subject to the husband's life interest. The testatrix devised, bequenthed and appointed "all that one-third part of her real and personal estates," upon certain trusts; and "as to the residue of the said one-third part, and the remaining two-third parts," she gave the same to her husband for life, remainder to her infant son, who was her only child, and his heirs; but in case he should die under twentyone, without issue, she directed the residue of the said one-third part to be sold, for payment of an annuity and legacies given by her will, the annuity to be payable upon the son's death, and the legacies as soon as the said one-third part could be sold. The son survived the testatrix, and died under twenty-one without issue :--Held, that the appointment of the "one-third part" for payment of the annuity and legacles, extended only to one-ninth of the testatrix's original third, and to one-third of her moiety of the other third, and that the will did not affect the husband's rights under the settlement, and no case of election was raised against him. Sward v. M: Donnell, 2 H. L. Cas, 88; 12 Jur.

Invalid Execution of Power of Appointment. -The rule as to election is applicable only as between a gift under a will and a claim dehors the will and adverse to it, and not as between one clause in a will and another clause in the same will. Wollaston v. King, 38 L. J., Ch. 302; L. R. 8 Eq. 165; 20 L. T. 1003; 17 W. R. 641.

Therefore, where a testatrix, under a settle-ment, had a special power of appointment amongst children, under which she validly appointed the income of a fund to a child  $\Lambda$ , for life, and expressed to give A. a general testamentary power over the corpus, which testamentary power over the corpus, which is tending to perpetuity, and, subject to these dispositions, appointed the residue of the fund to other children, who also took a share of the testatrix's own property :- Held, that the other children could not be called upon to compensate out of their shares in the testatrix's own property those who would have benefited under the invalid power, if valid. Ih.

Semble, that the doctrine of election cannot be applied so as to give effect to a disposition which transgresses the rule against perpetuity. Ib. And see Handcock's Trusts, In re, 23 L. R., Residuary Appointment.]—The donce of an exclusive power to appoint to her children appointed to trustees upon trust during the life letter of the grandfather; and it contended that of her son, to apply at discretion the whole or she must elect between those benefits :-Held, any part of the income for his benefit, or his children, and subject thereto for his children as expressed to be founded on the intention of the he should appoint; and indefault for her daughter, Held, that the whole was well appointed to the daughter, and that no case of election could leav. 552; 25 L. Contingent Interest. ]-E. having a life estate and a contingent reversionary interest in a farm, C., by his will, charged his farms R. and C. with the payments of debts and legacies, and devised all his real estates (subject as to R, and C, to the charge) to H. for life, with remainders over, and with a contingent executory devise to M. for life. Under a settlement made in E.'s lifetime, the farm C. was settled (subject to E.'s life estate) upon M. for life, with remainder to her children (of whom H. was one) in fee, subject to bedivested, in the event of their dying without leaving issue :—Held, that the testator did not intend to devise more than his own interest in the C. farm, and that M. and H. were not put to their election. Ecans v. Erans, 2 N. R. 409. Affirming S. C., 3 W. R. 614.

Settlement of Stock destroyed - Subsequent Will.]—A person transferred a sum of stock into the names of trustees, and by an indenture declared that the stock should be held by the trustees upon certain trusts for the benefit of A. and her children by the settlor. The settlor afterwards obtained from the trustees a retransfer of the stock to himself, and ruzed the seals from the deed. By his will not referring to the deed, he gave A, an annuity and other benefits, and the residue of his estate to the children. A, was entitled to the provision made for her both by the deed and the will, Smith v. Lyne, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 345,

A father transferred stock from his own name into the joint names of his son and of a banker whom they both employed, and told the banker to carry the dividends of the stock to the son's account. The dividends were enjoyed by the son as long as the father lived :- Held, on the father's death, that the son was entitled to the stock absolutely; that a codicil to the father's will, executed two years after the transfer, could be read to qualify or explain the effect of the transfer, and that the language of the codicil respecting the stock, was too vague and obscure to raise a case of election against the son. Crabb v. Crabb, 1 Myl. & K. 511; 3 L. J., Ch. 181.

Remainder after an Estate Tail.]-Testator having a power of appointing lands to such of his sons in such shares, and for such estates, and with such limitations over as he should think proper (in default of whose appointment the lands were to go to his first and other sons in tail male, successively), appointed them by will to A., his eldest son, in tail male, remainder (subject to a charge of 1,000%, to the testator's daughter) to B. and C., his second and third sons, for their lives as tenants in common, with several remainders in tail to their issue :-Held, semble, that the charge of 1,000% was void, and B, and C. having other devises and bequests made to them by the same will, were not bound to elect on the testator's death, nor to confirm the possession. Stewart v. Henry, Vem. & S. 49.

testator took equal shares, subject to his life interest. The testator, by his will, recited that under the settlement his two daughters, A. and B., would become entitled, and that in making his will he had taken the same into consideration, and had not devised to them so large a share under his will as he otherwise should have done; he then devised to A, and B, certain estates, and to his two other daughters, C. and D., other estates, of much greater value. The will did not purport to affect the settled property :-Held, that as the will did not purport to make any disposition of the settled property, and was only made under a mistaken impression, C. and D. were not put to their election. Box v. Barrett, L. R. 3 Eq. 244; 15 W. R. 217.

No devise by implication from the mere recital of an erroneous conception of right. Dashwood v. Peyton, 18 Ves. 27, 48; 11 R. R. 145.

Devise to the heir after the death of the devisor's wife; a necessary implication, that the wife shall take for life; but no implication for her upon such a devise of another man's estate through the medium of election. Ib.

Conditional Limitation. — Devise of Whiteacre to A. for life upon condition that A. suffer a recovery of Blackacre and settle it; and if he does not, then after the decease of A. Whiteaere to go to B. A. took Whiteaere but did not settle Blackaere. The heir of A. is not bound to convey pursuant to the condition, nor are A.'s assets liable to make good the breach of the condition, for it is a conditional limitation, and not a case of bare condition or of election. Unattested Codicil-Before Wills Act. 1-An mattested codicil (before the Wills Act) did not, as to real estate, affect an attested will, or put a party to his election. Middlebrook v. Bromley, 9 Jur. (N.s.) 614; 2 N. R. 224; 8 L. T. 414; 11 W. R. 712.

3. ACTS AMOUNTING TO ELECTION.

Essentials for Election.]—To constitute a settled and concluded election, there must be, first, clear proof that the person was aware of the nature and extent of his rights; and secondly, that, having that knowledge, he intended to elect. Worthington v. Wiginton, 20 Beav. 67; 24 L.J., Ch. 773; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1005. Aftirmed, 25 L. J., Ch. 171; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1195; 4 W. R. 40.

A testator, having invested a sum of money in stock in the joint names of himself and his wife, charge when the remainder to them vested in gave his freehold and leasehold estates and the specific stock to her for life, with remainders over, and he appointed her his sole executrix and Erroneous Impression.]—Precatory words will residuary legatee. The wife, after her husband's not create a case for election, neither will the death, had the stock transferred into her own absence of the execution of a power upon an name, and did not include it in the estimate erroneous impression, stated in the will, that, by for probate. She recovered debts as executivity. its non-execution A. (a legatee) will divide the occupied one of the houses, and enjoyed the rents transferred the stock into the names of herself is generally to be inferred only from a series and of another person, in trust for herself for life for her separate use, and then as she should appoint by will. She died sixteen years after the testator, and it was found by the master that it would have been greatly to her disadvantage to have elected to take under the will :- Held, nevertheless, that she had elected so to take. Ib.

A testator directed moneys of his own, together with moneys belonging to his daughter, to be settled, on her marriage, upon trusts specified in his will. On the marriage of the daughter the entire funds were settled upon trusts not in accordance with the directions of the will :-Held, that the settlement was an election to take under the will; but that the funds were bound by the trusts in the will, and not of the settlement. Brisene v. Brisene, 1 Jo. & Lat. 335; Ir. R. 7 Eq. 123.

When a party has notice that he is bound to elect to take under or against a will, and deals with the property given to him by the will as his own, that is a clear, deliberate act of election to take the property so given to him. Ih. S. P., Cookes v. Hellier, 1 Ves. Sen. 234,

By marriage settlement of 1773, certain estates were limited to the sons of A., in such shares as he should appoint by will, and in default of appointment to them in fee as tenants in common. A., having three sons, B., C. and D., by his will appointed all the lands to B. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail: remainder to C. for life, with limitations to his issue; and gave other valuable properties to his sons C. and D., and made D. his residuary devisee:—Held, that the power of appointment was badly executed. B. C. and D. entered into possession of the estates devised to them, and in 1802 B, settled the lands to the use of himself for life, remainder to his sons as he should appoint, &c. In 1817 a deed was executed by B., C. and D., whereby after reciting that doubts had arisen with respect to the validity of A.'s appointment to B., and that C, and D, had elected to abide by that appointment, and by the lands devised to them, and had agreed to confirm the will of their father; C. and D. released all their right under the settlement of 1773 to the uses of the settlement of 1802 :- Held, that the settlement of 1802 was not an election to take under the will. as the limitations in it were not in accordance with those in the will; and that the deed of 1817 ratified the appointment so far only as it was an exclusive appointment, and then confirmed the limitations of the settlement of 1802. Beere v. Prendergust. Hay. & J. 384.

A., being tenant for life of a leasehold for years, with remainder to B., after devising one estate to B. in tail, bequeathed to him the leasehold during his life, with remainder over, and gave him also the residue of his real and personal property : B. took possession of the residuary estate, suffered a recovery of the lands devised to him in tail, noted as the absolute owner of the leasehold estate, and outlived the term for which the lease was granted, having previously acquired a new interest in the demised premises :- Held, that B. elected to take under the will. Giddings y. Giddings, 3 Russ. 241; 27 R. R. 78.

Knowledge of Right and Obligation to

of the estates : and on her second marriage she | not, | Election is a question of intention, and of unequivocal acts. Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas. 588; 6 N. R. 269; 13 L. T. 164.

Where a case of election arises, the person who ought to make it must be shewn to have known of his duty to do so, and must be proved to have done such acts as amounted to an election. 1b.

Where, therefore, S. continued in the enjoyment of settled estates till his death, but he had mortgaged the lands to H. in fee simple, these facts did not prove an intention to elect under the settlement; nor, on the other hand did the facts that S, had disentailed the estates and mortgaged them afford proof of an intention to take against the settlement. Ib.

If a party who is bound to elect between two estates continues, without being required to elect, in possession of both, such possession and enjoyment, inasmuch as it affords no proof of preference, cannot be held to be an election to take one and reject the other. 1h.

A devisee in trust under the will of S., who had been bound to elect between two estates, and continued in possession of both till his death, instituted a suit to ascertain which of the estates of S, was charged with debts and legacies, and A. consented to a decree :-Held, that A.'s consent to such a decree did not impliedly admit that S, had power to devise all the estates which his will purported to devise, but that it merely admitted the validity of the will and of the trust so far as there were means of carrying it into execution. Ib.

Semble, a party having an equity to compel un election does not forfeit that equity by delay in enforcing it. Ib. And see Hamilton v. Hamilton, 61 L. J., Ch. 220; [1892] 1 Ch. 396; 66 L. T. 112; 40 W. R. 312.

In 1804 A. covenanted with S. to convey to him fee-simple lands, producing annually 528/, 19s. In 1818 S. bequeathed to his wife, in addition to a jointure, 2007, a year, to be in part charged on the property to be conveyed to him by  $\Lambda$ . The residue of his property was bequeathed to his two sons W, and J, in equal shares. In 1823 A, conveyed the property to S. S. died in 1826, without having republished his will, and the property conveyed descended to W; as his heir-at-law. In 1834 W, and J, executed to a sub-tenant a renewal of some of the premises comprised in the dead of 1823, the dead of renewal reciting that the reversion was vested in them by mesne assignment or otherwise. In 1856 W.S., cutitled as heir of W., mortgaged the property described in the deed of mortgage as his moiety or other interest therein, as charged by the will of S, with the additional jointure, The widow received the additional jointure out of the property conveyed until her death, in 1865 :- Held, that the acts of W, and W. S, did not amount to an election to take under the will of S., there being no evidence to shew that the parties at the time were aware of their right or obligation to elect. Sweetman v. Sweetman, Ir. R. 2 Ec. 141.

Time for Election.] - There is no time for limitation of the right to elect, it continues not-Knowledge of Right and Obligation to given lapse of fine, unless if can be shewn that a law is injury would result to third persons and that imputed to every person, yet knowledge of the they would be placed in a much worse condition rule of equity as to the doctrine of election is than if the party entitled to elect had elected early; and further, that he knew he had a right long as his interest in either of the subjectof election, and knew not merely the existence matters of election is reversionary. Ib. of the instrument giving it, but the consequences of the instrument on his rights. Brice v. Brice, 2 Mall 21

A testator made a provision for his wife, expressly in satisfaction of any estate or interest to which she might be entitled, as his wife, out of his real and personal estate. The wife enjoyed this provision, but in ignorance of her right to dower:—Held, that the lapse of sixteen years after the testator's death had not affected her rights. Sopwith v. Manghan, 30 Beav. 235.

Husband devised all his real and personal estates in trust for his wife for life, provided she did not marry; and made her executrix. The trustees not acting, she took possession. After receiving rents and profits for five years, she was not allowed to elect to take a sum under marriage settlement, without special ground, as that, from the situation of the property it was doubtful what would be the result. Butricke v. Broadhurst, 1 Ves. 171; 3 Bro. C. C. 88; 2 R. R. 100. And see Wake v. Wake, 1 Ves. 335; 3 Bro. C. C. 255.

Right to Account before Election.] - Party having right of election may file a bill to have property cleared in order to elect to advantage. Ib, 172.

To make out a case in equity of compulsory election, the party to be bound thereby must be shewn to be fully cognisant of the nature and extent of his rights, in respect of such subjectmatter of choice so east upon him, or to have actually elected as testified by his acts. Edwards v. Mirran, 13 Price, 782; M.Cle. 541. Affirmed nom. Morgan v. Edwards, 1 Bligh (N.S.) 401.

Possession of Subject-matters of Election. ]-On a question of election by a party bound to elect between two properties, it is necessary to inquire into the circumstances of the property against which the election is supposed to have been made; for if a party so situated not being called on to elect continues in the receipt of the rents and profits of both properties, such receipt cannot be construed into an election to take the one and reject the other; and, in like nummer, if one of the properties does not yield rent to be received, and the party hable to elect deals with it as his own by mortgaging the same, &c. (particularly if this is done with the knowledge and concurrence of the party entitled to call for an election), such dealing will be unavailable to prove an actual election as against the receipt of the rents of the other property. Palbury v. Clarke, 2 Macn. & G. 298; 2 Hall & Tw. 341; 19 L. J., Ch. 533.

Construction of acts, as constituting election. The acts of a party bound to elect between two inconsistent rights, in order to constitute election, must imply a knowledge of the rights, and an intention to elect : possession being, under the circumstances, equivocal as referrible to either right. The execution of deeds containing recital of the character in which the party claimed, and the execution of a power to dispose of the estates in that character, amount to conclusive evidence of election. Dillan v. Parker, 1 Swanst. 359; 1 Wils, K. B. 253; 18 R. R. 72. Affirmed, Jacob, 505; 1 Cl. & F. 303; 1 Bligh (N.s.) 325.

In 1726, the estates of K. and W. were settled to the use of A, for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail. In 1762 A, and B., the first tenant in tail, resettled the W. estate to other uses. In 1768 A, and B, resettled the K. estate to the use of B, for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; remainder to J. S. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; remainder to the defendant for life; with remainder over. On B.'s death without issue in 1801, J. S. became seised of both estates, and suffered a recovery of the K. estate, and declared the uses to himself in fee. He also executed certain powers of charging and jointuring over the W. estate given by the settlement of 1768. In 1802, 15,000*l*, was granted by government for the purchase of lands to be settled conformably to the deed of 1768, and in the meantime to be laid out on real security. The trustee named in this settlement having refused to act, a suit was instituted in chancery in which another person was appointed trustee, to whom the 15,000t was paid; and by whom it was soon after advanced to J. S. on a mortgage in fee of the K. estate. In 1804, the court ordered that the defendant should be made a party to the suit, and he became acquainted with the dealings in respect of the 15,000%. In 1816, J. S. granted to the plaintiff an annuity for her life of 100L charged upon the K. estate; and soon after died, having devised that estate to his daughter E. B., whom he also appointed residnary legatee. In 1823, a suit was instituted in chancery by the defendant against E. B., which was compromised by the defendant's obtaining possession of the K. estate, and releasing E. B. from all demands upon the personalty :- Held, that J. S. had elected to take under the settlement of 1726. But at all events that the defendant by his conduct before and after the death of J. S. was estopped from disputing the plaintiff's claim. Rathbone v. Aldborouph, Hayes, 207.

Receipt of Income of Trust Moneys. |-In 1875 and 1876, a husband by two several deeds which contained no power of revocation, assigned two policies of assurance on his own life to trustees for his wife absolutely. In 1883 by deed, executed but not acknowledged by the wife, the husband with the privity and consent of his wife, purported to revoke the trusts of the two former deeds, and to resettle the two policies upon trust for his wife during widowhood, with remainder to his children, and also assigned other property to trustees upon trust to pay a sum due to a creditor, party to the deed, and subject thereto upon the same trusts as were thereby The liability of a party to be called upon to declared of the two policies. The husband died elect will not be affected by lapse of time so in 1888. The wife married again in 1891, having up to that date received the income of the additional property settled by the deed of 1883, deed of 1883 was an assignment of a future interest, and should have been acknowledged by the married woman under Malins' Act; that the mere receipt by the wife of the income of the trust moneys, without more, did not amount to an election by her to confirm the deed of 1883, and, therefore, that the wife was entitled to the proceeds of the two policies absolutely, she accounting for the income received by her from the additional property included in the deed of 1883. To put the wife to an election there must be a clear intention to exclude her from dower, either express or implied; and such intent is not to be implied either from the gift of particular messuages and hereditaments to her for life, or from anunity provided for her. Miall v. Brain, 4 Madd, 119; 20 R, R, 277,

Equal Division between Widow and Others.] -Devise upon trust as to one moiety for wife, during widowhood, and as to other for children: -Held, wife must elect to take under will or her dower. Roberts v. Smith, 1 Sim. & S. 513. S. P., Dickson v. Robinson, Jac. 503; Chalmers v. Storil, 2 V. & B. 222.

Where a man devised a moiety of his estate, after payment of his debts, legacies, and portions to his wife for life, this would not bar her dower, but she ought to elect. Daly v. Lynch, 3 Bro.

Devise in Trust for Sale.]—Where testator bequeathed all his personal and real estate to be sold and converted and invested, and a moiety of the interest, &c., thereof to be paid to his widow for her life, during widowhood, and the other to his sister and children; the widow being dowable out of part of the real estate :- Held, that she was entitled both to dower and also the interest given by the will, and was not put to her election. Ellis v. Lewis, 3 Hare, 310; 13 L. J., Ch. 210; 8 Jur. 238.

A testator gave all his freeholds and leaseholds to trustees, for all his estate and interest therein, on trust to sell and apply the proceeds in manner thereinafter declared; he then gave certain legacles out of his personal estate, and the residue thereof, together with the proceeds to be derived, from the sale of his freehold and leasehold estate, he directed to be divided into four parts; onefourth he gave to his wife, and the other threefourths to certain other relations. Amongst other legacies, sums of money were given in unequal amounts to his wife and the other devisees. The and he empowered his trustees, during the contestator, after the date of his will, had leased tinuance of the trusts, to continue and carry on parts of his estates for terms of years, with an allor any of the farms or other concerns in which Annuity to Widow. ]-Where a man gave his option to the lessees to purchase, and had as to the benefits given her by the will, and that the acts by which the value of the property was increased not being hers, she would take her dower according to the existing value. Gibson v. Gibson, 1 Drew, 42: 22 L. J., Ch. 346.

> --- Power to Lease Unsold Land. -- A testator having contracted to sell part of his fee simple estates, devised all his property to trustees, and directed them to complete his contract, and to sell and convert into money all his estates; and out of the interest of the sale proceeds to pay an annuity to his wife for life; and he empowered his trustees to lease unsold parts of his real estates :- Held, that the widow was bound to elect between the benefits given her by the will and her dower. O'Hara v. Chaine, 1 Jo. & Lat. 662.

> A gift by a testator of an ammity to his widow, followed by a devise to trustees to sell and lease the land until sold :- Held, that the widow must elect. Linley v. Taylor, 1 Giff. 67; 28 L.J., Ch. 686; 7 W. R. 639.

> Powers of Leasing and Management. ]-An annuity given to the testator's widow, charged on estate A., in exoneration of estates A, and B., describing them, with power of leasing to the trustees:—Held, the widow was put to her elec-tion. Pepper v. Dison, 17 Sim. 200;

> A power to lease and manage his real estate, given by a testator to his trustees, does not, by itself, raise an implication of the testator's intention to exclude his wife from dower, so as to compel her to elect. Warbutton v. Warbutton, 2 Sm. & G. 163; 23 L. J., Ch. 467; 18 Jur. 415; 2 Eq. R. 414; 2 W. R. 300.

> In determining the obligation of the widow to elect, the court will regard the intention of the testator, apparent on the whole of the will. Ib. The amount of the provision made by the will is a material circumstance in indicating > the testator's intention. Ib. A testator bequeathed to his wife an annuity payable out of part of his real estate, and he devised other real estate to trustees upon trust, on the youngest of his nephews and nieces coming of age, to sell and to divide the proceeds among his nephews and nieces; the testator among his helpflows and meeters, the essatur-gave to the trustees power to lease, and to cut timber for repairs:—Held, that the widow was bound to elect between the annuity and her dower. Parker v. Sowerby, 4 De G. M. & G. 321; 23 L. J., Ch. 623; 18 Jur. 523; 2 W. R. 547; 2 Eq. Rep. 664.

> To raise a case of election, it is not necessary that it should be apparent on the face of the will that the wife's right to dower was present to the testator's mind: it is sufficient that the disposition of the property is inconsistent with the right to dower. Ib.

he might be engaged at the time of his death, and to demise, mortgage or sell the same:— Held, that the widow was not entitled both to the annuity and to her dower. Lowes v. Lowes, 5 Hare, 501; 15 L. J., Ch. 369; 10 Jur. 453.

A testator, after bequeathing to his wife an annuity charged on his estate at S., devised all his property to trustees, upon certain trusts, and he directed them to occupy and manage, during the minority of his son, a farm, constituting the greater part of his estate at S., and to let and manage the residue of his real estates, and to receive the rents of the whole of such estates :-Held, that the widow must elect. Roadley v.

Dixon, 3 Russ. 192; 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 170.

Where a testator by his will provided amply for his widow, giving her a portion of his estate for life, and also an annuity charged upon his general estate with powers of distress and entry in case of nonpayment, and gave a leasing power to his trustees, which overrode the entire freehold estate :- Held, that these circumstances were widow from her dower. Hall v. Hill, 1 Dr. & War. 208. 94: 1 Con. & L. 120: Ir. R. 4 Eq. 27.

Widow, devisee, put to her election in respect of dower, out of farm, which it was testator's intention that trustees should possess entire, and her title to dower would disappoint that intention. Butcher v. Kemp, 5 Madd. 61.

A testator devised all his interest in the lands of T. (subject to the charges after mentioned) to his eldest son A. for life, and on A.'s decease to appoint, and in default of appointment in equal shares, with similar limitations, to his other sons. He empowered A, when in possession of T, to grant to any wife 500l. a year jointure, either in bar of dower or not, with a term to score it. The testator authorised the devisees, according as they should be in possession of T., to lease all or any part thereof. After creating a charge of 3,000l, on the house, lands and furniture at T. for his daughter, and bequeathing to his wife, "in addition to the sums already settled on her," an confirmed the settlement made on his wife :-Held, that the widow must elect between her dower and the annuity of 50l. Robinson v. Wilson, Ir. R. 13 Eq. 168.

Freebench. |-Gift by a husband of a legacy of 2001, and an aunuity of 7001, to his widow (for life or nutil her second marriage), charged upon part of his freehold and copyhold hereditaments, with a direction that she should occupy his mansion-house and enjoy the rents of a portion of the property. The testator devised his real estate specifically, and gave his trustees powers of management and leasing. His real estate consisted chiefly of customary lands, out of which his widow was entitled to freebench; but the evidence shewed that in no instance in these manors had a widow ever been admitted or her freebench set out by metes and bounds :-Held, that the widow was put to her election. Thompson v. Burra, 42 L. J., Ch. 827; L. R. 16

Upon the construction of a will, held that the widow of a testator was bound to elect between in part of the devised estates. Taylor v. Taylor, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 727.

A testator being seised of copyhold lands made a specific devise of real estate, and gave the residue of his real and personal estate to trustees, upon trust to pay to his wife an annuity of 201. and then upon the trusts therein mentioned. He empowered his trustees to lease any lands which they might hold on the trusts of his will :- Held. that the widow was put to her election between the annuity and her freebench out of the convholds. Grayson v. Deakin, 3 De G. & Sm. 298; 18 L. J., Ch. 114; 13 Jur. 145.

A testator gave annuities to his vidow, charged on land, certain freehold parts of which he had no power to devise, and as to certain copyhold parts of which it was contended that it did not pass by his will. He declared that such annuities were in satisfaction of all dower and thirds at the common law or otherwise, which she might have been entitled to in default of his will :-Held, that the widow was put to her election, as well to the freeholds which he had no power to devise, as to the freebench out of the copyholds, sufficient to indicate an intention to exclude the Notley or Notley v. Palmer, 2 Drew. 93; 2 W. R.

A testator, in 1831, devised his copyhold messnages to trustees, upon trust to permit his wife to occupy one of them during the minority of his youngest child, and to apply the rents of the others to the maintenance, &c., of his children, Thomas and John, and the children or child of which his wife was then enceinte, during minority, making thereout a provision for his wife. He then provided for the advancement of all his sons in such shares as he (A.) should his "said children," the division of the messuages among them at twenty-one, and for benefit of survivorship among them. He bequeathed his personal estate on the like trusts in favour of his "said children"; and in all these cases he added the words "as well as the children or child of which my wife is so enceinte as those already born"; but in several instances he simply used the words, "said children," and in one instance omitted "said," In 1847 he made a codicil disposing of freeholds and copyholds acquired since addition to the sums already settled on her," and the date of the will, on the same trusts, and con-annuity of 50% during her life, and charging the firming the will. The child of which the wife annuity on the house, &c., at T., and directing was enceinte was afterwards born, and, in 1835, his son A. to pay the head rent of the lands, he a fourth child was born;—Held, that the fourth child was entitled to a share; and that the widow was put to her election. Goodfellow v. Goodfellow, 18 Beav. 356; 2 W. R. 360.

> Agreement to make Partition.]-A tenant in common agreed to make a partition, and by his will be confirmed the agreement and devised the estate to trustees to convey the part agreed to the other tenant in common and his heirs, and to receive a conveyance of the other part, and he devised it and all his real and personal estate to trustees to receive the rents and pay an ammity to his widow, &c. &c. :-Held, that the widow was bound to elect. Reynard v. Spence, 4 Beav. 103 : 5 Jur. 478.

Disclaimer. ]-A testator, by a will not executed so as to pass freeholds, gave freeholds and copyholds to his brother, on condition that the latter joined the testator's nephew in the purchase of certain annuities, and he gave the nephew freeholds, leascholds and personalty on a similar condition. The brother disclaimed :- Held, that the nephew must make provision for one-half of the the benefits given her by the will and freebench annuities. Wilson v. Wilson, 1 De G. & Sm. 152; 11 Jur. 793.

One of the annuities was directed to be paid to the widow so long as she should live, and if she to his wife generally, on the same quarterly days had any child born, such sum to be continued for its life. There were three children born:— Held, that the direction applied to the eldest only; and that, taking the annuity, she was bound to give effect to the other annuity, and to the gifts to the nephew as regarded the one-third share of freeholds which descended to her. Ib,

Right of Terce.]—A testator bequeathed to his wife, during her life, four-sevenths of the income of his general residuary estate, in which he intended to include a Scotch heritable bond ; but the infant heir having elected under the order of the court to claim against the will, took that bond by his legal title, subject to the widow's right of terce :- Held, that the widow must elect; and that, although disappointed of the four-sevenths of the interest of the bond debt, which the testator meant her to enjoy, she must, if she claimed what he had effectually be meathed to her, bring in her terce to increase the general residuary estate. Requolds v. Torin. I Russ, 129; 25 R. R. 13.

Forfeiture. ]-Where a testator, having granted an annity to his widow, under his will directed 3 Ves. 337.
that if she persisted in any claim on the residue of his property she was to forfeit the annuity :- Held, the widow was not put to her clection, but was entitled both to her dower and to the annuity. Wetherell v. Wetherell, 4 Giff. 51:8 Jur. (8.8.) 814; 7 L. T. 89; 10 W. R. 818.

A testator directed payment of his debts, and gave all his personal estate and effects (by description) to his wife, for her sole use for life. He tion) to his wife, for her sole use for life. He tion. Thompson v. Nelson, 1 Cox, 447. S. P., then gave her a cottage at B. for her sole use for French v. And he directed that the aforesaid properties, and all his other property should be disposed of for the benefit of his children, or so many as should survive his wife; nevertheless if any married and died leaving in regard the mother might (which she did) issue, they should inherit the father's or mother's share; and that the property should be kept in elect to take the provision under the settlement, repair and let until his youngest son attained or her dower, and freebench. Clarathers v. twenty-one. The widow claimed to be entitled Caruthers, 4 Bro. C. C. 500. in fee to the premises in N. Street, K. Place, and M. Street, and to be reconped the mortgage money she had paid off; she also claimed dower: -Held, that she was put to her election, both as to the property given by the will, and as to Also that there was a forfeiture. And that there was a gift to those children who survived the wife, and the issue of those that died in her lifetime, leaving issue. Hilton v. Hilton, 15 W. R. 193.

Deed of Separation. - By a deed of separation between husband and wife, the husband conveyed a fee simple estate to trustees upon trust, out of the rents, to pay an annuity to his wife, and the residue to himself and his heirs :- Held, that the wife, who survived her husband, was not bound to elect between the annuity and her dower. Hill v. Hemsworth, Ll. & G. t. Plunk, 87.

A., by deed of separation, covenanted with the trustee of the deed to pay him an annual sam of 521. during the life of A.'s wife, to be paid to her on four special quarterly days for her separate the public funds, and whether standing in his use, without power of anticipation. A, by will, name alone or jointly with his wife, to his wife subsequently gave certain specific property to for life, and after her decease to other persons. trustees, to pay out of the rents an amulity of 521. At the date of the will, and at the testator's death,

-Held, that there being no direction in the will to pay debts and legacies, and no expression of a contrary intention, the general rule must prevail, that the annuity given by the will was in satisfaction of the animity covenanted to be paid by the deed; and that the widow was put to her election. Athinson v. Littlewood, L. R. 18 Eq. 595; 31 L. T. 225.

Alternative Gifts.]—A testator being entitled to two leasehold houses situate at P. and at R., directed his trustee to allow his wife to occupy his honse at P. or at R. as she should elect, for her life, without payment of any rent :- Held, that the widow must elect between the two houses; but that she was entitled to be indemnified out of the testator's estate against the rent and covenants to which the honse she might select was liable. Harby v. Moore, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 883.

Death of Devisee during Life of Devisor. |-Devisee died in the life of the devisor, and the estate descended; the devisor's widow, being entitled by the will to a provision in bar of dower, bound to elect. Pickering v. Stamford (Lord),

A widow will not be barred of her dower by a provision made by will, unless there be a clear indication of the testator's intention, or unless some other disposition of his property would be defeated by the widow's taking both. The testator's having given all his property on trust, in the first place to pay such provision to the wife, is not of itself a sufficient indication of such inten-

Marriage Settlement. ]- By the settlement made on the marriage of a female infant, an estate was settled on the husband's mother for life, remainder to the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, with remainders over, in bar of dower. This settlement would not bind the wife survive the husband; the wife might therefore Investments in Names of Husband and Wife. ] -A husband transferred a sum of stock into the joint names of himself and his wife; he afterwards made his will, and gave her an estate for life in the stock and in certain freehold and leasehold estates, with remainder to other persons, and he made her his residuary legatee. She treated the stock as her own, and enjoyed the estates during her life :- Held, in a suit instituted after her decease, that she was cognisant of her rights, and was bound to elect between the stock and the benefits given to her by the testator, and that her acts shewed that she had elected to take under the will. Worthington v. Wiginton, 20 Benv. 67; 24 L. J., Ch. 773; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 105. Affirmed, 25 L. J., Ch. 171; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 115; 4 W. R. 40.

A testator, after giving his wife a legacy of 3,0001, gave all the residue of his estate and effects, including therein the money in his banking account in the Bank of England, and money in wife. This stock had by a previous will been regard to the long annuities. bequeathed to the wife, subject to two executory gifts over which did not take effect. The testator had received the stock, and transferred it into their joint names. After his death his widow received the income of the residuary estate, including the consols, but did not deal with the stock as her own. There was, however, no evidence that she knew what her rights were. On her death her representatives claimed the stock: -Held, that the testator intended the stock to pass, and was not dealing only with his right of survivorship; that the doctrine of election applied both to the wife and her representatives, and that the latter could only take the stock upon compensating the residuary legatees to the extent | Poole v. Odling, 31 L. J., Ch. 439; 10 W. R. 337. of the legacy of 3,0001, and of the amount received by the wife in respect of her life interest on the testator's own property. Curpenter, In re, Carpenter v. Disney, 51 L. T. 778.

A husband before making his will transferred two sums of 4 per cent, and 5 per cent, stock, then forming the whole of his funded property, into the joint names of himself and his wife. By his will he gave all his funded property or estate, of whatsoever kind, upon trust for his wife for life, and after her decease, upon trust to pay divers legacies of 4 per cent, stock, amounting within 50l, to the stock of that description, which he had so transferred. He afterwards purchased further sums of 5 per cent, stock in the names of himself and his wife, and died in her lifetime, leaving no funded property, except the 4 per cents, and 5 per cents, already mentioned, exclusive of which his assets were insufficient to pay his legacies:-Held, that all the sums of stock became by survivorship the absolute property of the wife, and that the will did not purport to dispose of the stock in terms sufficiently distinct and explicit to put the wife to her election. Dummer v. Pitcher, 2 Myl, & K. 262; Coop. t. Brough, 257. Affirming 5 Sim, 35.

A testator bequeathed all his canal shares in trust for his wife during her life, and after her decease to other parties. He had no interest in any canal shares, except in some which, at his death, and at the date of his will, stood in the joint names of himself and his wife in the books of the canal company; he had received the dividends during his life, and had acted and been treated by the company as owner :- Held, that the canal shares were intended by the testator to pass by his will, and that his widow was bound to elect. Shuttleworth v. Greaves, 4 Myl. & C. 85; 8 L. J., Ch. 7; 2 Jur. 957.

Testator bequeathed 2,2001, stock, his property, standing in the joint names of himself and wife, to trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends to his wife for her life, and after her decease, to distribute the capital amongst his grand-children by name; and he directed that in case he had not that sum standing in his name at the time of his death, the same should be made up out of his other estate and effects :-Held, that the stock was the absolute property of the wife surviving, and that she must elect between it and the other benefits bequeathed to her by the will. Coates v. Stevens, 1 Y. & C. 66.
A testator, whose only funded property consisted of long annuities, which had been pur-chased by him in the joint names of himself and wife, bequeathed to his brothers an interest in there was only one sum (viz. 7,1101, consols) ties. He also made a provision for his wife :-standing in the joint names of himself and his Held, that the wife was put to her election in Groscenor v. Durston, 27 Beav. 97.

A testator gave 8007, consols and two leases hold houses to trustees for all his estate and interest therein, upon trust to pay his wife the interest and proceeds for her life, and after her decease, to pay an annuity of 14% to his daughter for life, with a gift over of the 8001, to his grandson and his children. At the testator's death the 800%, consols were standing in the names of himself and his wife :- Held, upon bill filed by the trustees against the wife's executor for a transfer of the fund, that the gift of the 800l. was a general bequest, that the sum survived to the wife, and that she was not put to her election.

Property of Wife. - A testator gave to his wife for life the use of furniture, &c., of every description in his house at his death. There was both furniture, &c., belonging to the testator, and also furniture settled to the separate use of the wife in his honse :- Held, that the widow was bound to elect between the benefits given by the will and her own property in the house. Parrott v. Wallace, 4 L. J., Ch. 36,

Statement of property written by testator, and his books of accounts admitted as evidence, that he considered as his property, and meant to dispose of mortgages and leases the property of wife under will, by which he was co-executor with her before her marriage. Wifn was put to her election. Druce v. Denison, 6 Ves. 385

Testator devised all his estates in different places (which he had surrendered) to his wife for life, with remainders over; in some of the places he had no estates but in right of his wife; these did not pass by the will, and wife not put to an election. Read v. Crop, 1 Bro. C. C. 492.
Where an estate had been contracted to be purchased by a woman who married, leaving part of the purchase-money masatisfied, which was paid by her husband, who took the conveyance to himself, and devised the estate :- Held, that the estate was the property of the wife, subject to a charge in favour of her husband for the amount of the purchase-money contributed by him. Maddison v. Chapman, 1 J. & H. 470.

The husband having devised his real and personal property, at L. and elsewhere, and died, leaving no real property at L. other than the charge aforesaid, and having given benefits by his will to his widow :-- Held, that he had sufficient interest to satisfy the words of the will without attributing an intention to devise his wife's property, and that the widow was not put to her election. By a marriage settlement property of the wife was conveyed to trustees in trust to pay the interest to the husband for life, and after his death to the wife for life, and after the death of the survivor to pay the principal to the children of the marriage, as the wife should appoint, and in default of appointment amongst, the children equally, and on failure of issue to the wife. There was one child was died an infant; and afterwards the husband, who had received the balk of the trust funds from the trustees, made his will, by which he made certain gifts to his wife, in bar of all her claims under her marriage settlement; and if she elected to take under the settlement, the gifts should be void, and should be comprised in the general devise of his property; and he devised all the rest of his property to trustees :-- Held, that the wife who survived the husband was barred by the will from claiming any portion of the principal of the funds comprised in the settlement. Mackey v. Maturin, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 150. But see Coleman v. Jones, 3 Russ, 312 : 6 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 16.

Held, also, that she was entitled to the interest of the funds during her life. Ib. Two sums of money, the property of a wife, were lent by her to her hasband, who gave her a cheque for one sum, and for the other a letter acknowledging the receipt of it, and placing it to her credit in his firm :- Held, that she was entitled only to one year's interest on the sums, against her husband's assets. 1b.

The wife being entitled to a settled estate, the husband gave her, by will, an interest in another estate, and all his personal property in lieu of her claims; the will was not duly attested to pass real estate, she could not take the devised land, but must elect between the personal estate alone, and her claims under the settlement. Newman v. Newman, 1 Bro. C. C. 186.

A lmsband, conceiving himself entitled under a void deed to a residue bequeathed to his wife, and dying without getting possession, having made a general disposition by a will, under which she took an interest, it was a case of election; and her election to take the provision under the will, which, though less in point of value was to her separate use, was established against the assignees under the bankruptey of her second husband. Rutter v. Maclean, 4 Ves. 531. Affirming S. C., nom. Wright v. Rutter, 2 Ves. 673; 3 R. R. 24.

A testator devised and bequeathed his residuary real and personal estate to his widow "absolutely in the fullest confidence that she" would carry out his wishes in certain particulars—namely, absolutely to such of the articles as did not con-that she would pay the premiums on a policy for sist of paraphernalia, but as to such as formed 1,000% on her own life, and that she would by paraphernalia, the wife's next of kin could elect daughter. The policy for 1,000l. was the property of the widow; that for 3007, belonged sufficient to create trusts of the policies in favour of the daughter after the widow's death, or to impose a condition on her, and therefore that she was not, on account of the benefits given toher by the will, put to her election to carry out Earns (40 L. J. Ch. 447; L. R. 6 Ch. 597) discussed. Williams, In re, Williams v. Williams, G. L. Ch. 12, Ch. 485; [1897] 2 Ch. 12; 76 L. T. 600; 45 W. R. 519-C. Å.

Paraphernalia.]—Although a husband has no right to dispose of his wife's paraphernalia, yet if he does so, she must either abide by the will, or relinquish all benefit therefrom. Churchill v. Small, 2 Ken. 6.

The wife is not debarred of her paraphernalia by a bequest of the use of all household goods, furniture, plate, jewels, lineu, &c., for life. Marshall v. Blew, 2 Atk, 217.

Husband devises wife's jewels to wife for life, remainder to his son ; the wife makes no election or claim to have the jewels as her paraphernalia, her administrator cannot make this claim. Clarges v. Albemarle, 2 Vern. 217; Nelson,

A., by marriage articles, agreed to leave his wife 8007, and her jewels, &c., and it was declared that notwithstanding the articles, she should not be debarred of anything he should give her by will. He by will disposed of his whole estate, and gave his wife 1,000. The wife must either waive the articles or the will. Herne v. Herne, 2 Vern. 555.

Jewels purchased by the husband and worn by the wife with others belonging to her husband become her paraphernalia, in the absence of evidence to the contrary; but family jewels by being merely worn by the wife do not become part of her paraphernalia. Jervoise v. Jervoise, 17 Beav. 566; 23 L. J., Ch. 703; 2 W. R. 91.

A husband who was entitled to family jewels and diamonds bequeathed to his wife all "his jewels for life, and afterwards as heirlooms":-Held, that this bequest did not include pearl orunments presented to her, or brilliant bracelets bought by the husband and given to the wife, and worn with the family jewels, so as to put the wife to her election. Ib.

Where a lady was possessed of jewels and ornaments of the person before her marriage, and after her marriage they were in all writings spoken of by her linsband as hers, and were denosited with bankers, with whom she, with his consent, kept a separate account, and after her lunacy, the husband made his will, giving her the use of his plate, furniture, linen, jewels, and household effects, including the jewels and effects "which belonged to her before her marrige," and which he "had assumed by marital right" during her life, upon the death of the hundre, who survived her husband, the court held that the husband's next of kin were entitled

5. ELECTION BY APPOINTERS AND PERSONS CLAIMING UNDER SETTLEMENTS.

Invalid Appointment. |- Testator appointed to grandchildren, under a power to appoint to children, a fund to go in default of appointment equally : the appointment being bad, the children having legacies must elect. Whistler v. Webster, 2 Ves, 366: 2 R. R. 260.

A testatrix having under her marriage settlement a power to appoint among children, appointed by her will a part of the fund to grandchildren, and gave benefits to those who would take in default of appointment :- Held, that those who could defeat this undne appointment must elect between their claims under the settlement, and the benefits given them by the will. Present v. Edmunds, 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 111. S. P., Bernard, Ex parte, Leigh's Trust, In re, 6 Ir. Ch. R. 133.

A testator, having power under a settlement to appoint the settled hereditaments to children of his first marriage only, appointed the same (describing them as his own property) in favour of a son of the first marriage subject to a charge in favour of his other children, including the children of his second marriage, and he devised property of his own to the same son subject to the same charges in favour of his other children " so as to equalise the shares of all his children in all his property" :-Held, that a case of election arose in favour of the children of the second arose in rayour of the enlargen of the second marriage. Woodhridge v. Woodhridge, supra, col. 1335, distinguished. White, In re, White v. White, 52 L. J., Ch. 232; 22 Ch. D. 555; 48 L. T. 151; 13 W. R. 451.

B., having an estate at D., conveyed it to his daughter in fee, with livery of seisin, and she by a declaration of trust of even date agreed to hold it for such one or more of B's children, herself being one, as he should by deed or will appoint, and in default in trust for them equally. B. continued in possession during his life, and by his will devised his estate at D, to trustees, his son being one, in favour of his daughter and his two sons and their children, with gifts of other property to his sons and his grandchildren. The testator had a very small property at D. which was not subject to the power :- Held, that the testator intended absolutely to give the whole of his property at D., there being a good exercise of the power pro tanto, and that the sons were put to their election. For v. Charlton, & L. T. 743: 10 W. R. 566.

____ Derivative Interest_Next of Kin.] _ The principle of election applies to the next of kin of an intestate, although his estate has not been wound up at the time that the will comes into operation. Cooper v. Cooper, 44 L. J., Ch. 6; L. R. 7 H. L. 53; 30 L. T. 409; 22 W. R. 713.

A lady having a power of appointment over the reversion expectant on her own death in a trust fund in favour of any of her issue, to be executed before her children had all attained twenty-five, made within that period an appointment by deed among her three sons equally. By will she purported to appoint the fund to her eldest son; and one of her sons having died whether they would take them or the benefits given by the will. Heresun, In re, If Almaine v. that it could not take effect as a new appointment under the power, and that the family belonged to the two surviving sons, and the estate of the deceased son, according to the appointment by deed, the eldest son filed a bill to put the children of his deceased brother to their election :- Held, that such children were put to their election. Ib.

> Election to allow Maintenance. ]-Held, on construction of settlement, that will not being duly attested, and under other circumstances, trustees had no power to allow maintenance during certain period; but that eldest son should be put to his election to allow it, as he had other benefits under the will, and was the only person that could be benefited by withholding the maintenance. Hume v. Rundell, 2 Sim. & S. 174.

> Inconsistent Appointments. -Successive Where successive irrevocable appointments are made in favour of the same person, the latter appointment will be held to be in substitution for the former, if such appears to be the intention of the donce of the power, and the person in whose favour the appointments are made will be compelled to elect between them. England v. Lurers, L. R. 3 Eq. 63; 15 W. R. 51.

> A person having a power of appointment, by deed or will, over a fund, in favour of his children, upon the marriage of one of his daughters, E., appointed one-seventh to her; and upon the marriage of another daughter, I., appointed another one-seventh to her. He afterwards executed a deed-poll, by which, without noticing executed a decel-poil, by which, without noticing the previous appointments, he gave one-sixth of the fund to E, another sixth to L, three other sixths to other children, and left one-sixth nudisposed of. By his will be disposed of so much of the fund as was not then already appointed in favour of any of his children :— Held, that the appointments to E. and L., made by the deed-poll, were in substitution for those previously made, and raised a case of election; and that the will operated as an appointment of so much of the fund as was not disposed of by the

> A lady on her marriage, appointed by deedpoll 3,000%, to trustees, the interest to be paid to her hashand for life, and after his death the capital to be divided between her nephews and nicces; and the deed contained a power to revoke the trusts subsequent to the life estate. By her will, after marriage, she revoked all the trusts of the deed, and gave 1,000% to her husband and the residue to the plaintiff— Held, that the will was made under an erroneous impression, and was intended to revoke all the trusts of the deed, and that the husband was put to his election between the life interest and the 1.000*l*. Coutts v. Acworth, 39 L. J., Ch. 649; L. R. 9 Eq. 519; 18 W. R. 482.

Appointment Violating Rule against Perpetuities. |- Under his narriage settlement, A. had a power of appointing property amongst the children or remoter issue of the marriage. By will, he appointed the settled property to his son and daughter in equal shares, to vest in them in the manner thereinafter expressed concerning intestate in her lifetime, she gave benefits out of his residuary estate. He afterwards gave his her own property to his children. All her residuary estate in trust as to one-half to his son children had attained twenty-five before the will absolutely, to vest at twenty-five, but subject to the settlement thereinafter directed, which was to any after-born son he might have by his wife : the serious in the remainder furceces, which was no any arter-room son he might will not be be made upon him and his children with gifts —Held, that the power of charging could not be over to persons not objects of the power. The exercised in favour of any child of the first over to persons not objects of the power. The son insisted that he took the settled property absolutely, discharged from the void restrictions: -Held, that he must elect whether he would take under or against the will. Blane, 28 Beav, 422.

Exercise of Non-existent Power of Appointment. ]-A testatrix entitled for life to property which in case of her death without issue (which happened), went over to her brothers and sisters, of whom J. was one, by will purporting to exercise a power, which she erroneously supposed she had, appointed the property to a class of named persons referred to in the will as objects of the power, of whom J, was not one, and by codied gave J. property over which she had a free power of disposal:—Held, that J. was put to his election. Brookstank, In re, Bauwlerk v. James, 56 L. J., Ch. 82; 34 Ch. D. 160; 55 L. T. 593; 35 W. R. 101.

R., having a testamentary power to appoint land to his male issue as he should direct, devised certain of the land to his eldest son, J. (who survived him)," to be chargeable with 2,000% borrowed for J.'s sole use." He also gave benefits out of his own property to all the objects of the power, and directed that certain portions of his estate should be sold or charged as by his will provided, and the proceeds applied, together with the said 2,000%, which he stated he had paid, to form a fund for payment of his debts and legacies:— Held, that the charge of 2,000l, not being well appointed, a case of election arose between the objects of the power and the persons entitled to the fund of which the 2,0007, was to be part. King v. King, 13 L. R., Ir. 531.

Erroneous Recitals.]—By a deed, reciting that estates were charged with 1,000%, for younger children under a previous settlement, the lands were resettled and a sum of 2,500% charged for the younger children. The previous settlement really charged the lands with 2,000/.; the younger children claiming both the 2,000I, and 2,500%; -- Held, that there was no case for election between the deeds, but merely a misrecital, and if the real intention was to charge the 2,500%, in addition to 1,000%, only, it should have been proved by parol evidence. Ruby v. Foot and Boamish, Beat. 581.

A. B., on his second marriage, settled certain lands to the use of the settler for life, then to secure a jointure for his intended wife, and subject thereto to the use of his first and every other son by his intended wife, and the deed of settlement empowered the settler if he should have more than one son, by deed or will to prefer such son to the whole or part of the settled hinds, subject to his wife's jointure, and also subject to such sums of money not exceeding 4,000l, as the settlor might charge thereon by deed or will. Shortly afterwards the settlor executed this power, and charged the lands with 4,000%, in favour of the children of his first marriage, and subsequently made his will, and thereby devised certain estates of which he was seised to the minor defendant, his only son then living by his second marriage, and reciting "that by his settlement, the settled lands were chargeable" as aforesaid, and "that he had accordingly charged them"; and also that he had power to marriage, but that a case of election was created by the will. Cooke v. Briscoe, 1 Dr. & Wal. 596.

Gifts in Satisfaction.]—Testator, having upon his daughter's marriage given a bond to leave-5,000l, at his death among her younger children, by will created a term for years in trust, to apply rents for maintenance of such children till twenty-one; and also gave his personal estate in trust, to pay the produce of it to his wife for life, and after her death to pay 1,5004, to one of the daughters of his daughter, and 3,500l. among the other younger children of his daughter, as she should appoint, and in default of appointment, equally between them at twenty-one or marriage; and declared the legacies should be in satisfaction of the bond :- Held, that the daughter must elect to claim under the will, or under the bond : but Lord Hardwicke declared he would not extend the construction of devises in satisfaction further than they had already gone, and decreed the children born after the testator's death should have their share under the bond. Graves v. Boyle, 1 Atk. 509.

Where a particular thing is bequeathed in discharge of a demand, and the party insists on it, he must waive, not only that thing, but all benefit claimed under the will. 1b.

A., on the marriage of his daughter B., in 1794, granted to trustees an annuity of 1001, out of part of the lands of C., in trust for her husband for life, and after his death for B. for life, in case she survived her husband, and after death of the survivor, for the children of the marriage, in such shares as the parents, &c. In January. 1813, A. made his will, and after minutely specifying his property and the head rents and profit rents, he devised the same to trustees, upon the trusts thereinafter mentioned, and none other, and after payment of the head rents payable thereout to apply same to the trusts. thereinafter mentioned; he then directed them to pay 100%, a year to his wife, and subject thereto, he gave B, an annuity of 50%, a year for life, and on the decease of his wife, a further annuity of 50%, a year, "the two annuities to B. for her separate use, free from the control of her husband"; and subject to the head rents, and to the two annuities to his wife and daughter, he disposed of the rest of his property without making any allusion to the charge upon it under the deed of 1794: he died, leaving B, and her husband surviving; the latter having died, and the person entitled to some of the lands charged with the two annuities having refused to continue to pay both, she filed a bill to raise the arrears:—Held, that she was bound to elect. Graham v. Thynne, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 402,

A child entitled by his father's marriage articles to a share of his father's personal estate, has a legacy given him by the will of his father; if he will have the legacy, he must waive the benefit of the articles. Herne v. Herne, 2 Vern. 555.

Two Instruments.]—Deed poll not delivered, but operating at the death of a grantor, and a bond given in favour of a natural daughter; she was put to her election. Johnson v. Smith, 1 Ves. Sen. 314.

Settlement and Will.]-Case as to election between will and settlement on the construction prefer any son to the hunds, he devised the same of will. Ranciffe (Lord) v. Parkyns, 6 Dow, M. 251 : 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 116.

In a case both of election and satisfaction by will of parent, as to two subjects of claim by his younger children under a settlement, a case of election was raised as to a third subject, stock vested in trustees, upon construction of will. Pole v. Somers (Lord), 6 Ves. 309.

A husband, on first marriage covenanted that one-half of whatsoever substance he should be seised or possessed of at his death, whether in fee of otherwise, should immediately become the property of the children of that marriage. A deed executed after his second marriage, conveying part of his property to the use of himself for life, remainder to his wife and children of his second marriage, was set aside as a fraud on the children claiming under the covenant. A child claiming a portion under the first settlement, and a legacy under father's will, put to her election. Bradish v. Bradish, 2 Ball & B. 479;

Gift of Property previously settled by Donor. I-A. by his marriage settlement conveyed certain real and personal property, and all the property of which he was then or might die seised or possessed, to trustees on trust, in case his intended wife should survive him, to raise a ans interacts whe should survive min, o ruse a sum of money for her. He bequesthed a considerable portion of the real and personal property, specifically mentioned in his settlement, to his wife, for life, with remainders over. He directed other portions of his property to be sold, and the proceeds invested for the benefit of his wife for life, with remainders over. He died, leaving his wife surviving :—Held, that she was bound to elect between the money provided by the settlement and the benefits conferred by the will. Heazle v. Fitzmaurice, 13 Ir. Ch. R. 481.

A father on the marriage of his daughter, covenanted that, immediately after his death, a share, which in the event became one-third, his real and personal estate should be settled for the benefit of the daughter, her husband, and their children, in equal shares. One of the four children of the marriage, a daughter, died in the settlor's lifetime, leaving a linsband, who also died in the settlor's lifetime, and two infant children, who survived the settlor. The settlor made a will whereby, after directing payment of his debts, he disposed of personal chattels, gave legacies, and amongst others, a legacy of 4,500%, and part of the residue of his estate, to his nephews and nieces, and his said two infant great-grandchildren in equal shares :- Held, that the liability under the covenant was not a debt to be paid before the division of the residue, and that the infants were bound to elect between the benefits under the settlement and under the will. Bennett v. Houldsworth, 46 L. J., Ch. 646; 6 Ch. D. 671; 36 L. T. 648.

A., by his marriage settlement, covenanted that he would, by will, or otherwise, settle all the real and personal estates which he should die seised or possessed of, so that the same might be enjoyed by his wife for life, in case she should survive him; and after the death of the survivor, by all their children equally. Some of the children died in the lifetime of A. and his wife :- Held, that under the covenant, all the children became entitled to vested interests on their coming into existence, and that A. (who, as administrator to some of his deceased children, had become 149—H. L. (E.) And see Minchin v. Gabbett, entitled to their shares of his personal estate) [1896] I Ir. R. I; and Weall v. Rice, 3 Russ, & having by his will given both his real and personal estates to the same persons, some of whom exclusively claimed the real estates under the eovement, a case of election arose. Nayler v. Wetherell, 4 Sim, 114; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 125.

A testator gave his real and personal estate to trustees on trust out of the income to pay an annuity of 500/, a year to his widow for life or widowhood, for the maintenance of herself and his children, and to invest the surplus; and after her death or marriage again, upon trust to apply the income for the maintenance and advancement of such of his children as should be under twenty-one; and when the youngest should attain that age, mon trust to distribute all his property equally between his children, except so much as would secure to his wife, if then alive and married again, an annuity of 100%, a year for life; and in case of the death of any of his children, leaving lawful issue, he directed that their shares should go to their children. After the will, the testator, on the marriage of one of his daughters, settled 2,000%, for the benefit of herself, her husband, and her children :-- Held, that the daughter must elect whether to take under the will or the settlement, Beckton v. Barton, 28 L. J., Ch. 678; 5 dur. (N.S.) 349.

In 1790, upon the marriage of A. B., lands were settled to the use of A. B. for life, remainder to trustees for five hundred years, remainder to issue male of A. B. The trusts of the term were to raise, in the event of there being two or more daughters and no issue male, 6,000%, for the portions of such daughters, to be paid in such shares as A. B. should appoint; and if no appointment, share and share alike. The settlement provided, that if A. B. should advance any of the daughters in his lifetime, such advancement should, according to its amount, be deemed a satisfaction of the portion, unless A. B. should, by writing under his hand, declare the contrary, There were issue of the marriage three daughters only,-E., S. and I. In 1813 A. B. contracted to sell the estates; and to protect the purchaser against the contingency of there being issue male, 71,000%, of the purchase money was permitted to remain a charge upon the lands. In 1821 A. B., on the marriage of his daughter, E., assigned 20,000/, part of the unpaid purchase money, to the trustees of the settlement as her portion, not to be paid, however, until his death. In 1826, on the marriage of S., A. B. covenanted that he would appoint and assure that 20,000%. part of his personal estate, should, within three months after his death, be transferred to the trustees of the settlement. In 1886 A. B., by his will, directed that in performance of this cove-nant 20,000% should be paid to the trustees of the settlement, out of the unpaid purchasemoney, and in case that should prove deficient, then out of his residuary personal estate; and he bequeathed to his executors 20,000/., upon trust to pay the interest thereof to I., who was unmarried, for her separate use during her life, &c. ; -Held, that I, was bound to elect between the will and under the settlement of 1790, and that, taking the latter, she was entitled to 6,000l. Brownlow v. Meath (Earl), 2 Jr. & Wal. 674; Ir. R. 2 Eq. 383.

By marriage settlement 1,000%, was to be laid ont to the use of the wife for life, with remainder in case she should survive to her; and if the husband should survive, then to such uses as the wife should appoint; in default of appointment, to such person as the same would have gone unto | prejudice of their father's interest therein under by the Statute of Distribution, in case the wife the settlement; but that, before the indorsement had died unmarried. She died without appointment, leaving a daughter. The father gave the election, and he had not lost such right by daughter a real estate in fee, in performance of being a party to the indorsement. Seton v. the covenant; this was a case of election, but the Smith, 11 Sim. 59. daughter electing to take under the will took the personalty as next of kin. Houre v. Barnes, 3 Bro. C. C. 316.

Testator devised to trustees to uses, under which his daughter was tenant for life, and directed that annuitants, under his will, should take in satisfaction of all claims upon him. The daughter had a claim of 10,000%, under the marriage settlement; she must elect between the two. Macnamara v. Jones, 1 Bro. C. C. 481.

By the testator's marriage settlement 1,000l. was secured for his wife for life, with remainder to their issue. The plaintiff was the only issue. By his will be gave the interest of 2,000%, to his wife, expressly in addition to her claims under the settlement, and 5,000% to the plaintiff (without making any reference to the settlement) on her attaining twenty-one or marriage :-Held, she could not claim both sums, but must elect between the settlement and will. O'Neil v. Hamill, Beat. 618.

A man, on his marriage, covenanted to purchase and settle lands of 400%, a year to the use of himself for life; then to his wife for life; remainder to the heirs of their bodies; and if he died before a settlement the wife might elect, either to have the 400l, a year, or 3,000l, in money in lieu of dower and thirds. The husband died before a settlement made. On a bill by the creditors, the wife by answer elected the 3,000%, and the children insisted on a settlement, according to the articles, expectant on their mother's death, by which means all the assets would be exhausted. Decreed a settlement to be made on the wife and children notwithstanding the election. Hancock v. Hancock, 6 Vern. 605.

A sum of 10,000%, consols was held in trust for two sisters for life, and after their deaths, twothirds of the capital, in trust for their brother, and one-third in trust for the two sisters. The brother bequeathed "the whole of his property" to trustees, as to part, upon certain trusts, for his sisters, and he afterwards bequeathed "the property, including the 10,000%, trust-money," to other parties :- Held, that the sisters must be put to their election between the interests under the will and their interest in the 10,000l. Swan v. Holmes, 19 Benv. 471.

- Waiver of Right to put to Election-Delay-Act done alio intuitu. ]-An unmarried lady being entitled to 5,000%, charged upon real estate of which she was tenant for life, with remainder to her children in tail, and being remainder to her children absolutely, by her marriage settlement released the real estate from the 5,000%, and, supposing the stock was her absolute property, settled it on her husband for life, with remainder to her children. After the marriage, the parties to the settlement, having discovered the mistake as to the stock, made an indorsement on the settlement that henceforth the stock should be held by the original trustees thereof (in whose name it was still standing), upon the trusts to which it was subject before and at the date of the settlement :- Held, that the children could not claim the benefit of the A testator being absolute owner of copyholds, of

6. ELECTION BY ISSUE IN TAIL.

General and Particular Intention.]-By a settlement made in 1842 on the marriage of a female infant, the husband and wife covenanted, as soon as the wife attained 21 to convey real property to which she was entitled as tenant in tail, and personal property belonging to her, to trustees upon trust, after the death of the wife, for their children as they should by deed appoint, and in default of appointment, as the survivor should by deed with or without power of revocation and new appointment, or by will, appoint, and in default of appointment upon trust for the children equally; and the husband assigned a policy on his own life to be held upon the same trusts. The wife died in 1857 without the joint power of appointment being exercised and without barring the entail, leaving five children her surviving, and the eldest son entered into possession of the real estate as tenant in tail. In 1864 the husband by deed appointed the trust property other than the real estate to his four younger children, reserving to himself a power of revocation and new appointment. In pursuance of this appointment, the whole trust property except the policy moneys was divided. In 1869 the husband by will, reciting the power contained in the marriage settlement, appointed certain specific moneys to his eldest son and three of his younger children. In 1878 by deed, reciting the deed of 1864, and the division of the property therein, and that the policy moneys alone remained subject to that settlement, the husband revoked the deed of 1864, and applied the policy moneys in equal fifths between his four surviving children, including the eldest son, and the issue of a deceased child, and reserving to himself a power of revocation. The husband died in 1888 :—Held, that the will did not operate by virtue of s. 24 of the Wills Act, to revoke the deed of 1878; that the will remained in force as to the share which the husband by the deed of 1878, purported to appoint to the issue of his deceased child; that the eldest son was not bound to elect between the real estate and the benefits derived under the deed of 1878, but that he was bound to elect between the real estate and the benefits derived under the will. Wells, In re, Hardisty v. Wells, 58 L. J., Ch. 835; 42 Ch. D. 646; 61 L. T. 588; 38 W. R. 229.

Copyholds-Estate Tail not Barred. ]-Where entitled also to a sum of stock for her life, with a testator, acting upon the belief that he had barred his estate tail in his copyhold lands, charged all his real estate with the payment of an annuity to his customary heir in tail, and devised both his freehold and copyhold lands, which were inseparably intermingled, to third persons:—Held, that the heir in tail must elect between the copyholds and the annuity under the will. Honywood v. Forster, 30 Beav. 14; 30 L. J. Ch. 930; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1264; 4 L. T. 785; 9 W. R. 855.

- Equitable Estate Tail-General Devise. ]release of the 5,000L, and also the stock, to the which he had been admitted tenant, and having the legal fee of other copyholds holden of the same manor, to which he had not been admitted, but subject to trusts under which he was, in equity only, tenant for life, with remainder to his son in tall, remainder to himself in fee, surrendered to the use of his will all his copyholds holden of the manor, or which he was seised of, or entitled to; he was subsequently admitted tenant of all the copyholds subject to the trust, except the moiety of one tenement, and afterwards devised all his hereditaments, freehold and copyhold, to trustees upon trust for his son for life, with remainder over :—Held, that the surrender and the will passed both the legal and beneficial interest in all the copyholds upon which the surrender operated, including those of which the devisor was in equity only tenant for life, and that the son must elect between the general devise and the equitable estate tail, which he took under the old trusts, to which some of the copyholds were subject. Abdy v. Gordon, 3 Russ. 278.

Devise of Manors in Fee. ]-A., at the date of 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1271. his will, was seised in fee of the manor of G., and was tenant for life, under his father's will, of the mansion-house of C. and the manor of W., with an ultimate reversion in fee after life estates and estates tail. He devised the mansion-house. of C. and the manors of G. and W. to C. for life, with remainders over. The limitations of the will corresponded in a great measure to those of the father's will. The will gave the tenants under the father's will, powers of jointuring, to be capable of being exercised as they should come into possession of the estates under the limitations in the testator's will:-Held, that it was the intention of the testator to dispose not only of his reversion in the mansion-house of C., and manor of W., but to deal with the present interest in them; and that C., who had become absolutely entitled to those properties M. & G. 641; 26 L. J., Ch. 218; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 74: 5 W. R. 129.

Case of election under will of tenant in tail assuming to devise certain manors in fee. Woodroffe v. Daniell, 7 Jur. 959.

Devise of Estate subject to a Charge, |-- Under the will of S., several estates, including H.'s farm, stood limited to W. for life, remainder to his issue in tail, remainder to J. for life, remainder to trustees for one thousand years, remainder to J.'s issue in tail. The trust of the term was, upon the decease of the survivor of W. and J., and the failure of issue of W., to raise 10,000%, for the children of J. and C., other than that one entitled to the first estate of inheritance. W. never had a child, but J. and C. had each several. J., in the lifetime of W., made his will, by which he devised unto his eldest son, S., absolutely, real estates, his own property, and also H.'s farm, which he described as "all that his messnage or tenement, farm, and lands, called H.'s farm," and he made bequests to all his other children, greater in value to each than their shares in the 10,000l :- Held, that no case of election was raised against the younger children charge. Stephens v. Stephens or Stone, 1 De G. and H., or E. and his eldest son. Lorton v. & J. 62; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 525; 5 W. R. 416, 540. Kingston (Eurl), 5 Cl. & F. 269.

Devise of Reversionary Interest charged with Annuity. - Devise of Blackacre to the defendant for life, conditional upon his confirming the disposition in the will of property thereinafter devised of testator's late brother U., followed by a residuary devise of all the manors and hereditaments being freehold of inheritance of or to which testator was then, or at his death should be, seised or entitled at law or in equity for any devisable estate or interest, including lands known as duchy lands; as to Whitenere and two other estates, to uses for securing an annuity; and as to all the same manors and hereditaments, subject, as to the three last-mentioned estates, to the uses thereinbefore limited to use of the plaintiff for life :-Held, that the defendant must elect between Blackaere and certain duchy bands of which Whiteaere was one, and which stood limited to U. for life, with remainder to the defendant for life, with remainders over for life, and in tail with ultimate remainder to the testator in fee, the testator having no other duchy lands. Ustiche v. Peters, 4 K. & J. 437;

Queere, whether, if Whiteacre had not been mentioned a case of election would have been avoided, upon the ground that the testator contemplated the possibility of acquiring other duchy lands between the date of his will and his death. Ib.

Quære, whether, where a testator disposes of all property of a particular character of which of the father's will. The will gave the tenants he has now, or may hereafter have power to for life, several of whom were tenants for life dispose, he is, in order to avoid a case of election, to be taken as providing for the case of his buying some of that class of property. Ib.

H. K., being in 1722 in possession of estates, A. and B., under a limitation in a deed, dated in 1689, to him for ninety-nine years, remainder to his first and other sons, in tail male, in strict settlement, with similar limitations to his brother R. K. and his issue, remainder to his sisters in tail, covenanted with R. K., the sisters, and also under the will of the testator's father, was put the trustees to preserve, &c., to levy fines and to his election. Wintour v. Clifton, 8 De G. suffer recoveries (levied and suffered accordingly). to the use as to estate A, of R. K, in fee, and as to estate B. to trustees for sale, but if not sold (as happened) to the use of H. K. for life, remainder to his first, &c., sons in strict settlement, to which last uses estate A, also devolved at R. K.'s death in 1725, by virtue of a deed executed by him in 1724. H. K. afterwards, claiming to be seised in fee of both estates, devised them to his younger sons E. and H. in moieties for their respective lives, remainder to their first, &c., sons respectively, in tall male.

After H. K.'s death in 1730, R., his eldest son, entered into possession of both estates, and suffered recoveries. On his death, without issue, in 1755, E., his brother and heir, and H. claiming as his devisee, instituted suits against each other. which they terminated by agreement, confirmed by act of parliament, securing to H. for life and to his issue both estates, whether H. K. had power to devise them or not, remainder to E, and his issue in tail, so far only as H. K. had power to devise them :- Held, that H. K. did not acquire the fee of the estates, and had no power to devise them; that R. acquired the fee and died so seised, and if he died intestate E. was entitled to the reversion in fee expectant on the estate vested of J., there being nothing in the will to show in H. by the agreement and act; and, that no that J. assumed to devise H.'s farm free from the case of election arose on H. K.'s will between E.

not disentailed. —The produce of an entailed testator having disposed of his whole estate property was settled on the parents, and aftermongst his children, what he gave them was wards on the children. As to part of the fund, the entail had not been barred :- Held, that the heir in tail (a son of the marriage), having accepted benefits under the settlement, must give effect to it as to the part not disentailed. Mosley v. Ward, 29 Beav, 407.

Two Documents treated as One Settlement. ]-Two ante-nuptial settlements of even date, one of realty and the other of personalty :-Held, to be one settlement for the purpose of putting to her election a person whose property was affected by one, and who claimed a benefit under the other : and the circumstance that her property so affected was a remainder in tail, which the settlor might have barred, was unsuccessfully relied upon in favour of a contrary view. Devise to Heir in tail.]—Heir put to election between estates devised to him and descended. the devisor having been tenant in tail of some, and tenant for life, with reversion in fee of others. Welby v. Welby, 2 V. & B. 187; 13 R. R. 58.

Tenant in tail of a rent-charge under settlement, being also devisee in strict settlement of v. Bunhury, 1 Ves. 514; 4 Bro. C. C. 21; 1 R. R. 111. But see Ayres v. Willis, 1 Ves. Sen.

Disposition conditional on Power to make it. -One devised to A, for life an estate which she wrongly supposed she had power to dispose of; she also gave a life interest in other estates to A. A. claimed the first estate under an old entail : Held, he is not put to his election. Cull v. Showell, Amb. 727.

Where A., tenant in tail, remainder to B., the wife of C. in tail, conceiving he had obtained a fee under a void execution of a power, granted leases, and then demised the estate to B. for life, remainder over, and gave B. and C. other benefits under his will, leaving D. residuary legatee. Upon a bill by D. to establish the will, B. elected to take her estate in tail, in opposition to the will, which the master reported to be for her benefit; and it was decreed to her accordingly. Durlington (Earl) v. Pulteney, 2 Ves. J. 544; 3 Ves. 384: 3 R. R. 8.

Condition Precedent.]—C., having an estate for life, under the will of S., with remainder in tail to H., devised his own estate, together with the estate under the will, to trustees to uses, by which the tenant in tail would take only a life estate ; but provided that his own estate should not be conveyed until the tenant in tail should suffer a recovery, and bar the remainders in the former will. H. did acts of ownership, and prepared for, but never suffered the recovery, and died. This was not a case of election, but a condition precedent, which the tenant in tail not having performed, C.'s own estate never vested, and the estate of S. was not affected by it. Roundel v. Currer, 2 Bro. C. C. 67.

Implied Condition. ]-A. having two daughters, B. and C., devised fee-simple lands to B., and lands settled upon him in tail to C. ; if B. elnimed a share of the entailed lands under the settle- heir :-Held, that D, had elected to take under

A. seised in tail of freeholds, and in fee of copyholds, devised the copyholds to defendant, who was entitled to the remainder of freeholds, and devised the freehold to plaintiff; defendant apprehending that A, had suffered a recovery, agreed with plaintiff, without consideration, that each should enjoy according to the will; but discovering afterwards that no recovery had been suffered, he sued for the freeholds. Plaintiff brought his bill to establish the agreement, and it was decreed to him accordingly. Frunk v. Frank, 1 Ch. Ca. 84. But see Leonard v. Leonard, 2 Ball & B. 183.

Feme Covert.] — Feme covert must elect between annuity by will to her separate use for life, charged upon a devised estate, and a title paramount to part of the same estates in tail, paramount to part of the same estates in thill.

7. ELECTION BY HEIR.

Unattested Will.]—Will purporting to give a real estate to A., but not executed agreeably to the statute, giving (inter alia) a contingent legacy to an infant (who became the testator's heir-at-law), and directing, that if any who received benefit by the will should dispute any part of it, they should forfeit all claim under it : -Held, that the infant heir should elect when he came of age; in the meanwhile A., the intended devisee, was allowed to be in possession of the estate, though restrained from committing waste, and subject to account; as to which his share of the personal estate was declared liable to make satisfaction. Boughton v. Boughton, 2 Ves, Sen, 12. S. P., Whistler v. Webster, 2 Ves, 371: 2 R. R. 260. And see Hearle v. Greenbank, 3 Atk. 715.

Heir put to an election under a will not duly attested. Hume v. Rundell, 2 Sim. & S. 174.

Will not duly executed according to statute had no operation, even to raise an election against person taking personal estate, unless an express condition was annexed. Ilchester (Earl), Ex parte, 7 Ves. 372; 6 R. R. 138. S. P., Sheddon v. Goodrich, 8 Ves. 481. Gardiner v. Fell, 1 J. & W. 22 : 2 Wils, 32 : 20 R. R. 208.

A will, attested by two witnesses, contained a devise of freeholds in England to D. (the testator's son and heir) for life, with remainder to trustees, and a devise to them of estates in St. Kitts, upon trust to sell and invest the proceeds in estates in England, to be held upon the same trusts. D. was in possession of the English, and he received the rents of the St. Kitts' estates during his life; and, with his concurrence, the trustees made efforts—though ineffectual—to sell the latter. After the death of D., intestate, the trustees contracted to sell one of the St. Kitts' estates, but the purchaser refused to complete, on the ground that the will was inoperative in the island, and that the estates descended upon the the will, and that his infant heir was bound by decease to trustees upon certain trusts. He then his acts, and was a trustee under the act of 1850 devised an estate, called the Tempo estate, to his v. Maitland; L. B. 2 Eq. 834; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 14 L. T. 853; 14 W. R. 958.

A testator gave all he should leave in the world to trustees to pay his debts and legacies, among which was 1,000l. to his brother and heir, and as to the residue in trust for natural children. He had a real estate in Nova Scotia, but as there was no witness to his will, it descended to his heir. Held, that, supposing the will would have passed real estate if attested in due form (which was doubted), the brother was entitled to his legacy, and also to the real estate. Furquharson v. Colville (Lord), Romilly's Notes of Cases, 129.

Invalid Devise of Land-Bequest of Shares. ]-A married woman who was entitled to shares in a colliery for life, for her separate use, with a power of appointment by will, and also to real estate in fee simple, not for her separate use, by will in February, 1880, appointed her shares in favour of her heir and other children, and pur-ported to devise the real estate away from the heir. She died in June, 1880, leaving her husband surviving :- Held, that, the will being void as to the real estate, the heir was not put to his election. De Burgh Lawson, In re. De Burgh Lawson v. De Burgh Lawson, 55 L. J., Ch. 46; 53 L. T. 522; 34 W. R. 39.

Devise to Heir before the Inheritance Act. ]-Heir put to election between estates devised to him and descended, the devisor having been tenant in tail of some, and tenant for life, with reversion in fee, of others. Welly v. Welby, 2 V. & B. 187; 13 R. R. 58. And see Schroder v. Schroder, infra.

After-acquired Lands. A devise by a will made before 1837 (1 Vict. c. 26, ss. 24, 34), of all the real estates of which the testator then was or at the time of his death should be seised. to his heir-at-law, if the testator acquired real estates subsequent to the date of his will, but the 578; 23 L. So, also, would such a devise by a testator, who died before 1834 (3 & 4 Will, 4, c. 106, s. 3), from the mere intention thereby shewn to give the heir property under the will, notwithstanding that he would take nothing in fact under the will, but by his better title as heir. Ib.

In such a case the testator, subsequently to the making of his will, contracted to buy a certain freehold estate, and then made a codicil directing the executors and trustees of his will to complete the purchase, and hold the estate upon the trusts of the will which were partly in favour of the heir, and then the testator took a conveyance of the same estate to uses to bar dower in his own favour :- Held, that the devise by the codicil was revoked, and that the heir must elect. Ib.

A testator devised all his real estates, of which for the person claiming under the will. Dewar daughter (who was his heiress-at-law), for life, with remainders over; and continued as follows: "I leave and bequeath the rest, residue and remainder of my properties, both freehold and personal, of whatsoever nature or kind I may die possessed of, to A. B.," &c. The testator, after the date of his will, acquired other freehold estates, and by two deeds executed after his will, charged four denominations of the Tempo estate with annuities, and limited such denominations to trustees, taking back therein an estate in fee simple to himself, subject to the annuities, whereby there was a revocation in law of the will as to those denominations. The heiress having elected to take against the will, her life interest in the Tempo estate became liable for compensation to the disappointed devisees :-Held, that neither the persons to whom estates were limited by the will in remainder in the Tempo estate, nor the residuary devisees in respect of the after-acquired estates, were entitled to compensation out of the life interest of the heiress in the Tempo estate. Tennant v. Tennant, Ll. & G. t. Plank, 516.

Semble, that the doctrine of election ought not to be applied to the case of revocation by a recovery merely. 1b.

Will directing, that in case the testator should enter into contracts for the purchase of hands, and die before the conveyance, such contracts should be carried into execution, and the money paid out of his personal estate, and the conveyance to his trustees, the heirs, &c., to the uses of his will; the heir having interest bequeathed to him put to election. Thellusson v. Woodford, 13 Ves. 209; 9 R. R. 175. Affrmed nom. Rendlesham v. Woodford, 1 Dow, 249; 14 R. R. 62.

The only instances of limiting the principle of election were an attempt to devise by a will not duly executed, or an attempt to devise by an infant, Ib.

was revoked as to an estate purchased before the will by the conveyancer thereof, after the date of the will to the usual uses to bar dower :-- Held, that the testator's heir (who was entitled to benefits under the will) was not bound to elect. Plowden v. Hyde, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 171; 2 De G. M. & G. 684; 21 L. J., Ch. 796; 16 Jur. 512.

Devisable Interest.]—A testator seised in fee of copyholds devised them to his wife for life; and he directed his executors (without giving them any estate) after her death to sell the copyholds, and divide the proceeds. The testator's widow was admitted for life, and after her death the executors sold the estate, and executed a bargain and sale to a purchaser, who, without having been admitted, made his will, and devised the estate to his wife; he was subsequently admitted and died. The wife under her husband's will had also entered upon freehold lands, purchased after the date of the will:—Held, that they passed to the heir, and that he was not bound to elect between them and the benetits given by the wife's will. Seaman v. Woods, 24 Benv. 372; 27 L. J., Ch. 538; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 725.

A. devised his T. estate to D., charged with a legacy to B., and his M. estate to U. (who was A,'s heir) for life; remainder to the trustees of a he should be possessed or entitled to at his college. C. filed a bill impeaching the will. A compromise was agreed upon with the college, tenant divested himself of the legal estate, and the effect of which would be to confirm to C. the greater portion of the M. estate; but before it was completed C. died, having devised the estate as her own to B., and the T. estate to D. B. went into possession under C.'s will. After C.'s death the compromise was completed:—Held, that C.'s will raised a case of election against B., and that he could not claim the legacy under the will of A., having elected to take the M. estate under the will of C. Sudier v. Butler, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 415.

C. devised the T. estate as "all my real estates, &c., in the county of T." :-Held, that the T. estate was devised free from the legacy charged on it by the will of A. Ib.

Unsurrendered Copyholds - Devise prior to 55 Geo. 3, c. 192.]—Devise in general terms, residue of real and personal property to nephews and nieces, not being for creditors, wife or children, did not raise a case of election against the customary heir, or for supplying the want of surrender of copyholds contignous and intermixed with the freeholds, Judd v. Pratt. 15 Ves. 390.

Under similar circumstances the court would not put the heir to election, though the devise was to a younger child. Hodgson v. Merest, 9 Price, 556.

Where a copyhold was devised, but was not surrendered, and the heir had a legacy and an interest in other estates devised to him he was entitled to both. Jeffreys v. Duhamel, Romilly's Notes of Cases, 129. Contra, Blunt v. Clitherow, 10 Ves. 589. Pettiward v. Prescott, 7 Ves. 541.

Devise of all freeholds and copyholds; the copyholds were surrendered to the use of the will, but the testatrix afterwards exchanged part for other copyholds, which were not surrendered. The heir claiming beneficially surrendered. The neir claiming beneficiary under the will was put to election. Frank v. Standish (Lady), 15 Ves. 391, n.

Testator taking notice that he had not surrendered copyholds which he devised, but directing his son to convey them, and devising to him other estates, though the copyholds were not devisable by custom, the surrenders decreed to be made. Wardell v. Wardell, 3 Bro. C. C. 116.

Testator devised the residue of his estates, "the copyhold part thereof having been previously surrendered to the use of my will," upon trusts in favour of his wife and children; the only trust for his eldest son and heir was an annuity of 300l. for life, remainder to his wife and children. The testator never having surrendered his copyhold, it was held a mistaken description, the copyhold being intended to pass; and, the annuity being much more valuable, heir was decreed to elect, and was not bound by receiving half a year's payment of the annuity while abroad. Lumbold v. Rumbold, 3 Ves. 65. Testator, possessed of freehold and copyhold not surrendered, of which latter his mansionhouse was part, devised all his real and personal estate to his wife for life, remainder to his heirat-law :-Held, from an expression in his will, "if she should think proper to reside at his said mansion-house," that the testator intended to devise his copyhold, and that the heir therefore ought to elect. Unett v. Wilhes, 2 Eden, 187; Amb. 480.

In a manor where there was no custom of surrendering to the uses of the will, but the able bond :-Held, that the residuary estate was by surrender vested it in a trustee, who subscribed a memorandum or defeasance that the surrender was to the uses of the surrenderor's will. The father and maternal grandfather of the testator R. N., being both copyholders, had respectively surrendered their copyholds to the other, who had subscribed the usual defeasance. The legal estate in both descended to the testator. The testator's maternal grandfather devised the beneficial interest in his copyholds to trustees upon trust for the testator R. N.: -Held, that the equitable interest had merged in the legal estate, in the testator, and could not be devised by him according to the custom of the manor; that his widow was entitled to freebench, and the heirs subject thereto, to the inheritance: but they, taking benefits under the will, were bound to elect. Nicholson v. Nicholson, Tam. 319.

Devise to Heir subject to Trust. ]-Devise to a son, recommending him to continue his consins as tenants of their respective farms, as theretofore, and so long as they continued to manage the same in a husbandlike manner, and to duly pay their rents. A trust for the cousins who had been tenants at will, and the son being the heir was put to his election. As to the effect of election against the will, whether compensation or forfeiture, quere. Tiblits v. Tiblits, 19 Ves. 656. Affirmed Jacob, 317; 23 R. R. 79.

Heir by Will directed to elect. |-- Where, by will, an heir was directed to elect, and trustees had power to appoint, and from circumstances of case, if the heir had been held to have elected at all, it would have been in a manner contrary to the prayers of bills filed to compel him, and the appointments made by trustees, the court would ouly refer it to the master to compel him to elect generally. Tucker v. Sanger, McCle. 439; 13 Price, 607.

Devise of Scotch Heritable Property. ] - A testator devised "all the residue of my real estate situate in any part of the United Kingdom or elsewhere." He had real estate as well in Scotland as in England :- Held, that the heirat-law taking the Scotch lands by descent was put to his election. Orrell v. Orrell, 40 L. J., Ch. 539; L. R. 6 Ch. 302; 24 L. T. 245; 19 W. R. 370.

A testator, domiciled in England and entitled to heritable bonds affecting lands in Scotland, made a will according to the English law, whereby he gave to trustees all his real and personal estate upon trust for his wife and all his children. The will was inoperative to pass the heritable bonds, for want of the word "dispone" in the devise, and of a proper attestation clause according to Scotch law:—Held, that the heir-at-law was not put to his election. Maxwell v. Maxwell, 2 De G. M. & G. 705; 22 L. J., Ch. 43; 16 Jur. 982. And see Dundas v. Dundas, 2 Dow & Cl, 349-H. L. (Sc.)

A domiciled Englishman executed a trust disposition and settlement in the Scotch form, of an estate in Scotland. He then made an English will, declaring that it should not affect the previous settlement of his Scotch estate, and charged his residuary real and personal estate with payment of his debts. He subsequently charged the Scotch estate with 14,000l., by a heritof the Scotch estate. After the date of his willthe testator purchased other freehold property in Scotland, which passed by intestacy to his heir: Held, that the heir was not bound to elect, but had the same right to that property which he would have had if there had been no will, Max-

A Scotchman, domiciled in England, devised the residue of his real, personal, and mixed estates whatsoever and wheresoever, upon trust for his children in certain shares. One of the children, being the heir-at-law of the testator, became entitled, according to the law of Scot land, to a heritable bond made by a debtor of the testator after the will, and given as a security for a debt which was owing to him when the will was made :-- Held, that the heir was not a trustee of the bond for the executors of the testator, and that he was not bound to elect. Allen v. Anderson, 5 Hare, 163; 15 L. J., Ch. 178; 10 Jur. 196.

An heir is not put to his election between a Scotch estate and benefits given to him by a will, by mere general expressions, especially if the uses of the will are not applicable to Scotch property. A testator, by a codicil, reciting that he had purchased certain freeholds since his will, devised them to trustees upon the trusts of his will, and directed that if any hereditaments purchased by him should be conveyed after the date and publishing thereof, his heir-at-law or other real representatives and any other person in whom the same should be vested, should upon his decease assure the same to his trustees upon the trusts of his will. He purchased other estates; a case of election was not raised against the heir taking benefits under the will. Johnson v. Telford, 1 Russ. & M. 244; 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 94.

Heir of heritable property in Scotland, being legatee of personal property in England, put to Brodie v. Barry, 2 V. & B. 127; his election. 13 R. R. 87.

An heir of heritable property in Scotland, who was also the devisee of real estate in Ireland. under a will executed by the testator when domiciled in Ireland, and attested according to the law of this country, is bound to elect,

M' Call v. M' Call, 1 Dr. 283. The Scotch heir of cutail, whether or not he be also heir of line, and whether the entail were created by the last holder, or by a more remote ancestor, must, unless he take by special and exclusive destination (from the last holder). collate such entailed estate before he is admitted to a share of the personalty. ante-nuptial settlement, for the settlement by the husband and wife of the wife's after-acquired property, is a covenant by the wife as well as by the husband, whether the wife is a minor or of full age. Smith, v. Lucas, 18 Ch. D. 531; 45 L. T. 460; 30 W. B. 451.

If the wife is a minor, and the covenant is for her benefit, it is voidable only and not void, and is binding upon all property coming to her during the coverture for her separate use, without a restraint on anticipation, until she avoids or disaffirms the covenant as to such property; for she may, after attaining twentyone, and during the coverture, elect whether the covenant shall be binding on her separate estate or not, such right of election being a necessary consequence of a married woman's power to dispose of, without her husband's consent, property settled to her separate use : but-inasmuch as a contract by a married woman, while under coverture, affecting her separate property binds only her then-existing separate property binds only ner then-existing separate property, and not separate property which she may thereafter acquire (Pike v. Fitzgilban, 50 L. J.; Ch. 894; 17 Ch. D. 454; 44 L. T. 562; 29 W. R. 551-C. A.)-the wife, in electing to confirm the covenant, thereby binds only that separate property to which she is entitled at the date of the confirmation, and not that to which she may subsequently become entitled during the coverture. Semble, the doctrine of election or compensation does not apply in the case of a married woman entitled for her not bound, on taking a bequest for her separate separate use with a restraint on anticipation, use, to make compensation to her husband and Willoughby v. T. the intention to settle the same, it was agreed and declared between the parties thereto, and the husband covenanted with the trustees, that the husband and wife and all other necessary parties would, as soon as the wife attained twenty-one, convey the share to the trustees upon trust for the wife during her life for her separate use without power of anticipation, and after her death for the husband till bankraptey or alienation, with remainder for the issue of the And it was further agreed and declared that if the wife then was, or if at any time or times during the coverture she or her husband in her right should become seised or possessed of or entitled to any real or personal property for any estate or interest whatsoever, then and in every such case the husband and wife and all other necessary parties should assure the same to the trustees upon the trusts thereinbefore declared. The settlement contained a power for the trustees at the request of the wife, to lend any of the trust funds to the husband on his personal security. The wife attnined twenty-one in 1857, and in 1858 she and her husband, in pursuance of the covenant in that behalf in the settlement, conveyed her share of her father's estate to the trustees of the settlement. In 1863, apon the death of a brother, the wife became entitled under his will to certain funds thereby bequeathed to her for her separate use. These funds, and also funds arising from her share of her father's estate, were, with the assent of the wife, paid to the trustees of the settlement and by them lent, at her request, to the husband on his personal scenrity. In 1880 mother to a sum of 4,000%, and a share of her residuary estate thereby bequeathed respectively to her for her separate use :-Held, that the wife could elect to retain the 4,000% and share of residue for her separate use unbound by the covenant for the settlement of her after-acquired property. Ib. And see Hamilton v. Hamilton, 61 L. Ante-nuptial Agreement to settle Wife's Property - Settlement executed by Husband alone. |-- A husband and wife had entered into an ante-nuptial agreement, which was signed by the husband only, for the settlement of the wife's property, part of which consisted of a reversionary chose in action which was not within Malins' Act. After the marriage the husband alone excented the settlement, which contained a covenant by the husband and wife to assign the wife's property to trustees upon trust for the wife for life, and after her death for such persons as she should by deed or will appoint. The wife, however, during coverture exercised the power of appointment given her in the settlement by mortgaging the reversionary chose in action for her own benefit : -Held that she had by her conduct elected to confirm the settlement, and, although a married woman, was bound by it; and that, therefore, the mortgage was valid, Scoton v. Scoton (57 L. J., Ch. 661; 13 App. Cas. 61; 58 L. T. 565; 36 W. R. 865—H. L. (E.)), is not inconsistent with, and does not overrule Barrow v. Barrow (4 K. & J. 409), and Wilder v. Pigott (22 Ch. D. husband and wife, or anything short of a 263). Greenhill v. North British and Mercantile commission, or as near thereto as possible. Insurance Co., [1893] 3 Ch. 474; 62 L. J., Ch. 918; Parsons v. Wife's Reversionary Property comprised in Post-nuptial Settlement.]—A lady, having an absolute interest in reversion in property under the marriage settlement of her parents, married hile an infant. After she came of age, post-nuptial settlement was executed, to while an infant, which she was a party, comprising her re-versionary interest, and also property of her father and her husband. The morriage was afterwards dissolved, and she then claimed the reversionary property independently of the settlement:—Held, that as it appeared from the settlement that her reversionary property formed part of the consideration for the settlement of the other property, she was put to her election whether to take under or against it. Codrington v. Codrington, 45 L. J., Ch. 660; L. R. 7 H. L. 854; 34 L. T. 221; 24 W. R. 648.

Inquiry directed. -A married woman cannot declare an election. An inquiry was therefore directed in the case of a married woman (one of two next of kin required to elect) for the purpose of ascertaining whether it was for her benefit and the benefit of her children to take under or against a will. Cooper v. Cooper, 44 L. J., Ch. 6; L. R. 7 H. L. 53; 30 L. T. 409; 22 W. R. 713. Prole v. Soudy, 2 Giff. 1; 29 L. J., Ch. 721;
 Jnr. (N.S.) 1382; 1 L. T. 309; 8 W. R. 131.

Where it is manifest that it is the interest of a feme covert to elect to keep a particular fund instead of taking another bequeathed to her, no inquiry will be directed as to which would be most for her benefit. Wilson v. Townshend (Lord), 2 Ves. 693 : 3 R. R. 31.

Possession taken by husband of estates to which his wife was entitled paramount the will will not prevent her electing to take under the will. Ib.

In some cases a wife shall not be put to elect at all, or her election shall be suspended. As where an infant widow, having a jointure. marries again without determining her election, and her husband enters on the settled estate, his entry shall bind both during the coverture. Harrey v. Ashley, 3 Atk. 617. And see 1 Swanst.

Election by Court. ]-By a settlement trustees were to invest certain moneys in the purchase of lands, and had power to resell; but it was declared that the lands should be considered as personalty. An estate, S., was accordingly bought, and on the marriage of E.—an infant, who was entitled to the lands-was treated as The marriage settlement was made under the direction of the court, and contained provisions for giving the husband a life estate in S, and in the wife's after-acquired lands. She inherited lands, and died leaving a daughter :-Held, that S, was to be considered as personalty; and that the court would elect for the daughter, whether to take the inherited lands against the settlement, or to take under the settlement. Ashburnham v. Ashburnham, 13 Jur. 1111.

Power of Attorney.]—Election to be made by feme covert resident abroad cannot be effectuated under a power of attorney from the husband and wife, or anything short of a Suit by Wife for specific Performance.] - A married woman can elect, so as to affect her she has so elected, the court can order a conveyance accordingly; the ground of such order being, that no married woman shall avail herself of fraud. Barrow v. Barrow, 4 K. & J. 409; 27 L. J., Ch. 678; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1049; 6 W. R. 714.

An intended husband covenanted to settle lands, of which the intended wife, then an infant, was tenant in tail, upon trusts for her separate use for life, remainder for himself for life, remainder for the children. The wife, on attaining twenty-one, filed a bill against her husband, and obtained a decree for specific performance of the covenant. The husband dving a month after the decree :- Held, upon petition by the children, that these acts on the part of the wife amounted to an election, and that she was bound by the decree, and she was ordered to settle the property accordingly.
But see Hamilton v. Hamilton, supra.

Separate Examination in Court. ] - The purchase-moneys of real estate to which a married woman was absolutely entitled, having been paid into courr by a railway company under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, s. 69, upon a petition by the owner and her husband for payment out to the latter :- Held, that the married woman might elect upon her separate examination in court to take the fund as personalty, and an order was, by her consent, made for payment out to her husband without a deed. Rahin's Estate, In re, 27 W. R. 705.

Reference to Arbitration. ]-Court would not permit reference to arbitration, one of the parties being stated to be a feme covert interested in real estate, nor even a reference to master whether it would be for her benefit, as in case of an infant, distinguishing the case of election mon the condition imposed. Davis v. Page, 9 Ves.

Suit to ascertain Value with view to Election. -A domiciled Scotchman by his will gave certain benefits to his wife, and she after his death filed a bill claiming her right by the law of Scotland to elect between such benefits and one-third of his movables, and her terce in his heritable estate, and praying that the value of the objects between which she had to elect should for the purpose of her election be ascertained by the court. The devisee of the Scotch real estate, who was also residuary legatee, and one of the executors, filed a cross bill praying for a general administration of the personalty :- Held, that under the circumstances the court had jurisdiction to direct such inquiries as might be necessary to guide the wife in exercising her right of election, and as far as possible to give effect to it. Danglas v. Danglas, 41 L.J., Ch. 74; L. R. 12 Eq. 617; 25 L. T. 530; 20 W. R. 55.

Reversionary Choses in Action.]-A married woman cannot, by election, part with her re-versionary choses in action. Williams v. Mayne, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 519; 16 W. R. 173.

Quere, can a married woman, entitled to a reversionary chose in action, elect to take a legacy against the will of her husband. Wall v. Wall, 15 Sim, 513; 16 L. J., Ch. 305; 11 Jur. 403.

Consent by Counsel to release Jointure. ]-The consent of a married woman by her counsel interest in real property, without deed acknowledged mader the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, and where for maintenance during the life of her husband, to release her jointure, and accept an allowance who was a lunatic, without prejudice to her right to dower:—Held, not to be binding upon her after his decease. Frank v. Frank, 3 Myl. & C. 171.

A feme covert is not competent, during the coverture, to elect between a jointure made to her after marriage and her dower at common law, Ib.

Equity to a Settlement-Waiver. - In 1866 A., a married woman, being one of the presumptive next of kin of a lunatic, in consideration of sums advanced to her husband, and of a covenant by C. to pay her, on the death of the lunatic, two sums of 400L and 500L, with interest on the former sum in the meantime, for her separate use, joined her husband in assigning her presumptive share of the lunatic's assets to C. The interest was paid until 1881, when the hunatic died; but C.'s assignee refused to pay the further interest.

A. was declared one of the next of kin in a suit to administer the lunatie's assets, and applied to the court for payment of the interest due on the 400%, and a portion of the principal. In 1883, A., being then administratrix of the lunatic, acknowledged the deed of 1866 before commismissioners. A part of the lunatic's assets had been lent on mortgage of real estate :- Held, that the deed of 1866 was void against A., and could not be confirmed by any act of hers, and that she had not elected to take under it, or waived her equity to a settlement; and that neither the fact of part of the assets being lent on mortgage, nor  $\Lambda$ 's being administratrix when it was made, gave the acknowledgment any legal validity. Druitt v. Willens, 23 L. R., Ir. 436. And see HUSBAND AND WIFE-INFANT.

11. COMPENSATION.

Nature of Right-When Complete. |- Election gives a right to compensation; assuming such compensation to be in the nature of a simple contract debt, the Statute of Limitations can only begin to run against it when the election has been made. Spread v. Margan, 11 H. L. Cas. 588; 6 N. R. 269; 13 L. T. 164.

Principle of election giving a right not the thing itself, but to compensation out of something else. Dashwood v. Peyton, 18 Ves, 49; 11 R. R. 145.

Effect of Election against Will. - The effect of election against a will is to give the property, which was devised to the party election, to the devisees disappointed by the election, and it never goes as if undisposed of by the will. Hamilton v. Jackson, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 195; 2 Jo. & Lat.

As to the effect of election against the will, whether compensation or forfeiture, quere. Tibbits v. Tibbits, 19 Ves. 656. Affirmed Jacob. 317; 23 R. R. 79.

Testator made provision for his wife, and gave money in trust for the separate use of a daughter, and after her death to divide the principal equally between her children and their issue at twenty one: if none such, to his son, whom he made residuary legatee: then, after similar provisions for his other children, he declared that the provision in the will for his wife and children was in satisfaction of all claims under his marriage articles; and if his wife and children, or either | disposition. Marris v. Burrows, 2 Atk, 627; 2 of them, should refuse the provisions made for them by the will, he revoked the legacy and becaust therein contained, and declared the same void as to such one or more of them who should refuse to execute a release and discharge as though he had died intestate. A child electing to take under the articles forfeited the life interest, which fell into the residue. Ward v. Baugh, 4 Ves. 623: 4 R. R. 307.

Election between Deed and Will. ]-Distinction, upon election, between a deed and a will ; whether in the latter case the principle is forfeiture or compensation only, quere; but upon election against a marriage settlement, as operating as a contract, an injunction was granted, on the principle of forfeiture. Green v. Green, 19 Ves. 665; 13 R. R. 277.

Ground of Election against Heir. ]-Ground of election against heir is not only an implied condition that he shall confirm the whole will, but also the intention in case the condition shall not be complied with, to give the disappointed devisees, out of the estate, over which the devisor had power, a benefit correspondent with that of which they are deprived by such noncompliance; and the construction is, accordingly, to the heir absolutely, on his confirming the will if not, in trust for the disappointed devisees as to so much of the estate given to him as shall be equal in value to the estate intended for them, Welby v. Welby, 2 V. & B. 190: 13 R. R. 58.

Two Funds. ]-A party bound to elect between two funds, having mortgaged one, elects the other; the former must be taken, subject to the mortgage, but shall be reimbursed by the latter. Rumbold v. Rumbold, 3 Ves. 65.

Tenant in Tail. ]-Tenant in tail of a rentcharge under settlement, being also devisee in strict settlement of the estate charged with it, put to election. Blake v. Bunbury, 1 Ves. 514; 4 Bro. C. C. 21; 1 R. R. 111.

Devisee cannot disappoint the will, even if it disposes of his property, but must either convey according to the devise, or renounce the benefit of it pro tanto; so if he is an incumbrancer upon estate directed by the will to go free from incumbrance, he must elect, but the intent must appear by plain declaration, or necessary inference. Ib.

A., tenant in tail, with power to lease, remainder to B., the wife of C., made leases exceeding his power; he devised some benefits to B.; but B. elected to take her estate tail in opposition to the will; after her death C. claimed as tenant by the curtesy, though he also derived and accepted benefits under testator's will; C. brought ejectments against the lessees :- Held, that the lessees could not raise any equity against C., holding as tenant of the curtesy under B.'s election of her estate tail: but their bill was retained that they might have satisfaction from testator's assets. Darlington (Earl) v. Pulteney, 2 Ves. 544; 3 Ves. 384; 3 R. R. S.

Freeman of London, ]-A freeman of London, by will, disposed of all his estate, as well the orphanage as the testamentary part. Where as one of his children, to one-sixth, and as heir some of the children elected to abide by the custom, and others to take by the will, their to three-sixths of his father's estates, devised all shares of the orphanage part did not accrue to his real estate for the benefit of his widow and that part, but went according to the father's children, and died shortly before his mother, A. :

Eq. Ca. Abr. 272, pl. 39.

After-acquired Estates. - A testator devised his real and freehold estates, of which he should be possessed or entitled to at his decease, to trustees upon certain trusts. He then devised an estate, called the Tempo estate, to his daughter, Letitia (who was his heiress-at-law), for life, with remainders over; and devised the residue of his property to A. B. After the date of his will, he acquired other freehold estates, and also by two deeds executed after his will charged four denominations of the Tempo estate with anumities, and for that purpose limited such denominations to trustees, taking back therein an estate in fee simple to himself, subject to the annuities, whereby there was a revocation in law of the will as to the four denominations. The heiressat-law having elected to take against the will :-Held, that neither the persons to whom estates were limited by the will in remainder in the Tempo estate, nor the residuary devisees in respect of the after-acquired estates, were entitled to compensation out of the life interest limited by the will to the heiress-nt-law in the Tempo estate. Tennant v. Tennant, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 516.

Semble, that the doctrine of election ought not to be applied to the case of revocation by a recovery merely. Ib.

How Person taking against Instrument to be compensated.]—The ancestor, by marriage arti-cles, agreed to settle lands to the use of himself and his intended wife, remainder to the issue of the marriage in the usual manner. He made a deed, not pursuant to the articles, and had a son and two daughters, and on the marriage of his son settled other lands, in consideration of this last marriage, in the usual manner; and levied a fine of the former lands to the use of himself in fee; and then made his will, and devised part of the former lands to his two daughters, and the rest of his real estate to trustees, to the use of his grandson for life, with usual remainders; and with direction out of the profits to educate the grandson; and to place out the rest of the profits to be paid to the grandson at twenty-one years of age; and if he did not attain that age, to be paid to his said daughters. The grandson was not bound by the deed which did not pursue the articles; but he must make his election when he eame of age; and if he chose to take lands, which ought to have been settled, the daughters (his aunts) were to be reprised out of the lands devised to him. Streatfield v. Streatfield, Forrest, 176.

By the will of S., A., his widow, took a life interest, and his six children the remainder in fee as tenants in common in his real estates, of the annual value of 8701. A., under the erroneous expectation of acquiring an absolute power of disposition, having levied a fine of her husband's estates, devised a portion of them, worth about 1351. per annum, to G., her grandson in fee; another portion of the like amount (together with an estate of her own at N., of the annual value of 1151.) for the benefit of the widow and children of W., her eldest son; and the residue, worth about 600l. per annum, to her daughter B. in fee. W. being entitled, under the will of S., as one of his children, to one-sixth, and as heir

-Held, that the widow and children of W. her estate to an extent not exceeding the amount electing to take under the will of S., and in opposition to that of A., and by that election frustrating, to the extent of 455L per annum, the disposition of the latter in favour of E., E. was entitled to the estate at N. in partial compensation. Gretton v. Hayward, 1 Swanst, 409.

Compensation in Proportion to the Losses. A testator was entitled to a moiety of two farms, T. and P., one-fourth of which belonged to L., and the remaining fourth to W. By his will be gave both farms to his wife for life, and after her death he gave T. to W. and E. in equal shares. with cross limitations between them, and P. to the plaintiffs. After the testator's death, L. conveyed his interest in both furns to himself for life, remainder to the testator's widow for life, remainder to the plaintiffs in fee, and died in the widow's lifetime. After the widow's death W. elected to take against the will :- Held, that one-fourth of T, belonged to W., another fourth to the plaintiffs, another fourth to E., subject to the estate and interest of W. in T., under the will, ought to be apportioned between the plaintiffs and E. in proportion to the value of that interest of the plaintiffs in P. and that interest of E, in T., of which they had been respectively deprived by W.'s election. Howells v. Jenkins, 1 De G. J. & S. 617; 32 L. J., Ch. 788; 9 L. T. 184: 11 W. R. 1050, Gift to A, for life, and after her decease to his claughters, Ann, Sarah, and Hannah, equally, or to the survivors of them; Ann alone survived A. Admitted, that Ann was entitled by survivorship to the whole fund. Hannah, by her will, pro-fessed to dispose of part of the fund:—Held, that Ann, who took benefits under Hannah's will, was bound to elect. Ann elected to take against the will, by which some other legatees were defeated :- Held, that they were entitled, in proportion to their defeated interests, to the benefits given to Aun, and which, by her electing to take against the will, were undisposed of. Att.-Gen. v. Fletcher, 5 L. J., Ch. 75.

Compensation by any Means Sufficient.] Where a testator, making provision for the different branches of his family, gives a fee simple estate to one, and a settled estate to another, imagining that he had power so to do, by his will, gave C. an annuity of larger value a tacit condition is implied to be annexed to the than her share under the settlement, for her devise of the fee-simple estate, that the devise thereof shall permit the settled estate to go according to the will; and if in that respect he should disappoint the will, what is devised to him shall go to the person so disappointed. Bor v. Bor. 3 Bro. P. C. 167.

Right not lost by Death. ]—A husband, entitled under a settlement to a life interest in cottages his death, purported to devise them to her for life, with remainder to A., who, without knowing of the settlement, sold his supposed reversionary interest to E. The testator's widow, who took other benefits under the will, subsequently sold the cottages to a purchaser without notice of the devise. On the widow's death, R. claimed compensation against her estate :- Held, that compensation for the loss he had sustained in the money, and invested it in the funds, but respect of their value at the widow's death out of treating it as her own she afterwards sold it out.

of her other benefits under the will. Rogers v. Jones, 3 Ch. D. 688; 24 W. R. 1039. And see S. C., 7 Ch. D. 345; 38 L. T. 17.

No Lien for Compensation on Estate taken. ]-A. B., an heir, elected to take against the will, and required the executors to complete a contract entered into by the testator for the purchase of a freehold estate, and it was conveyed to him, He, nevertheless, received great benefits under the will :-Held, that the parties disappointed by the election had no lien on the estate for the amount received; but that they were entitled to prove against A. B. s estate for the whole amount received by him under the will. Greenwood v. Penny, 12 Beav. 403.

Compensation as to Part. ]-Upon the marriage of a man with an infant ward of court, who was entitled jointly with her sister to real and personal estate, held by trustees in undivided moieties, he, with the sauction of the court, covenanted that upon the wife coming of age her real property should be settled upon himself and herself, and the children of the marriage, with an ultimate limitation in default of issue to the heirs of the wife; he also settled the personal property in the same manner, except that there was an ultimate limitation in default of issue to the next of kin of the wife. The marriage took effect, the wife attained twenty-one, and about a month after the marriage died without issue, and without executing a settlement of the real estate. leaving her sister, who was also an infant ward of court, her sole heiress and next of kin :- Held, that the surviving sister could not compel a conveyance to herself of her deceased sister's moiety of the real estate, without making compensation to the husband for his loss of that interest in the real estate which he would have taken under the settlement had it been executed by the wife, Savill v. Savill, 2 Coll. C. C. 721 : 11 Jur. 723, Wife's Equity-Real and Personal Estate.] Under a settlement made upon the marriage of M., his daughter C. became, upon his death, subject to the rights of her husband, tenant in tail in possession of a certain real estate, and absolutely entitled to a share of personalty. M., separate use, which she was required to accept in lieu of such share. C.'s husband was an insolvent, and his assignee refused to give up her husband's interest in the settled property :- Held, that as to the share of personalty, which was outstanding in the trustees, the court, electing on C.'s behalf to take under the will, could order it to be made over in accordance with the testator's directions, but that, as to the realty, the court could not to which his wife became absolutely entitled on affect the estate which had passed to the assignee, and that C. must make compensation to the amount of rents and profits withheld. Griggs v. Gibson, 35 L. J., Ch. 457; L. R. 1 Eq. 685; 14 W. R. 513.

A widow was absolutely entitled to legacies of 3,500%, of which her husband by his will professed to give to her and her children 2,500%, which he directed to be invested in the funds or the widow had elected to take the cottages real securities. He gave his widow other benefits against the will, and that A. was entitled to out of his own property. The widow received and applied it to her own use. A case of election by her election had a lien on the funds for what arose on the will, but it did not appear when she she had so received; but that she was not liable had elected :—Held, that the widow electing to to account for income received during the take under the will was responsible for 2,5001. only, and not for the stock purchased therewith.

Pulmer v. Wakefield, 3 Beav. 227.

A widow electing to take against a post-nuptial settlement of her future personal property Held, that her life interest in the funds which had come under the settlement was to be retained by the trustees for the benefit of the children. and that she must account for what she had received in respect of it. Anderson v. Abbott, 23 Beav. 457; 5 W. R. 381.

An heiress, a married woman, being put to her election between an estate in Scotland, of which an attempted devise failed for want of proper solemuities, and money given to her separate use, the marital rights of her husband in the descended estates were held to be unaffected. Brodie v. Barry, 2 V. & B. 127; 13 R. R. 37.

Fund in Court.]—Compensation claimed by the person disappointed by the devise of his interest in the property agreed to be settled in consideration of marriage, the settlement not having been made according to the terms of the agreement, refused; but a competent part of the fund in court ordered to be retained, and set apart to answer the eventual claim of the parties. Roper v. Burtholomew, 12 Price, 833.

Creditor. ]-A testator, reciting the amount of a debt he owed A., according to his own computation of it, directed such amount to be paid out of his real and personal estate, and bequeathed an ammity to A, for life out of his real and personal estate; such creditor might enjoy the annuity, and be at liberty to dispute the testator's calculation of the debt. Clarke v. Guise, 2 Ves. Sen. 617.

Dissolution of Marriage,]— By a post-nuptial settlement made before 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57, personal estate belonging to the husband, and other personal estate brought into settlement by the wife's father, were settled upon trusts for the benefit of the husband and wife and the children of the marriage; and by the same deed, in consideration of the premises, the hasband and wife assigned the wife's reversionary interest in other personalty upon trusts for the husband and wife, and the issue of the marriage by reference to the trusts previously declared. The marriage was afterwards dissolved by the Divorce Court, and subsequently the wife's reversionary interest fell The divorced wife having into possession. instituted a suit to set aside the settlement so far as it affected the reversionary interests :- Held, that she was bound to elect between the relief sought by the bill and the benefits given to her by the settlement. Derivative Interest-Next of Kin .-- A will, made in R.'s lifetime, affected to give to A. personalty which belonged to R., and it also gave legacies to R.'s children, and by a codicil, made after R.'s death, additional benefits were given to R.'s children :-Held, that R.'s right to the personalty having devolved on his children as his next of kin, they must elect between making satisfaction to A. out of their father's personalty, and abandoning all the benefits which they took as well under the will made in R.'s lifetime as by the codicil made after his death. Choper v. Cooper, 44 L. J., Ch. 6; L. R. 7 H. L. 53; 30 L. T. 409; 22 W. R. 713.

Next of kin (unlike creditors) are not merely interested in the balance in the hands of the administrator after sale of the intestate's effects and payment of his debts; they take a substantial proprietorship in every one of the intestate's chattels, the Statute of Distributions being in the nature of a will for all persons who die intestate. Therefore, for the purposes of election, the next of kin of an intestate who would have been put to his election are under the same obligation.

In estimating the amount of compensation to be paid by such persons, they are entitled to deduct from the value of their property so derived and so erroneously given away from them a ratable proportion of the debts, having regard to the whole of the intestate's assets. Ib.

No Compensation where Person elects to take under Instrument causing Election.]—The engrafted doctrine of compensation does not apply in the case of a person electing to take under the instrument which gives rise to the election. Wilson v. Townshend (Lord) (2 Ves. 693) discussed, and not followed. Chesham (Lord), In re, Curendish v. Davre, 55 L. J., Ch. 401; 31 Ch. D. 466; 54 L. T. 154; 34 W. R. 321. And see Carter v. Silber, 61 L. J., Ch. 401; [1892] 2 Ch. 278; 66 L. T. 473.— C. A.

- Bequest of Heirlooms in disregard of Settlement. - A testator, who died in 1882, by his will dated in 1878 gave chattels on trust for sale, for the benefit of his two younger sons, and the residue of the estate to his eldest son, C. The chattels so bequeathed were heirlooms settled, by a deed dated in 1877, upon trust to go and be held with a mansion-house, of which C. was tenant for life:—Held, that C., having elected to take under the will, was not bound to make any compensation out of his legacy to his younger brothers, that he had no interest in the chattels apart from the mansion-house which he could make over for their benefit, and that no case of election arose.
